CHINA BREAKS WITH JAPAN OVER DEMANDS

PRESSURE ON ALL SIDES FOR LABOR PEACE

HERE'S INSIDE STORY.

BY JOHN L. LOVETT.

The month of May began yesterday in Chicago with growing complications in the building labor field—complications that can be solved only by quick and energetic work by union leaders and employers alike. More than 33,000 men were idle because their unions had called a strike or their bosses had locked them out.

A total estimated at 150,000 others didn't pick up their dinner pails and start to work because the strike of the 33,000 had made them idle.

"There's Hope," They Say.

Tomorrow ten men representing the Carpenter Contractors' association and the Carpenters' District council will meet to try to bring this situation to an end. It is possible they will succeed. The ten men are dubious of the results, yet they say:

"There's hope while we're meeting."

The teamsters' union officials went to the two factions during the day and urged them to settle as soon as possible so that 4,000 teamsters might go back to work. Influential contractors are urging a speedy settlement and the rank and file of the carpenters are asking for work.

Another Lean Summer?

The time for starting the big contracts will have expired in a few weeks. If the strike continues that long there will be little work to do when it is ended. The brickmakers' strike of last summer kept the workmen from earning their usual summer wages. A lean summer was followed by a severe winter. What will another lean summer do?

There are 16,000 carpenters on strike, 6,000 millmen, 900 lathers, 9,000 painters, and 1,200 structural ironworkers. The employers have locked out 500 sheet metal workers.

In the offices of the United Charities and other organizations of similar character the heads are figuring closely to meet the daily demands for aid. Their funds are almost exhausted.

At a meeting of the Carpenters' District council last night the strike situation was discussed, but no proposals to submit to the contractors were considered.

Dates Three Years Back.

The beginning of the present trouble in the building trades in Chicago dates back three years. Contractors were harassed with petty jurisdictional strikes which delayed their building operations. The contractors were at that time signing agreements with the same unions that are making new agreements this year.

When the agreements had been signed the Building Construction Employers' association called in conference its executive committee and the conference committee of the Building Trades' council. Simon O'Donnell and his confrères, representing the unions, went into conference with men like John Griffiths, Oscar Reum, Charles W. Gindele, John P. O'Connor, E. M. Craig, and others.

To the union men the contractors reviewed the history of the existence of unions in the building trades in Chicago and pointed out to Mr. O'Donnell that if a policy of petty strikes, with none too honest business agents, continued there would be a contest between the contractors and builders which would end in the declaration of an open shop in Chicago similar to conditions which developed in New York.

The Uniform Agreement.

O'Donnell and his colleagues in the Building Trades council carried this message back to the Building Trades council of Chicago. The situation was discussed and out of this preliminary work three years ago developed what has been called this year the uniform agreement.

As a matter of fact this agreement is no different from the agreements under which several of the unions have been working for ten or fifteen years. The agreement provides that no strikes shall be called until the differences between the unions on the job or the contractor and the union is investigated by a joint arbitration board.

The men are to remain at work while the board is arriving at its findings. That clause takes away a weapon from the business agent inclined to be crooked. Any strikes that are called under the

L. R. McKinney Shatters Matrimonial Speed Records, According to Wife's Complaint in Court.

A new matrimonial speed record has been hung up by Lewis R. McKinney, head of the fire insurance firm of McKinney & Hess in the Insurance Exchange building.

On April 19—less than two weeks ago—Mr. McKinney, who is considerably older than the average Crown Point benedick, precipitately eloped to the Indiana Gretna Green with Mrs. Ella Wampler, a divorcée. Yesterday Mrs. Ella Wampler McKinney filed suit for separate maintenance.

There, in brief, is the story of Mr. McKinney's distinction. Mrs. McKinney expanded on it last night when a reporter visited her in a newly furnished and exceedingly lonely apartment at 4207 Michigan avenue.

"Some time ago he broke his arm," she said. "He was kept away from business for a while. April 19 he called on me.

"'I'm going to kill two birds with one stone,' he said, just like that. 'I'm going to take you to Crown Point and marry you while my arm keeps me away from the office.'

"I was lonely and I went with him. We came back to Chicago, married, and furnished this apartment. Most of the furniture, by the way, is mine. Four days later—that was the 23d—he left me."

NEARBY WHITES SEIZE HOUSE NEGRO BOUGHT

WARNING ON THE DOOR

In a second floor flat at 4800 Langley avenue Charles H. Davis, a negro postoffice employé, has his furniture all packed ready to move into the residence he recently contracted to purchase at 4506 Forrestville avenue. Last night a man who had been stationed in the flat to guard the furniture said Davis and his wife, Estelle J. Davis, who is a teacher in the Keith school at Dearborn and Twenty-fourth streets, had gone out of town to spend Sunday.

Over at 4506 Forrestville avenue Policeman J. H. Wilson of the Fiftieth street station stood guard on the outside while inside reposed John J. Fleming, whose six feet and some 200 pounds of brawn gave evidence he was capable of enforcing the task intrusted to him as outlined on a poster pasted in one of the front windows of the house.

Here Is Notice.

The notice reads:

> MR. JOHN J. FLEMING: You are hereby authorized to take possession as custodian of the property known as 4506 Forrestville avenue and hold possession thereof aginst all persons. And for that purpose the keys are delivered into your hands.
> CHARLES M. HAFT, personally, and for other persons on said street.

Meanwhile an indignation meeting of thoroughly outraged Forrestville avenue residents who object strenuously to becoming neighbors of Davis was being held at the residence of Wallace G. Clark, drainage trustee, at 4520 Forrestville avenue. Among those who reside in the block and who are said to have joined the fight to keep Davis from moving into the house are:

The property in question belonged to the Burdick estate, for which Attorney Harry C. Kinne is trustee. Of late it had been rented through the real estate firm of R. W. Wolfe & Co., with offices at 206 West Garfield boulevard, to William B. Denny for $57.50 a month. Mr. Denny's lease expired April 30, and he moved farther up the block.

On April 23 the property was sold by Mr. Kinne to Mrs. Josephine Mulcahy for a cash consideration of $5,000. Then a contract of sale was made to Davis by Mrs. Mulcahy through the real estate firm.

Take Charge of Things.

The news spread that a negro was to move in. There were many private protests and indignation meetings. Yesterday word spread that Davis was coming to take possession. A hurried consultation was held. Assistant Corporation Counsel Hoft and Mr. Clark took charge of things, and a delegation was sent to the Wolfe Real Estate agency.

When Davis arrived he faced the poster and Fleming's forbidding countenance through the window. Denny had turned the keys over to the neighbors when he left. Davis read the sign, expressed his mind to the watchman, and went away, saying he would go to court on Monday and obtain possession. Some one in the neighborhood feared, however, he intended to return with reinforcements and called up the police.

Police Come on the Run.

Policeman Kelliher came on the run and found a crowd of excited citizens gathered in front of the place. Later Patrolman Wilson relieved him on guard.

The residents asserted they had agreed to purchase the house jointly and it was the "community property." They denied the deed had been transferred to Davis, but stated he merely had made a contract to purchase the house on monthly payments of $35. The real estate agents, they said, had been reimbursed for the costs in the case, and they merely had taken over the contract. Mrs. Mulcahy, it was said, is employed in the Wolfe real estate office and she was merely a figurehead in the transaction.

"I knew that negroes had looked at the property, and I warned the residents of the neighborhood they had better purchase it themselves, as it had to be sold to settle the estate," said Mr. Kinne. "They laughed at me. I sold to Mrs. Mulcahy, and I understand she sold to Davis, but I had nothing to do with that transaction. I don't know who Mrs. Mulcahy is, but I heard the deed had been transferred to Davis."

Legislators O. K. Utilities Board Chosen by Mayor

Subcommittee Takes Rule from Council as Corporations Ask.

GAIN FOR HOME RULE

Advocates of home rule for Chicago's public utilities won their first victory yesterday, but it was a different kind of victory from what some of them expected.

Instead of giving home rule into the hands of the city council, a subcommittee of the legislative committee on public utilities voted to report a bill providing for a municipal utilities commission, to be appointed by the mayor.

The action of the subcommittee was considered a slap at the city council and the permanent charter commission, which had caused the introduction of the Frankhouser bill, providing for local control of utility corporations as the aldermen saw fit. Medill McCormick, chairman of the legislative committee, and his associates said a strong commission appointed by the mayor was the only proposal which would pass the legislature.

Sees Fight Ahead.

"We hope we may be able to present to the house a bill drawn under the terms of the Hamlin resolution," said Mr. McCormick. "If this bill, when presented, is unsatisfactory to the city council or to the mayor, the Chicago members of the utility committee will undoubtedly seek to have a bill introduced embodying council control, along with the bill indorsed by the Hamlin resolution.

"So far as I have been able to test the sentiment in the house we can pass the bill proposed by the Hamlin resolution. Our ability to pass the other is more doubtful, for it will be opposed by Cook county representatives outside of Chicago and numbers of downstate members."

Mayor Thompson's comment on the action of the subcommittee was cautious.

"The important thing as I see it is to have home rule," he said, "because of the impossibility for a state commission to give Chicago the attention it should have."

Companies Oppose Council.

Representatives of the traction, gas, and electric light interests appeared before the subcommittee at the Hotel La Salle and opposed the home rule proposal.

Four ballots were then taken by the legislators in executive session before an agreement was reached.

Finally a ballot was cast on a proposal introduced by Representative H. F. Hamlin for a bill making it mandatory on the city, if granted home rule, to place the authority in the hands of a mayor's commission. This was first defeated, 4 to 2, and later adopted by the same vote. Representatives John S. Burns and James C. McGloon voted against the proposal.

Folsom to Draft Bill.

Legal representatives of the city under the direction of Corporation Counsel Richard S. Folsom will begin work this week on the draft of the proposed bill. Briefly, the measure will give a public utilities commission appointed by the mayor the power to value all traction, gas, telephone, electric light, and power companies for the purpose of fixing rates and regulating them in the interests of the city.

The protest of the utility companies against the authority of the city council was the determining factor in causing the subcommittee to decide in favor of a commission appointed by the mayor.

Corporations Mold Decision.

This view was held by Gilbert E. Porter, representing the Insull gas and electric light interests, who said:

"The real question is not local pride, but how regulation of the right kind can be had. Certainly not by a council of seventy aldermen without practical training in public utilities or business experience. We are strongly opposed to granting this power to the city council."

George W. Miller, who said he represented the personal views of Leonard A. Busby, president of the Chicago Surface lines, said expressly that what the traction interests objected to was not home rule but a local commission appointed for a short term and too responsive to public clamor.

CZARNECKI TO GO, EDICT OF SCULLY

Election Board Shakeup Jolts All Judge Owens' Men from Jobs.

Election Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki finally has been caught in the whirligig of changing political control of the election machinery of Chicago. He is to be retired from office by County Judge Thomas F. Scully, the judge admitted yesterday. Along with Mr. Czarnecki will go Charles H. Kellermann, commissioner, and Charles H. Mitchell, attorney for the board.

That Commissioner Kellermann would not be retained was forecast some time ago, but the removal of Mr. Czarnecki comes as a surprise to his friends and to civic organizations that have been behind the effort to clean up registration books and throw around ballot boxes new safeguards.

Want a Republican.

Republican County Chairman David F. Matchett, appearing before the election board recently, declared that the Republican party has no representative on that board. As under the law not more than two members of the board should be credited to the same party and the other two commissioners are Democrats, the judge holds that he should pick some Republican for the third place who has his party behind him.

A "Jewish Republican of high standing" is to be named by the county judge to succeed Czarnecki. The identity of the new commissioner was not divulged by the judge.

Frank H. Rydzewski of the Eighth ward, a brewery agent, is slated to succeed Commissioner Kellermann, who sent his resignation to Judge Scully. Colin C. H. Fyffe is slated for attorney to succeed Mr. Mitchell.

Kellermann Takes His Medicine.

In tendering his resignation Commissioner Kellermann sent a letter to Judge Scully, in which he said:

"Although my term of office does not under the law expire until November, 1916, and no fault or criticism has been made by you as to my work and stand upon the election board during the time you have been county judge, yet, in view of the fact that you indicate a desire to replace me by some one else, and ask that I make it possible for you to do so by resignation, I hereby comply with your request and tender you my resignation."

With this reorganization all the commissioners and their chief assistants who served under former County Judge Owens will be out.

A protest against the naming of Mr. Rydzewski as commissioner is being framed by the anti-saloon league forces. In view of the fact that the wet and dry issue is to be voted on in Chicago next year dry leaders contend that the election board should not be dominated by representatives of wet interests.

DEALERS' BODY OPPOSES LIQUOR SALES UNTIL 3 A. M.

Manufacturers' Association Adopts Resolution Urging Repeal of Special Permits Ordinance.

A letter and resolution asking the repeal of the ordinance permitting the sale of liquors until 3 a. m. under special bar permits was sent yesterday to all aldermen by the Manufacturers and Dealers' Association of America. The resolution, which was adopted by the political action committee of the organization at a meeting at the Bismarck hotel earlier in the week, follows:

"Resolved, That this association is unalterably opposed to the issuance of permits for the sale of intoxicating liquors whereby the traffic in said liquors is continued after the hour established by the law which covers the operation of saloons in the city of Chicago."

Cooper Lyon, secretary of the association, asserted that the organization does not stand for prohibition, but believes the special bar permits should be done away with.

BAND OF AUTO ROBBERS RAIDS WEST SIDE STORES.

Hold Up Two Women and a Customer and Escape with Cash and Merchandise.

Three armed men made daring raids in an automobile last night on two little shops kept by women in the "back of the yards" district.

At 10:15 they visited Mrs. Amelia Hill's grocery store at 5358 South Wood street. Mrs. Hill and Thomas Howe, a customer, were driven into the back of the store at the point of the bandits' revolvers. Howe was relieved of a watch and a small amount of change and $5 was taken from the cash drawer.

Fifteen mintues later the men appeared at the dry goods store of Mrs. Katherine Witanowska at 4540 South Wood street. Mrs. Witanowska's clerk was forced under a counter and the robbers proceeded to load their machine with whatever merchandise they could find. Then the men took $40 from the cash register.

GERMANS IN SOUTH AFRICA ROUTED BY BRITISH HORSE.

Gen. McKenzie's Mounted Forces Inflict Stinging Defeat on Foe—Only Few of 800 Escape.

CAPE TOWN, via London, May 1.—The following official statement regarding the operations in South Africa was issued today:

"Gen. McKenzie's mounted forces, which were designated to cut off the Germans, who after the evacuation of Keetmanshop retreated northward along the railway, inflicted a serious defeat on them in the vicinity of Gibeon.

"The Union forces, by destroying the railway north of Gibeon, captured a whole railway train, a number of transport wagons, a great quantity of live stock, two field guns, several Maxims, and 200 prisoners.

"The remnant of the German force of 800 escaped, owing to the rough ground, which obstructed the movements of the cavalry."

WOMEN'S 'GYM' IN NEW C. A. A. HOME

Plan for $3,000,000 Building "25 Years in Advance" Informally Indorsed.

At a meeting of the Chicago Athletic association last night the proposal to erect a new building, which shall be twenty to twenty-five years in advance of anything in Chicago in the athletic club class, was formally approved. Approximately 95 per cent of the membership was represented either in person or by proxy.

The proposal, which is sponsored by Francis S. Peabody, president of the Chicago Athletic association, will involve an investment of between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000. It was described to the members by Mr. Peabody and Charles E. Fox, of Marshall & Fox, who drew up some plans for the building.

Formal Vote June 28.

The meeting was adjourned until June 28 when the members will vote formally on the proposal.

An effort will be made to lease the property at the corner of Madison street and Michigan avenue, on which the Willoughby building is located. That will give the club a piece of property 170x160 feet for the building.

One of the features of the proposed building is a complete woman's athletic club for the wives and daughters of the members. It is planned to have every comfort for the women that could be had in any hotel or separate club. The women will have their own gymnasium, swimming pool, lounging rooms, dining room, and even sleeping quarters.

Use Old Woodwork.

It is planned to save much of the woodwork in the present building, including the beams, panels, and ceilings, and put it in the new structure.

"When the present building was erected a little over twenty years ago," said Mr. Peabody, "it set the pace for athletic clubs. We want the club to continue to set the pace and to have a building that will be twenty to twenty-five years in advance of anything in its line."

BEISSWANGER PUT IN JAIL.

Fred Beisswanger, justice of the peace at Niles, was locked up at the detective bureau last night by Detective Sergts. Birmingham and Malone on a warrant charging him with operating a confidence game sworn out by William Johnson of 6042 Evans avenue. According to Sergt. Edward Birmingham, Beisswanger advertised for a partner in his glass business several weeks ago, and Johnson, who answered the advertisement, invested $300. He was given a position as salesman by Beisswanger and after working a week he was dismissed, he asserts, and Beisswanger refused to return the money.

ENDS PARLEY AND MAY CALL ON BIG POWERS

Refuses Flatly to Accept Group 5; Makes Other Concessions.

CRISIS IN FAR EAST.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

PEKING, May 2, 3 a. m.—China today defied Japan by refusing absolutely to comply with some of the mikado's demands.

While complying with some of the clauses in the Japanese ultimatum, China definitely refuses to accede to others, including the most important, embodied in what is known as group 5.

Negotiations were broken off abruptly by President Yuan Shi Kai after he had thoroughly discussed the entire situation with the members of his cabinet and his advisers.

May Appeal to Powers.

Should Japan present a stronger ultimatum or occupy further territory in China it is intimated that China probably would appeal to the four powers which are pledged to China's independence.

The blow came when China furnished to the Japanese minister, Eki Hioki, a list of further concessions which it is willing to grant, but after perusing the note and the list M. Hioki declared that it was far from complying with the twenty-four demands as presented by his government.

Final Note to Japan.

M. Hioki asked whether these were China's maximum concessions, and then whether he should cable his government. Lu Cheng-Hsiang, the Chinese foreign minister, replied that these were China's maximum concessions, and that the Japanese minister could so inform his government.

The conference terminated with neither the Japanese nor Chinese asking for another meeting.

As a counter blow to the Chinese note the Japanese minister declared the withdrawal of Japan's proposal to return to China Tsing-Tau, which was conditioned on China's deferring no longer the acceptance of Japan's demands.

Recites History of Case.

The Chinese note briefly recites the history of the negotiations. It denies Japan's charge that China has displayed procrastination and delayed the conferences by disputing various points, and also the charges of Chinese insincerity and unfriendliness. It further denies that China is conducting a newspaper campaign abroad.

These were the reasons the Japanese plenipotentiaries gave for presenting their latest list of twenty-four demands as a preliminary to an ultimatum.

The list of concessions is in the nature of counter proposals. China asks the right to participate in an international conference in which the altered status of Shantung will be rearranged; indemnity for the losses incurred in consequence of the Tsing-Tau campaign, and also restoration of its status as before the war.

Almost Meets Jap Demands.

China offers further concessions with respect to Manchuria, almost meeting the Japanese demands. China accedes to three of the four demands regarding Mongolia, namely, the opening of treaty ports, preference in railway loans, and the nonpledging of local taxes. The agricultural demand is rejected.

Respecting the Hanyehping company, China agrees that pending the eventual formation of a Chino-Japanese company the government cannot make the company state owned or borrow foreign capital for the repayment of the Japanese loan.

China Rejects Fifth Group.

China rejects the fifth group with the exception of the modified Fukienese demand, offering in this connection a separate note, intended to meet Japan's wishes, by pledging that no foreigners shall receive coastal concessions or contracts without Japan's consent.

Group five comprises seven articles relating to the employment by China of Japanese as advisers in political, financial, and military affairs; supervision of the Chinese police; the right of Japanese ownership of land; Japanese supervision over the manufacture or purchase by China of munitions of war; various railway and mining rights; and the right by the Japanese to propagate Buddhism in China.

M. Hioki made inquiry regarding the absence of railway concessions, to which the Chinese foreign minister replied that China's good faith was at stake, as it already had granted definite concessions to another power.

RAIN OF SHELLS FALLS DAILY ON SOISSONS RUINS

BY E. ALEXANDER POWELL.

ON THE AISNE, April 30.—[Delayed.]—The officer who acted as my guide and cicerone assures me I am the first civilian who has been permitted to visit Soissons since last September. Before we started I was told quite frankly that military authorities accepted no responsibility for consequences of my excursion, for, though Soissons is in possession of the French, it is under almost constant bombardment by Germans.

In order to get a setting of the picture clearly in your mind you must picture two parallel ranges of hills, separated by a wonderfully fertile valley perhaps three miles in width, down which meanders, with many twists and hairpins turns, the silver ribbon that is the river Aisne.

On its bank at a gentle bend in the river stands the quaint old town of Soissons, so hoary with antiquity that its earlier history is lost in the mist of tradition. Of its normal population of 15,000, only a few score remain, and these only because they have no other place to go.

Enemies on Two Ridges.

A sandstone ridge which rises abruptly from the south bank of the river directly opposite Soissons is held by the French, and from the shelter of its summit their batteries spit unceasing defiance at the Germans under Gen. von Heeringen, whose trenches line the heights on the other side of the river and immediately back of the town.

From dawn to dark and often throughout the night the screaming messengers of death crisscross above the red tiled roofs of Soissons and serve to make things interesting for the handful of inhabitants who remain. Every now and then German gunners, apparently for no reason save pure deviltry, drop a few shells into the middle of the town.

The ridge on the French side of the river is honeycombed with quarries, tunnels, and caverns, many of these subterranean chambers being as large and curiously formed as grottoes in the Mammoth cave of Kentucky. Being weatherproof as well as bombproof, the French have turned them to excellent account, utilizing them for barracks, ammunition depots, fire control stations, hospitals, and even stables. In fact, I can recall few stranger sights than that of a long line of helmeted horsemen, comprising a whole squadron of dragoons, disappearing into the mouth of one of these caverns like a gigantic snake crawling into its lair.

Reach Station Through Cave.

Leaving our cars three miles from the outskirts of Soissons, we pushed our way through dense undergrowth up a hillside until we came suddenly upon the yawning mouth of a tunnel, which I surmised passed completely under the summit of the ridge.

Groping our way through inky blackness for perhaps an eighth of a mile, we suddenly emerged into the blinding glare of sunlight and found ourselves in one of those secret observatories from which French artillerists keep an unceasing watch on the movements of the enemy and by means of telephone direct and control the fire of their own batteries with incredible accuracy.

This particular observatory was located in the mouth of the tunnel and hence was entirely safe from detection by German aviators, while its front had been so cleverly screened with branches and foliage that it would defy the keenest eye a thousand feet away.

Telephone Service Underground.

Pinned to the earthen walls were contour maps and fire control charts. Powerful telescopes mounted on tripods brought the German trenches on the heights across the river so close that had a soldier shown himself we could almost have seen the spike upon his helmet. A military telephonist with receivers clamped to his ears sat at a switchboard and pushed buttons or pulled out pegs just as telephone girls do in hotels on Fifth avenue.

An officer in a smart uniform of dark blue with the scarlet facings of the artillery service beckoned me to come forward and indicated a small opening in a screen of branches.

"Look through there," he said, "but please be extremely careful not to show yourself or to shake the branches. That hillside opposite us is dotted with enemy observatories just as this hillside is dotted with ours, and they are constantly searching this ridge with powerful glasses in hope of spotting us and shelling us out. Thus far they have not been able to locate us. We have had better luck however, for we have spotted two of their fire control stations and cleared them out."

Reach Town Through Trenches.

The officer in command at this point was anxious to give a demonstration of the accuracy with which his gunners could land on the German solar plexus until he learned that we were going into the town. Then he changed his mind.

"They've been quiet for several hours now," he said, "and if you are going across the river it's just as well not to stir them up. You probably will get a little excitement anyway, for they usually drop a few shells into town about sunset just before knocking off for dinner."

This was not exactly cheerful news, for it was then 4:30 p. m. Slipping through an opening in the screen of foliage which masked the observatory, we found ourselves at the beginning of the communication trench, which led diagonally down the hillside to the river. Down this we went, sometimes on hands and knees and always stooping, for we were now within full view of the German positions and to have shown our heads above the trenches would have brought an instant storm of shrapnel.

Scene of Desperate Fight.

Crossing the river, we still had before us a mile or more of cobble paved highway lined on either side by cottages, all of which showed signs of shell fire. Some had shattered roofs, and the plaster on the walls of others was pockmarked with bullets. Here fighting had been desperate and bloody.

It is not a cheerful business strolling through the shattered and deserted town. You feel as if you were in a cemetery. In the very heart of Soissons stands the huge bulk of the ancient cathedral, dating from the twelfth century, its massive tower rising skyward like a finger pointing toward heaven.

Repeated rappings at a door in the churchyard wall brought the curé, a white haired, kindly faced giant of a man. Under his guidance we entered the cathedral, or rather what remains of it.

Shells Burst Close Overhead.

While the curé was pointing out to us the ruined beauties of his celebrated windows something passed overhead with a shriek like a lost soul. A moment later came an explosion which made the walls of the cathedral tremble.

"Ah!" remarked the curé unconcernedly. "So they've begun again. I thought it was almost time. They always bombard the cathedral every afternoon between 5 and 6."

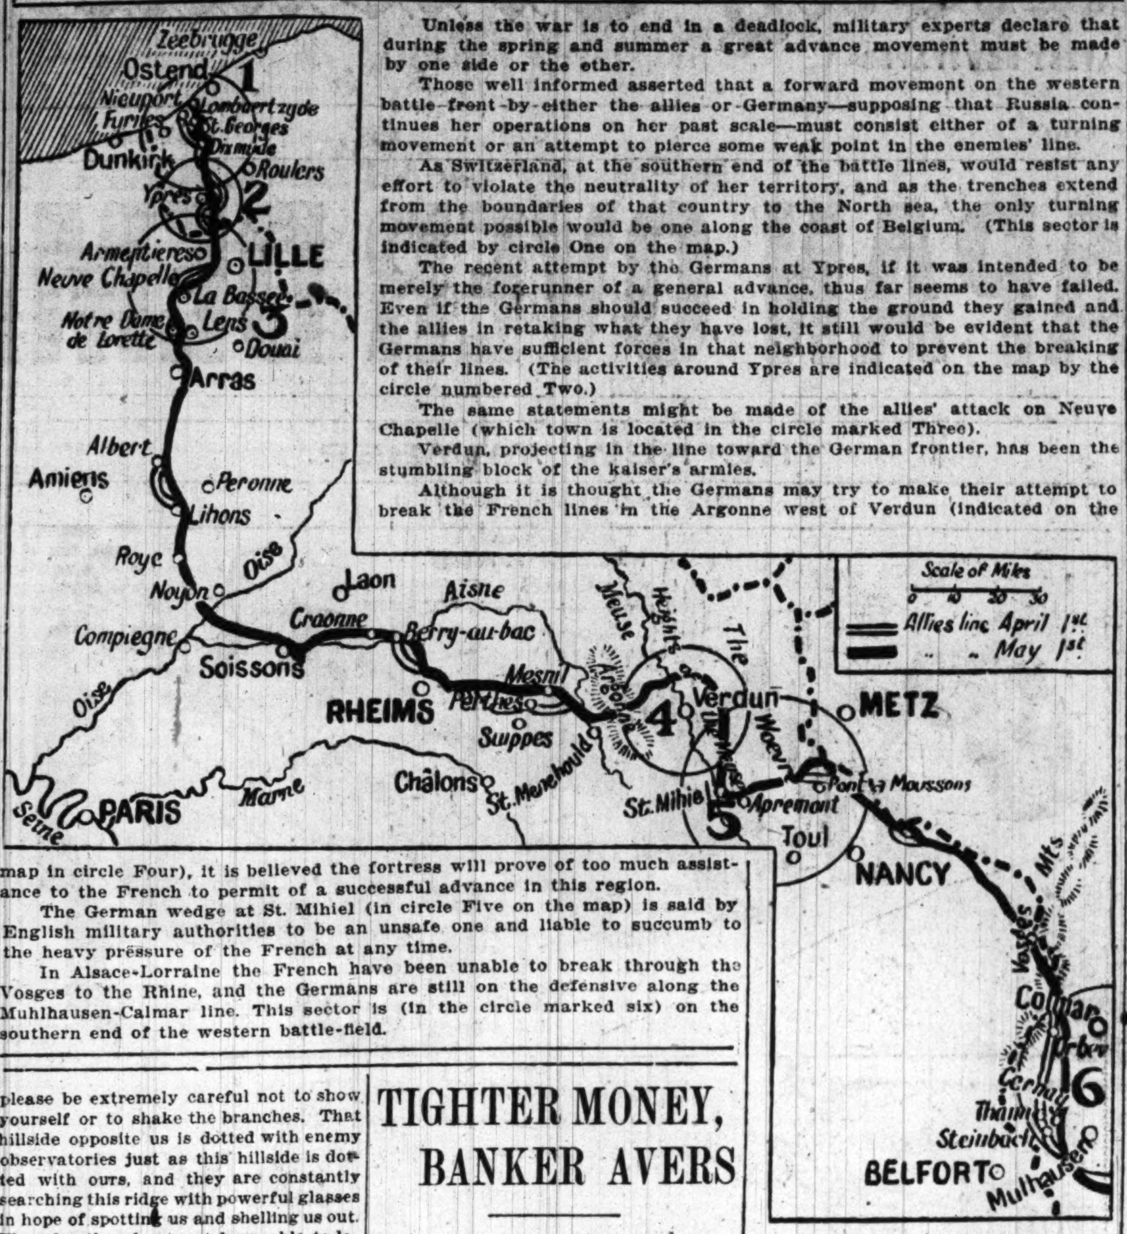
Europe's Alternative in the World War: Deadlock or a Huge Spring and Summer Advance of Fronts.



Unless the war is to end in a deadlock, military experts declare that during the spring and summer a great advance movement must be made by one side or the other.

Those well informed asserted that a forward movement on the western battle-front by either the allies or Germany—supposing that Russia continues her operations on her past scale—must consist either of a turning movement or an attempt to pierce some weak point in the enemies' line.

As Switzerland, at the southern end of the battle lines, would resist any effort to violate the neutrality of her territory, and as the trenches extend from the boundaries of that country to the North sea, the only turning movement possible would be one along the coast of Belgium. (This sector is indicated by circle One on the map.)

The recent attempt by the Germans at Ypres, if it was intended to be merely the forerunner of a general advance, thus far seems to have failed. Even if the Germans should succeed in holding the ground they gained and the allies in retaking what they have lost, it still would be evident that the Germans have sufficient forces in that neighborhood to prevent the breaking of their lines. (The activities around Ypres are indicated on the map by the circle numbered Two.)

The same statements might be made of the allies' attack on Neuve Chapelle (which town is located in the circle marked Three).

Verdun, projecting in the line toward the German frontier, has been the stumbling block of the kaiser's armies.

Although it is thought the Germans may try to make their attempt to break the French lines in the Argonne west of Verdun (indicated on the map in circle Four), it is believed the fortress will prove of too much assistance to the French to permit of a successful advance in this region.

The German wedge at St. Mihiel (in circle Five on the map) is said by English military authorities to be an unsafe one and liable to succumb to the heavy pressure of the French at any time.

In Alsace-Lorraine the French have been unable to break through the Vosges to the Rhine, and the Germans are still on the defensive along the Muhlhausen-Calmar line. This sector is (in the circle marked six) on the southern end of the western battle-field.

TIGHTER MONEY, BANKER AVERS

F. A. Vanderlip Calls Inflation of Credit Cushion Against Shock.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 1.—Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, New York, at today's session of the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, said that the United States has not yet felt the full financial effect of the European war.

He presided at the session, at which was discussed America's financial position as affected by the war.

Mr. Vanderlip said the inflation of note issue and the inflation of credit in the European countries at war has acted as a cushion against the shock. He thought the effect on the financial situation will eventually be felt more seriously than it is at present.

Talks on Future Finances.

The present easy money situation in the United States, according to T. W. Lamont, a member of the Morgan banking firm of New York, who followed Mr. Vanderlip, was not due to excessive inflation in Europe. Mr. Lamont spoke of the future of finance following the war.

"We shall see," he said, "the spectacle of the business men of all nations paying to one another their just debts. We shall see finance standing ready to develop new enterprises, to find money to help rebuild a broken and wreck strewn world."

At the morning session, at which the relations of the United States with Central and South America were discussed, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former colonial secretary to Germany, denied a statement made that Germany had protested against the right of the United States to ship arms to belligerents.

He said the complaint Germany made was regarding the inequality of treatment that his country is receiving in that foodstuffs are shut out of Germany, whereas there is a free transit of arms to Great Britain.

Not Many Immigrants.

Dr. Edwin S. Mead of the University of Pennsylvania did not expect a great inflow of immigrants after the war, as the able bodied men would be needed at home.

A. B. Leach, president of the Investment Bankers' association, said the net result of the war on this country's finances would be of substantial benefit.

The meeting closed tonight with a discussion of America's possible contribution to a constructive peace.

Speakers during the day and evening included August Schvan, former Swedish diplomat; Oscar S. Straus, former ambassador to Turkey; Morris Hillquit of New York, John Hays Hammond, and W. P. G. Harding.

A paper by G. Lowes Dickinson of Kings College, England, was read in which he suggested, among other things, that peace be established through the intervention of President Wilson.

PEACE CONGRESS TO SEND ENVOYS TO ALL NATIONS

Women Adjourn at The Hague After Making Demand War Cease Immediately.

THE HAGUE, May 1.—The International Congress of Women concluded its sessions here today. At the final meeting there was adopted a proposal to send delegations representing the congress to the president of the United States and to the heads of all the European powers for the purpose of demanding immediate cessation of the war.

Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, president of the Hungarian Woman Suffrage association, moved this resolution. She was confronted with the sharpest opposition, in furtherance of which many parliamentary technicalities were resorted to. This precipitated a clash, which threw the gathering into the greatest confusion.

Urges Women to Action.

"We are here not only to talk but to show the way to action," Mrs. Schwimmer said. "We wish to take positive steps to end this terrible war."

After the motion had been finally adopted another resolution, brought forward by Mrs. Schwimmer and Miss Julia Grace Wales of the University of Wisconsin, was approved. The resolution reads:

"The International Congress of Women resolves immediately to ask neutral countries to take steps to create a conference of neutrals, which without delay shall offer continuous mediation by inviting suggestions for a settlement from each of the belligerents and by submitting to all of them simultaneously reasonable proposals as a basis for peace."

Declare Wars Must Cease.

Mrs. Fannie Andrews of Boston read a manifesto covering all the points dealt with by the congress. This manifesto, which will be issued among women throughout the civilized world, declares that "this must be the last war."

A permanent international committee was formed. It will make recommendations for conferences at The Hague and arrange for a peace conference of women to be held at the same time and place as the peace conference at the end of the war.

The resolution referring to fortifications, which was passed yesterday, was modified today so that it now provides simply that the seas shall be open to all nations on equal terms.

"The congress has been a great success," said Miss Jane Addams of Chicago today in summing up the proceedings. "It has accomplished all it set out to do."

Miss Addams is considering the invitation of the British committee of the women's congress to come to London and address a mass meeting on the folly of warfare.

CLERGY ASSAILS WAR BABY TALK

UNWED MOTHERS FEW.

LONDON, May 1.—Bitter denunciation by the pulpit of the war baby agitation has temporarily stopped the agitation for immediate legislation for the relief of the unwed girls and women who are soon to become mothers. The leading church dignitaries and physicians take sharp exception to the figures of the suffragists that there are approximately 20,000 women and girls residing in the vicinity of the great military camps who soon are to have war babies.

The bishop of Chelmsford, in leading the agitation to head off pro-war baby legislation by parliament, declared tonight that while it had been claimed there were 2,000 cases in his particular diocese, careful investigation had revealed the fact that in reality there only are six.

Brands Agitation Hysterical.

"I believe that the public should cease its discussion of this subject until the facts are known," he said today. "Most of the statements so far made are by hysterical persons who are in no way familiar with the truth. It is a libel on the young people of the islands and an unfair reflection on the virtuous women of England that statements should be made that there are 20,000 unwed mothers in this country. We ought to be careful not to make sweeping or unfounded charges against those who so nobly have given themselves to the service of their country."

Ronald McNeil, M. P., who began the agitation, admitted tonight that there was a possibility that the number of prospective mothers had been exaggerated. The evidence is conflicting, he said, and he suggested that the wisest course will be to wait until information as to the actual facts is forthcoming.

Urges Child Bearing; Fined.

Arthur Busch-Mitchell of Somersetshire, one of the leading and wealthiest members of the British Eugenic society, today was fined $600 for issuing a circular which the court characterized as insulting. In it he said:

"At this time of national emergency, when men are hazarding their all on land and sea, no girl of independent means, gifted with sound health and strength should shirk the risks and responsibilities or the odium of producing one well conditioned child to the community."

The prosecutor declared that many young girls of highly respectable families had been sent copies. The court held the circular "most indecent" in imposing sentence.

BRITISH TROOPS MASK LAND FORTS IN DARDANELLES

Turks Put Up Fight of Desperation, but Are Forced Back of Guns; Allies' Loss Big.

LONDON, May 1.—British troops have isolated and masked the Turkish land forts guarding the Dardanelles from the west. On the Asiatic side French colonial troops are doing the same thing.

The Turks are fighting with the desperation of fanaticism and are inflicting staggering losses on the allies, but the latter are moving steadily, inexorably on.

The latest advices reaching London tonight say that Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton's expedition has thrown a line across the peninsula of Gallipoli from the Gulf of Saros to the town of Gallipoli; that the fire from the allied fleet has reduced the defenses of the town, which is now held by the British, and that his men also have strong footholds at Gaba Tepe, on Suvia bay, and at Cape Teke.

Aerial reconnaissances show the main body of the Turks, who have been massed at the upper end of the peninsula, have now retreated to Tsani and Pasarkios.

Turks Retire to Forts.

The principal Turkish forces that have been defending the Dardanelles are now in the various forts along the isthmus. It is expected it will be possible to drive them out, now that the attack can be delivered both from the land and from the sea.

The allied fleet has been bombarding the forts almost continually since last Tuesday, and some of them are reported in ruins.

Officials at the war office laugh at the official Turkish report, issued in Constantinople and sent from Berlin by wireless, in which it is claimed the British and French have been driven back to the coast. They say that the claims are entirely false and declare the situation could not be better from the British point of view.

Russians Also Gain Results.

Incidentally it becomes more and more evident every day that it is to be a race between the British and the French on the one hand and the Russians on the other for Constantinople.

There has been no effort to disguise the belief in both Paris and London that it will be far better from the standpoint of England and France if they rather than Russia are the conquerors of the Turkish capital.

DUNKIRK FACED BY DESTRUCTION BY GREAT GUNS

Germans, Holding Position Far Away, Rain Shells on City Used as British Base.

PARIS, May 1.—Dunkirk, France's most northerly fortified city, and the field base of the British army, is in danger of total destruction. German 17-inch guns, the latest and greatest product of the Krupp works, are being used at intervals to bombard the city from their positions, eighteen to twenty miles away.

Allied airmen are doing their best to locate and demolish these guns with bombs, but so far without success. Just how many of the Krupps are in use is known only to the French and British high army chieftains. But refugees who are arriving here on every train say they believe there are at least two. They throw great explosive shells, which wipe out all buildings near where they strike and leave simply great holes in the ground and piles of shapeless debris.

Nearly fifty of these shells have fallen on Dunkirk since the bombardment began.

Shells Fall on Forts.

The shells so far have fallen in various parts of the city, and rumors are afoot here that one at least has fallen on the outer forts, destroying part of them. More than thirty persons have been killed and half a hundred injured, according to the latest official information.

It is understood the civilian population is being hurried out of Dunkirk and vicinity. It is hoped that the new German guns can be put out of commission by the allied airmen, but the government believes it will be best to get the civilians away from the danger zone.

"The bombardment is a new proof that the Germans have not been able to pierce our lines," a statement by the ministry of war says, "nor have they obtained by it any appreciable result. They are striving to impress neutral opinion by these manifestations, without military efficacy.

"From the viewpoint of the development of the operations this bombardment is without importance; its effect is entirely localized to the destruction of a few houses and the killing of peaceable inhabitants of Dunkirk.

Claim Gains for French.

Distinct successes over the Germans in the forest of Lepetre, where heavy fighting has been intermittent since last November, was reported by the war office tonight. It states that, as a result of a series of charges, following good work by the sappers, several lines of trenches have been captured by the French. The fighting at this point continues.

Serious fighting also is reported from the Champagne region, on the heights of the Meuse, and in the Vosges. The Germans have been repulsed at every point where they have essayed an offensive, it is stated.

Big Guns Are Located?

LONDON, May 1.—The admiralty office announces that the position of the German guns attacking Dunkirk having been verified by air craft reconnaissance, it was attacked last evening, twelve small and two large bombs being dropped.

Reconnaissance also was made to Ostend, which was cleared of all important craft. A taube aeroplane appeared, but kept 10,000 feet up and three miles off. A naval aeroplane chased the taube, whereupon the latter retired.

The British public has been greatly impressed by the German bombardment of Dunkirk.

The Times says the incident is of small importance from a military standpoint, but that it brings the war closer to England's shores than at any earlier period of the struggle.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, May 1.—The German general headquarters staff today gave out the following statement:

"The battle reported yesterday on the eastern bank of the Ypres canal ended unsuccessfully for the enemy, who lost heavily.

"To the east of the canal and north of Ypres the enemy made several unsuccessful attacks.

"The fort of Dunkirk again was bombarded by our artillery fire.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle only infantry engagements took place in the vicinity of Ailly and Apremont. All the French attacks failed with very heavy losses.

"On April 29 we shelled Reims as a reprisal for the bombardment of places behind our fighting line. As the enemy knows the meaning of this full well, it will be easy for him to avoid the necessity of our shelling Reims."

FIRE OUSTS BOYS; BIG HOMES OPEN

Old Highland Hall School Girls Shelter Cadets of Burned School.

Girls, who, fifteen years ago, scrambled downstairs in night gowns with arms full of rats, talcum, bustles, switches, and other boudoir appointments before the flames which leveled the old Highland Hall for Young Women, last night threw open their homes to the boys of Northwestern Military academy who were thrown out of shelter by the fire that during the day destroyed West hall, the principal dormitory.

Most of the students of the fire of 1890 are married and are living in Highland Park. Their dormitories, their sororities, their Welsh rarebit parties, and their letters from the boys all went into the foundations of West hall when it was built on the ashes of old Highland hall.

"It's something like taking old memories back to heart to bring these boys home," said one matron, who struggled through Horace and Livy to a married career. "Right on that site stood our old hall that burned that night and sent us poor kids running and shivering over the lawn like a flock of dryads, and nothing more than nightgowns to cover us either."

Loss of $75,000.

The destruction of West hall involves a loss of approximately $75,000. The fire was discovered at noon by James Duffy, a real estate man who gave the alarm and brought the 100 students running from their classrooms. A bucket brigade was formed at once and calls were sent in for the Lake Forest and Highland Park fire departments, but these were slow in arriving and owing to trouble with the water they were barely able to keep the mess hall from catching after the dormitory was given up as a total loss.

Col. R. P. Davidson, commandant of the school, was undecided whether to rebuild the hall or not.

Three wagon loads of camp equipment were requisitioned from Fort Sheridan, and today the 100 boys will go into camp at the school's preserve on Lake Geneva. Many of the boys preferred tents to the hospitality of Highland Park homes and pitched their canvases at night on the campus.

Valued Heirlooms Gone.

Col. Davidson said valuable records and relics which had belonged to his father, the founder of the school, had been destroyed.

When the fire alarm was turned in the boys rushed into the dormitory to save their personal effects. Trunks, swords, clothing, mandolins, pennants, and all sorts of college dunnage were thrown from the windows, but Col. Davidson finally ordered the boys out, as the building was flaming dangerously, and less than half of them were able to save any part of their effects. L. C. Robinson of Hampton, Ia., searching in the ruins found three checks for a total of $50 which had come for him in the morning mail that had not been distributed.

RUSSIAN STEAMER SUNK BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE.

Svorono, Bound for Archangel, Torpedoed Off West Coast of Ireland, but Crew Escapes.

LONDON, May 1.—The Russian 2,000 ton steamer Svorono, bearing Welsh coal to Archangel, a Russian port on the White sea, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine, believed to be the U-23, at noon on Friday near the Blasket islands, on the west coast of Ireland.

The Svorono's crew of twenty-four men, mostly Russians, barely had time to take to the boats when the vessel sank.

All were rescued by a patrol boat.

British Steamer Sunk.

LONDON, May 1.—The British steamer Edale, from the River Plate, South America, for English ports, was sunk by a submarine today off the Scilly islands. All of the crew were saved.

AUSTRIA MASSES BIG ARMY ON THE BORDERS OF ITALY.

Three Hundred Thousand Bavarians in Trentino—Premier Confers with Chief of Military.

ROME, May 1.—Three hundred thousand Bavarians are massed in Trentino and 500,000 Austrians are stationed along the Italian border, says a special dispatch to the Messagero from the border.

In Pola a hurried inspection revealed the existence of fortifications which have recently been built. Extensive preparations have been made to repulse an invading army.

Great significance is placed upon a conference yesterday between Premier Salandra and other cabinet members, at which Gen. Cadorna, chief of staff, was present. This, attached to the news that the Italian ambassador to Vienna is not coming to Rome to confer with the minister of foreign affairs, is taken in official circles that Italy is closer than ever on the verge of war.

Warned to Leave Italy.

GENEVA, May 1.—According to the Tribune, the Austrian government has instructed the Austrian ambassador at Rome to warn all Austro-Hungarian subjects to leave Italy before May 6.

GERMAN MUNITION DEPOT WRECKED BY FOUR AIRMEN.

Nineteen Men Reported to Have Been Killed in Attack—Four Other Towns Are Raided.

LONDON, May 1.—A Central News dispatch from Lausanne says refugees from St. Quentin report that four British aviators destroyed a German ammunition depot and killed nineteen men.

A Berlin wireless message picked up by the war office says that allied aviators have dropped bombs on Hallingen, Muelheim, Loerback, and Tuellinden.

TORPEDOES FOR THE LUSITANIA?

Friends Warn Passengers Not to Sail; British Take Over Cameronia.

New York, May 1.—[Special.]—The Cunard liner Lusitania, scheduled to sail for Liverpool at 10 o'clock this morning, did not cast off before 12:20 this afternoon, and when it did it had aboard the 200 passengers of the Anchor Line steamship Cameronia, which had been booked to sail for Glasgow at noon.

The suspense preceding the sailing of the Lusitania was heightened by the delivery of twenty or more telegrams to prominent passengers, signed by names unknown to any of the recipients, warning them not to trust themselves to the big Cunarder, since it was certainly doomed to be torpedoed.

The shift of the Cameronia's passengers to the Cunarder was explained by a cablegram received by the officers of the Anchor line at 11 o'clock just an hour before the vessel was due to leave for Glasgow. The message said:

"Cancel sailing Cameronia. Requisitioned by government."

Washington Is Worried.

Washington, D. C., May 1.—[Special.]—That the administration views with alarm the consequences of the German advertisement in a number of American papers this morning, warning citizens of this country not to go within the proclaimed European naval war zone on any merchant vessel belonging to the allies, was quite apparent today.

What is feared more than anything else at the present time is the possibility that the Germans may sink a liner with several hundred Americans, including women and children, aboard. How far public opinion could be controlled in such an event is something about which the officials do not care to think right now.

GERMAN FORCES CONTINUE DRIVE IN NORTH RUSSIA

BERLIN, May 1.—The German war office today issued the following statement:

"A battle near Szawle ended in our favor. The Russians, after suffering heavy losses, retreated after setting fire to Szawle. They went in the direction of Mitau, capital of the Russian province of Courland. They are being pursued, and we have taken 1,000 prisoners, ten machine guns, and a large quantity of baggage and ammunition wagons and much ammunition.

"In Russian Poland attacks of the enemy at and southwest of Kalwarya, twenty-five miles northeast of Suwalki, were repulsed. The Russians southwest of Augustowo succeeded in attacking a German advance company by night and inflicted much damage on it. To the east of Plock and on the southern bank of the Pilica river weak Russian attacks were beaten off."

Russian Communications Periled.

Local military experts point out that Szawle, where the fighting is proceeding, is east of the railway line, between Kovno and Vilna, two points which are indispensable to the protection of the Vistula and Warsaw. Therefore the Russian commander faces the possibility of the cutting of his line of communications.

[There is a town called Shavli in the center of the Russian province of Kovno on the railroad between Libau and Duenaburg. Shavli is about sixty miles from the frontier of East Prussia and about eighty miles from Memel. The spelling Szawle probably is the German rendering of Shavli.]

Russian Official Statement.

PETROGRAD, May 1.—The official statement issued today by the Russian war department said:

"On the left bank of the Niemen river in Poland the advance of our troops continues successfully. On the Ossowetz front the Germans in the evening of April 29 made two attacks on our positions at Sosnai, but were repulsed with great losses. On the following day the enemy made fresh attacks on our troops between the rivers Pissa and Skwa, which also were repulsed.

"In the Carpathians the Austrians on the night of April 29 developed an offensive in the region of Polen and in the direction of Uzsok pass. They were beaten back with heavy losses.

"In the direction of Stry yesterday we carried two hills to the south of Koziowka and Zolowetzko. In this affair we took more than 1,000 prisoners and several machine guns. Our offensive continues. In the direction of Wyszkow we successfully repulsed German attacks."

TURKISH AGENT SHAMES JOKERS

SHOWS HIMSELF A WIT.

San Francisco, Cal., May 1.—[Special.]—There is much discussion here today as the result of a verbal fencing bout between Vahan Cardashian, the Turkish adjutant high commissioner to the Panama-Pacific exposition, and William Baity Lamar of the national commission and Mayor James Rolph Jr. of this city. It is a question whether the censure of the Lamar-Rolph taste in the premises or the appreciation of the verbal skillfulness of the Ottoman commissioner is uppermost in the discussion.

There is expressed the opinion that Messrs. Lamar and Rolph felt at the start that they were to have a bit of sport with a man who did not seize the drift of their remarks; evidently they were ignorant of the fact that the Ottoman commissioner is a Harvard graduate among his other qualifications.

Jokes Draw Witty Rebuke.

The passage at arms came at the dedicatory exercises today of the Turkish building. Mr. Lamar, speaking as the representative of the United States government, was the first to draw the fire of the Turkish commissioner. In the course of his welcome to a friendly nation Lamar alluded to the "terrible Turk," the "unspeakable Turk," and the "sick man of Europe."

Cardashian arose and, mentioning the terms used by Lamar, replied:

"The major portion of the troubles of Turkey and her backward place as a nation are due to the efforts of the Christian powers of Europe to divide up for themselves the sick man, who refuses to be divided. I have been one of the keenest critics of the faults and abnormalities of Turkish government, but I have been just as keenly disappointed in the humanity and the morality of the Christian nations as I have been in the want of intelligence of the ruling powers of Turkey."

Turk Also Outwits Mayor.

Mayor Rolph, after some wheezes on Thanksgiving turkey "talking Turkey," joked about marriage customs in the Ottoman empire. He received from Cardashian the facer of them all.

"The mayor made a very good speech," rejoined the Turkish representative. "I had thought of asking for a copy to send to Constantinople, but on second thought it might result in his being made mayor of Constantinople. And then Mrs. Rolph would suffer."

Frees Man Who Threatened Envoy.

Washington, D. C., May 1.—The department of justice today announced the pardon, at German Ambassador von Bernstorff's request, of Edwin R. Scott, an English resident of Tacoma, who, convicted of writing threatening letters to the ambassador, was sentenced to prison for six months, expiring June 15, 1915.

OFFER MEASURE FOR REFORMS IN ELECTION LAWS

Bill to Create New System in Illinois May Reach State Legislature Soon.

Springfield, Ill., May 1.—A comprehensive election law, designed to supersede practically all the numerous acts now embodied in the statutes, is in course of preparation and probably will be ready to lay before the general assembly next week.

The new bill is, generally speaking, a codification of the present election laws. As few changes as possible were made in the substantive provisions of the present election laws by its drafters. The election laws are scattered through numerous independent enactments passed at different times. Some of the latter laws conflict with the earlier, causing much confusion.

The attempt has been made to bring together the present laws under one act. The tentative bill has been classified according to the subject matter, and all the election laws relating to each particular subject have been covered into the subject dealt with under that head.

Classifications of Law.

Roughly, the classification made is as follows:

1. Time of holding elections and primaries.
2. Tenure of all offices (with a few exceptions), including state, judicial, district, county, town, and road district, city and village.
3. Resignations, vacancies, special elections, and special primaries.
4. Notice of elections and primaries.
5. Election precincts and places of holding elections and primaries.
6. Officers of elections and primaries.
7. Nominations of candidates (a) by primaries, (b) by convention, caucus, meeting, or by petition.
8. Ballot boxes, booths, and supplies.
9. Ballots, stationery, and instructions.
10. Qualifications of voters.

Time of Elections Changed.

The essential changes made by the tentative draft are found in articles 1 and 2, relating to the time of holding elections and the tenure of public officers, respectively. The idea was to make as few elections as possible. This, of course, was a difficult task. Tentatively the measure has been worked out in the following way:

A general state and county election must be held in November in the even numbered years. At this election all the officers who are required to be elected in November will be elected. No additional officers are required to be elected at this election.

A municipal election must be held in the spring in the odd numbered years, the date not yet being fixed. No municipal election will be held in the even numbered years.

The city and village and the town election will be held on the same day, and whenever practicable at the same polling places by the same judges and clerks.

The judicial election must be held in June.

An election for county commissioners must be held in November of each year.

WOUNDED PRIEST SAVED BY NURSE

Palm Springs, Cal., May 1.—Peter Glennon, a young ranch hand, was killed and the Rev. Paul Reinfels, a Catholic priest from Paloma, Ill., was wounded in the right forearm in a battle last night at Chino canyon, a gulch frequented by health seekers, five miles from here in the Riverside county desert.

Glennon shot Father Reinfels in an effort to kill both him and Clara Sherrer, a nurse attending the priest, who has been ill of pneumonia; but whether the young man received his own death wound from a shot fired by the priest or was slain in a struggle with Miss Sherrer was the subject of an investigation by the sheriff, who remained over tonight.

Glennon is said to have been in love with the girl, and last night, according to accounts given by the priest and the young woman, he made his way five miles from the ranch where he was employed to the Chino camp and announced that he intended to kill both the clergyman and Miss Sherrer. He thereupon opened fire, wounding the priest.

Miss Sherrer grappled with the assailant. As she and the man fought Father Reinfels drew his own revolver and fired one shot. Glennon stumbled and fell into a small spring near the tent. Miss Sherrer asserted that still another shot was fired and that this came from Glennon's own revolver, which was discharged during her battle with him.

RAIL WAGE WAR TO BE RENEWED, UNION MEN SAY

Employes' Heads Come Out Strong in Denunciation of Federal Award.

Predictions were made on all sides yesterday that the wage demands of the engineers and firemen on the western railroads will be reopened next May with renewed vigor by the employés' brotherhoods.

New estimates were issued from the unions' headquarters in the Great Northern hotel asserting that the wage increases allowed by the federal arbitration board, which filed its report Friday, would be far less than originally figured, the engineers receiving but a little more than $300,000 and the firemen about $500,000 more annually.

The chairmen from the separate roads involved in the controversy were called to Chicago yesterday by Warren S. Stone and W. S. Carter, presidents of the two brotherhoods, for a discussion of the terms of the award and a consideration of plans for the future. It was announced, however, that no strike vote was planned and that the men would go back to work for the next year under the provisions of the Newlands act. Whatever action that will be taken in the meeting today will relate to the program of the next few months.

Carter Defends Action on Nagel.

W. C. Carter, president of the firemen's brotherhood, also took a slap at the critics who charged his colleagues with unsportsmanlike conduct in waiting until the last week of the arbitration proceedings to enter a protest against Charles Nagel, one of the neutral arbiters, who voted against the demands of the employés throughout the proceedings.

"We did not find out," said President Carter, "that Mr. Nagel was in any way connected with the railroads involved in the arbitration proceedings until the time of the protest. When he was appointed it never occurred to us to question his attitude or his affiliations with transportation lines. We never dreamed that he had any connection with them.

"As we understand the stand taken by the board of mediation and conciliation at Washington close identity with great railway financial interests makes a person desirable as a neutral arbitrator in wage disputes between railroads and their employés. With this we disagree. We hold that it would be just as reasonable to select Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, as a neutral in this arbitration as it was to select Mr. Nagel. Both are probably intensely honest and each is controlled by what the Socialists call 'class consciousness.'"

As a proof of the unions' assertions that they knew nothing of Mr. Nagel's affiliations with the Busch estate of St. Louis, which included railway stocks, or his directorship in a Milwaukee insurance company, also interested in many railroad securities, Warren S. Stone, president of the engineers, gave out a telegram he received from an investigator who was sent to St. Louis last Sunday in which the brotherhoods' leaders were first notified of Mr. Nagel's business relations. The telegram follows:

"You are right. He has been trustee of Busch estate, which owned all kinds of railroad stocks and bonds. He was also attorney for Waters-Pierce Oil company, subsidiary of Standard Oil company. sheriff and organized company of seventy men and armed them with riot guns. Many arrests, but no casualties as far as can learn."

Calls It Blow to Arbitration.

"Arbitration as a means of settling disputes between capital and labor has received one of the greatest blows in its history," said Mr. Stone. "The principles of fair arbitration were good, but this wasn't arbitration. However, we're going to accept the award. But somebody is going to answer to these 65,000 men for the appointment of Nagel as one of the neutral arbitrators. We're going to know who is responsible for his selection. If it was the board of mediation and conciliation, well and good. If it was President Wilson, well and good; but we're going to know.

Blames It on Hard Cider.

H. J. Hicks of 1339 North Dearborn street, a salesman, who had taken off his shoes, coat, and hat, and who was poised on the railing of the North Clark street bridge, when he was arrested Friday night, was discharged yesterday by Judge Martin. He said he had taken a few drinks of hard cider.

GORGAS OPENS AN OLD SORE; MALARIA REMARKS STARTLE.

Known There Was Friction Over Isthmus Sanitary Conditions, but Was Thought Wound Healed.

Washington, D. C., May 1.—[Special.]—Much surprise was expressed here today at the remarks attributed to Maj. Gen. Gorgas at St. Louis yesterday, with reference to the difficulties with which he conducted the fight against malaria in the Panama canal zone.

While Gen. Gorgas mentioned no names, it was felt certain he referred to Gov. Goethals in speaking of the chairman of the canal commission, who hampered the sanitary forces on the isthmus.

That Gen. Gorgas has long felt that Goethals did not manifest a due appreciation of the work of the sanitary forces in the canal zone was no surprise here, but it was not expected that Gen. Gorgas would make public reference to the differences of opinion that existed between him and his chief.

BILL TO CONTROL PRIVATE BANKS MAY BE DROPPED

Thon Measure in Danger of Being Buried in Committee of the Legislature.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., May 1.—[Special.]—The private banks bill is once again bumping against the rocks. It will have one last chance to make its escape from the house committee on banks and banking next Tuesday. It may get out and it may not, with the chances that the same old legislative story will remain to be told when the session adjourns—that the private banks bill was killed.

Representative Henry A. Shephard of Jerseyville is chairman of the house committee on banks and banking. Never has he been committed to a policy of state regulation of private banks. He is a banker himself, but not a private banker.

Provisions of Thon Bill.

The bill that is being pushed in the house has been drawn by Representative William G. Thon of the Oak Park district. He had hoped to get it out of committee last week but failed. The Thon bill provides:

That every private bank must place in a conspicuous place over the entrance of its place of business a sign bearing the words "Private bank" with a similar sign displayed conspicuously within its banking room.

Each and every state bank shall be subject to inspection by the auditor of public accounts.

The auditor may require and private banks shall furnish, a report of the resources and liabilities, before the commencement of business on any given day, similar in character to the report now required from state banks.

The auditor is required to make such demand at least once every six months.

The auditor is required to make an examination at least once each year of the affairs of all private banks in the state.

The Thon bill carries a referendum clause and must be adopted by a vote of the people of the state.

Figures Offered by Thon.

The Thon bill is recognized as the most lenient measure which has been presented affecting the private bank business and is not as drastic as those which have been murdered in past sessions through the influence of the private banks lobby.

Figures, brought down to date by Representative Thon, concerning the private banking industry in Illinois are intensely interesting, as follows:

State Banks Keep Going.

The two state banks which failed were located in Chicago and were the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank and the Ashland-Twelfth State bank. Both of these banks are now in the hands of receivers.

When the La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank closed in Chicago two private and two state banks in the downstate territory also were forced to close up. The two state banks were the Farmers' State Bank of Bethalto, Bethalto, Ill., and the State Bank of Marine, Marine, Ill. The two private banks were the People's Bank of East Alton, Ill., and the Bank of Smithboro, Smithboro, Ill.

The two state banks immediately reopened and are still doing business, while the two private banks failed. Up to date the depositors of the two private banks have not received a cent.

MRS. HELEN ADELAIDE GOLDSMITH

MRS. GOLDSMITH SLATED FOR JOB OF MRS. MEDER

Leader of Women in Campaign Reported Chosen for Welfare Bureau.

The department of public welfare and Mrs. Leonora Z. Meder are soon to separate. Of that Mrs. Meder is so sure that she is putting her official house in order and preparing to return to the practice of law.

Just who Mrs. Meder's successor is to be the Thompson patronage bureau has not announced, but there seem to be three good indications that Mrs. Frank P. Goldsmith of 5603 Winthrop avenue will be the new head of the bureau.

Aided Mayor's Campaign.

Mrs. Goldsmith, in the first place, did valuable work for Thompson in the campaign as managing director of the Thompson Business Women's club. That work would give her a stronger claim to the job than that of the 200 other women who have avowed their willingness to succeed Mrs. Meder.

Then again it is said that Mrs. Meder was visited a few days ago by a woman who introduced herself as "Mrs. Goldsmith, who's going to take your place." Mrs. Meder was requested, according to the story, to initiate her visitor into the routine of her job, and did so.

Protest to Thompson.

Mrs. Meder's friends formed a delegation and visited Mayor Thompson. He would not promise to reappoint Mrs. Meder, and finally admitted he had picked another woman as head of the bureau. Finally questions drew the reply, it is said:

"Well, I'm not going to mention any names, but the new head of the bureau of public welfare will be the woman who was my personal representative at Esther Falkenstein's funeral."

A reporter was interested enough to investigate. He learned Mrs. Goldsmith was the mayor's representative at Mrs. Falkenstein's funeral, which is the third and best reason for conceding the job to her.

NEGRO AGAIN MOVIE CRITIC.

Merit Body Reinstates A. J. Bowling, Dismissed from Film Censors as "Unfit."

The civil service commission yesterday reinstated Alonzo J. Bowling, negro, as a member of the moving picture censorship board. He was first certified March 13 of this year and then discharged April 12 for "temperamental unfitness." State Senator Harding, Ald. De Priest, and the Rev. A. J. Carey urged his reappointment.

GOTHAM PARADE SEES SURPRISE

BIG TRAFFIC TANGLE.

New York, May 1.—[Special.]—Suffrage and socialism were hopelessly mixed at the big parade up Fifth avenue this afternoon, but the bystanders might have been pardoned their confusion when they saw red flags borne by pedestrians and yellow ones waving from automobiles approach side by side.

"It will only give the antis one more handle," said one woman angrily but the socialists seemed more than pleased at the coincidence and waved their red flags eagerly at the women. "We're for you" cried the Socialist pioneers, a group of little workers between seven and twelve years old who trudged along beside the automobiles.

Great Confusion of Traffic.

Both parties joined in being angry with the police department.

"They promised to keep the traffic clear," said a suffragist, "and now look at this."

Added to the general confusion of two parades up the avenue at the same time, ordinary traffic was proceeding as usual, so at the suffrage headquarters, 303 Fifth avenue, there was a great whirlpool of vehicles and pedestrians vainly trying to cross the street.

Crowds Line the Streets.

A few speeches were made before starting the suffrage parade, a gay bugle call and the parade was off, every one waving flags. Crowds lined the pavements three deep and with never an expression of disapproval or even a laugh.

At the Empire state headquarters, 303 Fifth avenue, a band of women armed with melting pots rushed into the street and the passing automobiles stopped just long enough to allow their occupants to tear off jewelry and drop it in.

Once at Fifty-ninth street the parade separated. The main part of it kept right on to the hall in Central park, where a meeting was held.

The labor section of the parade, led by Miss Lavinia Dock, started at Rutgers square and bore suffrage banners in eight different languages.

WIDOW OF TITANIC VICTIM WEDS DANISH BUSINESS MAN

Washington, D. C., May 1.—[Special.]—The marriage this afternoon of Mrs. Clarence Moore, widow of one of the Titanic victims, and Axel Christian Preben Wichfelt, a nephew of the Danish minister to the United States, created a furore in Washington society. The wedding was so sudden that even the most intimate friends of the bride did not know of her intention. Mrs. Wichfelt is the daughter of the late Edwin C. Swift of Boston.

The Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, officiated. Constantin Brun, Danish minister at Washington, attended the bridegroom.

Three of the young children of Mrs. Wichfelt, Jasper, Clarence, and Lloyd, were present, as was Frances Moore, daughter of the bride's late husband.

Society folk scarcely had met Mr. Wichfelt until Mrs. Moore gave a dinner and dance a week or two ago and presented him to her friends. Mr. Wichfelt is said to be a wealthy Danish business man, whose affairs have been in New York for several years.

REAL ESTATE MAN SUICIDE.

H. L. Haydel of St. Louis. President of Company, Kills Self as Result of Worry.

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—H. L. Haydel, president of a real estate company, shot and killed himself at his home here today. Friends attributed the act of Haydel to a recent nervous breakdown and to worry over business reverses.

ALL SIDES WANT PEACE IN LABOR STRIKE TANGLE

Carpenters Would Accept Compromise Proposition Is Belief.

Meets with Opposition.

That clause met opposition from Thomas Walsh of the sheet metal workers, the combination of electricians, glaziers, and painters, and lathers. When their agreements expired they were not renewed and the members of these unions are idle with the exception of a few rush jobs which were necessary because of the May 1 moving. The idleness will increase from now on.

Fourteen unions have signed the uniform agreement, knowing that it insures the men steady work and relieves them from the spasmodic pay check. The fear of the strike is removed from the minds of the men.

Five other unions have signed agreements similar to the uniform agreement, in some cases being more specific than is this agreement, which because of the name—uniform agreement—has become odious among the members of some unions.

The sheet metal workers have been locked out because they refused to sign the agreement. The other unions that are idle went on strike.

Iron Workers Strike.

The structural iron workers declared a strike Friday night. They want an increase in wages for the three years. They offered no objection to the agreement, however. There are 1,200 of them.

The situation as between the contractors and the painters, lathers, sheet metal workers, and structural iron workers, is not serious, and were these the only unions to reckon with there would have been little interruption of building.

But when the 16,000 carpenters voted to strike and quit virtually all the jobs April 15 the situation was given a different complexion. The Building Construction Employers' association and the Building Trades council tried every way they knew of to prevent the break.

It was the behest of the Building Construction Employers' association that the board of directors and the arbitration committee of the Carpenter Contractors' association "bent overbackward" to use one of the member's expression, and offered the 2½ cents an hour increase for the last eighteen months of the three year agreement to prevent a strike.

This offer was in direct opposition to the preachments of the architects, Building Construction Employers' association, and other organizations during the winter. Letters at intervals were sent out by these parent organizations to the affiliated members calling attention to the depression of business in the city and urging all contractors not to increase wages for the next three years.

Roils the Contractors.

However, the compromise 2½ cent offer was made to the arbitration committee of the Carpenters' District council and never was acted on by the rank and file of the carpenters. The fact that this offer was practically ignored by the carpenters roiled the contractors. The members of the carpenters' union had voted to strike prior to the offer of 2½ cents an hour increase for the last half of a three year contract. And so, on April 15, the date of the expiration of the old agreement, the men packed up their tools and went home.

After the state board of arbitration failed to bring the two factions together, Simon O'Donnell, president of the Building Trades council, returned from a rest trip in West Baden and brought the joint arbitration board together again.

This board has been meeting for several days with apparently no results. The carpenters want an increase from 65 to 70 cents an hour. The contractors now insist they will not give any increase.

Back Up Committee.

The majority of the members of the Carpenter Contractors' association are behind the arbitration committee in refusing to grant any increase. But in the membership of the association there is a peculiar situation when it comes to settling a labor dispute. There are 600 members of the association.

There probably are not more than twenty members who employ more than 100 men in busy seasons. The twenty employ from 100 to 2,000 or 3,000 on various jobs.

There is a disposition among the larger contractors to submit the previous offer of 2½ cents an hour for the last eighteen months of the three year agreement to the carpenters once more. They feel that such an offer submitted to the carpenters with the stipulation that it be submitted to the rank and file for action, would be accepted and thus the strike would be ended.

Other Side of Question.

On the other hand, there are many others in the organization who argue that the first offer was made in an emergency and since it has failed in its purpose there is no more obligation to renew the offer. Likewise they argue that carpenters are paid high enough; that increased wages will bring in a lot of men from outside the city who become floaters and lead to a large surplus of carpenters in the city. A large surplus, they say, would result in many men working for less than the union scale and cause contractors considerable worry in bidding closely on prospective jobs.

Also the contractors are opposed to arbitration by outside persons or tribunals. They contend that arbitration always has resulted in increased wages and they prefer to fight out the differences with the men rather than have outsiders step into the gap.

The carpenters have made demands for arbitration and practically have been refused.

Two Minor Questions.

Two other questions were injected into the situation by the carpenters' representatives, but are not considered important in the final settlement of the strike. The material clause in the uniform agreement which prohibits combinations for the purpose of keeping outside material out of the city is objectionable to the mill men, who are affiliated with the Carpenters' District council.

The carpenters contend that no such clause should be in the agreement, but that the union should be permitted to exercise its discretion in the handling of materials made outside Chicago.

The rank and file of the carpenters want to work. Strike benefits are now being assessed at 10 cents an hour on all men who are working. The payment of these at $5 a week will start this week. There is little money in the treasury to meet these payments.

It has been stated on fairly good authority that the increase of 2½ cents an hour for the last eighteen months will settle the strike. It will not work much of a hardship on the contractors, it was pointed out, because all the contracts at the old scale would be finished before the new one went into effect.

Metz Wants Peace.

John Metz, president of the Carpenters' District council, is trying to settle the trouble, but he doesn't dare take back a proposition of no increase in wages. If he did, there are those in the union that would say "Metz has sold out to the contractors." There are those who would say this despite the fact that John Metz in ten years has obtained almost 100 per cent increased wages for the members of the unions with less trouble than any other union in the city.

Psychology is playing no small part in the strike situation. The contractors feel that as the weeks go by without work, more carpenters will bring pressure to bear on the union officials to settle. They likewise realize that with a bad season last summer, a severe winter, and little work this spring the workmen cannot long hold out. If no increased wages are offered by the contractors, the starve out method probably will force the ending of the strike.

But in the meantime there will be thousands of innocent workmen, forced into idleness, who will have to be fed and clothed and their children will need milk and shoes. The starvation factor is an ominous cloud hanging over Chicago just now.

Urge Carpenters to Settle.

Pressure is being brought to bear on both the carpenters and the contractors for the settlement of the strike. The financial interests of the city realize that now is the time to clear the situation. Other unions, conscious of the ultimate results, are urging the carpenters to settle as soon as possible.

The situation has been called to the attention of Mayor Thompson by widely known and influential men in the city. But outsiders feel that they should give the two organizations an opportunity to end the strike without outside aid.

If this week does not bring about the end of the struggle, then perhaps men of city-wide influence will step in and lend their aid.

COLORADO CITY WILL TRY TO AVOID THE MIDDLEMAN.

Each Worker in Proposed Industrial City Will Receive Full Benefits of His Craft.

Denver, Colo., May 1.—[Special.]—An industrial utopia, located near Walden, Colo., has been plotted by a number of eastern and Colorado philanthropists, and if their plans are carried out each man will receive the product of his toil in full measure, with the elimination of the middleman.

Nearly 11,000 acres have been purchased in the North Park country, water rights for 7,000 acres secured, twenty miles of canals constructed, and a coal mine put in operation.

G. O. P. MEN CALL CONVENTION FOR JUDICIAL TICKET

Mayor Thompson Stands Pat, Foreshadowing Battle Next Wednesday.

The Deneen and Thompson leaders in the county Republican committee meeting yesterday agreed to a truce for ten minutes to permit the preparation of the official calls for the judicial conventions.

As soon as this was done the opposing leaders resumed the strengthening of their lines for a finish fight for control of the party machinery next week.

Fred Lundin, speaking for Mayor Thompson, said the mayor would not budge from his stand and would go the limit in carrying out his program of a nonpartisan judicial slate on which all the sitting judges of whatever political faith must be renominated.

Line Up for Battle.

At the same time the Deneen and Progressive leaders began getting all their forces lined up for the tussle next week. Medill McCormick joined Harold L. Ickes in opposing the mayor's program. In a formal statement he said it would amount to disfranchisement of many voters.

Roy O. West also broke into print with a statement that the Republicans in his district are for a straight party ticket.

State's Attorney Hoyne formally denied any understanding with Mayor Thompson.

The Supreme district and county conventions were called for next Wednesday in the red room at the Hotel La Salle. The Supreme district convention will meet at 11 o'clock and the county convention at high noon.

Final Peace Effort.

A final eleventh hour effort will be made to avert the clash between the Republican factions. Former Gov. Deneen and former Corporation Counsel Brundage will confer tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock with Mr. Lundin, delegated by the mayor to represent him. If this conference fails, which it is now predicted it will, then the convention Wednesday will witness the final showdown for control of the Cook county party machinery.

That the mayor and his aids do not propose to consider any compromise was indicated by a formal statement issued last night by Mr. Lundin, in which he asserts that the city hall forces will stand pat on their so-called nonpartisan proposition.

Statement by Lundin.

"Mayor Thompson's attitude on the question of candidates for judicial office and the relations of the county central committeemen thereto is well known to the public," said Mr. Lundin. "Mayor Thompson has not dictated nor has he any desire to dictate as to who should be nominated by these committees or the judicial conventions. He wants the people themselves to have their wish respected, to keep the judiciary out of politics.

"Mayor Thompson announced in a public statement that he believed Charles M. Thomson's public and private record, his standing at the bar, and qualifications as a lawyer, and the manly position taken by him prior to the mayoralty election, without suggesting reward or favor, demonstrate that he is the character of a man to make an ideal judge.

"There is no demand by the people of Chicago to remove the sitting judges. The committeemen of the Republican, Democratic, and Progressive parties will do the people a great injustice if they fail to renominate the sitting judges, because they by chance have the power to remove them from the bench.

23 Judges to Be Chosen.

"To force the sitting judges into a campaign, contribute campaign expenses, and canvass for votes when it is entirely unnecessary, is uncalled for. Because a committeeman, be he a Democrat, Progressive, or Republican, has a friend to reward is not sufficient reason for dragging the entire bench into a heated political campaign.

"There are twenty-three judges to be elected, of which number fifteen are sitting judges. This leaves but eight new places to be filled. If partisan tickets are put into the field, it will force all the old judges to enter into a vigorous campaign in order to be elected. Not one of the sitting judges can foretell which one of the partisans will defeat him. Consequently the sitting judges will be forced to enter into the campaign.

"The Republican party and Mayor Thompson won a great victory at the polls on April 6. This victory was brought about by the people themselves, and Mayor Thompson will not misuse the force of it by punishing the sitting judges who have served the people honestly and faithfully for years."

McCormick on Fusion Side.

Mr. McCormick jumped into the fray on the side of the fusion forces. He said he was sorry to disagree with Mayor Thompson, but he was forced to on this issue. He said:

"I cannot agree that the mayor's plan of nonpartisan nominations is sound. I am for nonpartisan nomination and election of judges, as is evidenced by my introduction of the bar association bill. If we are to have nonpartisan nominations this year by agreement between the county committees let them agree to nominate twice as many candidates as there are vacancies and by lot divide the sitting judges between the two slates irrespective of to what party they belong. As Mr. Levy Mayer very well said some few days ago, 'Any single so-called nonpartisan ticket, no matter in what proportion it represented the several parties, would disfranchise the voters who don't care to vote for the Socialistic candidates for judge.'"

LEWIS WILL BE CANDIDATE FOR THE VICE PRESIDENCY

Senator Expected to Win Votes in Illinois for the National Democratic Ticket.

Washington, D. C., May 1.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois is again a candidate for the Democratic nomination for vice president.

Senator Lewis' boom for 1916 honors was sprung here today when an evening paper presented his name for the consideration of the Democrats of the nation. According to the article in question, Vice President Marshall has proved a most satisfactory presiding officer in the senate, but Democratic conditions in Indiana are so chaotic that even with the vice president on the national ticket again there is little likelihood of that state being won from the Republicans.

On the other hand, while it is admitted that there is some chaos in Illinois, it is asserted that if the voters find Senator Lewis' name on the Democratic ticket just under that of Woodrow Wilson, they will disregard party lines in doing their duty.

And 12,000 owners in 43 countries have proved this Light Six faultless. In the past two seasons they have driven it at least 30 million miles.

Our Prize Success

There have been many successful HUDSONS, but none so successful as this. When this Light Six came out—the first model—it took a year to catch up with our orders.

Sales last year—$11,500,000—nearly doubled the year before. This year shows another amazing increase.

And never was a car so widely copied as this HUDSON—the pioneer Light Six.

Look a Year Ahead

When you buy a Light Six look a year ahead. Do more than consider how rival cars perform now. There are many years coming for the car you buy.

You want a Light Six when you buy a class car. You want lightness, economy, low upkeep cost. Crude, heavy cars are not popular now.

Get the Light Six that has proved itself right. The HUDSON has done that for two seasons, in more than 12,000 hands.

Luxury's High Mark

This HUDSON sets a new high mark in beauty, finish, comfort, and equipment. We have given a whole year to refinements since the model itself was perfected. You will be proud to own it.

Last spring there was a shortage of HUDSONS. Buyers waited weeks for cars. Now we have larger output, but there will be far from enough, we think. With such a popular car it is wise to choose early. We urge you to come this week.

Truck Tires Free

Unless the 1915 Goodyear S-V Outwears Any Other

Here is an offer which Truck users cannot afford to neglect. It will settle for you, without any risk, the entire Truck Tire question.

For three months—April, May and June—this amazing warrant goes with every S-V Truck Tire put on under these conditions:

Every Penny Back

Equip opposite wheels, at the same time, one with a Goodyear S-V, one with any other standard make tire of like rated size, bought in the open market. If the Goodyear S-V fails to cost less per mile than the other, we will return you its full purchase price, making the S-V free.

Mark that—no partial rebate, no mileage adjustment, no replacement. The tire that fails is free. Get this guarantee in writing when you buy the tires.

Never Such a Warrant

Never before has such a warrant been given on any class of tire. If widely accepted, it means with us a million-dollar stake. It is given without reservation against any tire in the field. It covers accidents as well as wear.

Numerous makers claim to build tires as good as the Goodyear S-V. Let us stop arguing in print and in person. Let us compare them on opposite wheels. We have done that already, under every condition. Over 5,000 S-V tires were tested out on trucks before we made this offer. We know to a certainty the results you'll get, barring accidents.

We have worked for eight years on this Truck Tire problem. We built 29 types before arriving at this one. We built 74 models of this S-V type before we attained this perfection.

We give you in it, as compared with others, 20 per cent more available tread rubber. The shape ends bulging, breaking or excessive grind. The compound minimizes friction.

The tire can't creep, as we press it on at a minimum of 50,000 pounds. It can't separate, for the tread, the backing and the rim are welded into lasting union.

GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO S-V Truck Tires

Go to a Goodyear Distributor or ask our local branch where you can get this warrant on the latest S-V tire. Accept it while the offer lasts. [2368]

SHOOTS GIRL AS SHE REPEATS HER REFUSAL TO WED

Kasimira Mazakowska and Stephan Horbaszewski played together as girl and boy in the same province in Russia. Four years ago Stephan reached the age of 20 and came to America to seek his fortune. A year later Kasimira came to Chicago.

A few months ago Kasimira received word that her sweetheart had been killed in the war. Then Stephan told her of his love for her and they became engaged. Kasimira suddenly broke off the engagement.

Yesterday morning he waited in an alley in North Ashland avenue, near Milwaukee avenue, for Kasimira to come along on her way to work in a cloak store at 1251 Milwaukee avenue. Stephan urged her to reconsider her decision. She became angry and started away.

Stephan whipped out a revolver and fired two shots. One struck the girl in the breast and the other in the right arm. Policemen Charles Pilling and Carl Pierson swung off a passing street car as the girl fell to the pavement.

They saw Stephan raise the weapon to his head and pull the trigger. There was no report and he fumbled with the weapon and was in the act of pulling the trigger again when the policemen seized and overpowered him.

The girl was taken to St. Elizabeth's hospital, where her condition is said to be critical.

CHURCHES EYE MOVING VANS FOR NEW PEW HOLDERS.

Pastors Have Committee Watching to Add to Congregation and Sunday School Pupils.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Movers who noticed eager eyes watching them unload yesterday need not necessarily attribute the interest to curiosity or to malevolent feeling. The watchers may be the welcoming committee from a near by church. Even the clergyman may be of the number, for there are some pastors and church members who feel that the time to give a welcome is when the newcomer feels lonesome and a little blue.

The Rev. C. W. Thrall, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church, in Halsted street near Belden avenue, has a committee out watching the moving vans and following up the families who are coming into the neighborhood. If the parents are obliged to stay home and arrange the dishes and put up the beds the first Sabbath the committee will try to induce the children to come to Sunday school.

The Rev. W. C. Covert, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Grand boulevard and Forty-first street, said he had a man on the lookout for new families coming into the neighborhood.

The Rev. J. A. Jenkins, pastor of the Warren Avenue Congregational church, said the women of his church were making a systematic house to house canvass of the community.

PATROLMEN $6.62 RICHER.

One of Former Mayor Harrison's Last Official Acts Was to Change Pay Roll Arrangement.

Many patrolmen were surprised yesterday when they drew their bi-monthly pay to find $6.62 extra in their envelopes. For this lagniappe the policemen have former Mayor Harrison to thank. One of the last official acts of the former mayor was to change the pay roll arrangement so policemen would be paid by the month instead of by the day. The $6.62 covered the shortage for February under the old system.

THOMPSON HINTS AT A SHAKEUP TO HIT FUNKHOUSER

Divided Authority Won't Go, His Comment on South Side Episode.

The sham fight, the real slugging, and the narrowly avoided shooting that involved half a dozen policemen and investigators on the south side Thursday night brought from Mayor Thompson yesterday an intimation that he will make radical changes in Second Deputy Funkhouser's office.

"It's the old story of divided authority," he said, "and divided authority is bad business. It's like the general handling a brigade and the colonel with a regiment over on the hill trying to carry out ideas of his own. That kind of thing doesn't work in the police department any more than it does in the army. Conflict is bound to result.

"It Won't Continue."

"Well, it won't continue under this administration if I have anything to say about it. I am going into this affair pretty thoroughly."

Chief Healey indicated he thought the south side row only emphasized the necessity for shifting the six policemen assigned to the second deputy's office back to the regular force. He said each division of the police department should do its own prescribed work.

First Deputy Schuettler transmitted to the chief the official report of Capt. Thomas J. Coughlin on the Thirty-first street affair.

The Official Report.

The report says:

"About 10:45 Officer Riendeau and Investigator Izzy from the second deputy's office requested Sergeants Ryan and Pieroth of this precinct to go with them and assist in making an arrest of two men for harboring girls under age. Ryan and Pieroth accompanied them to a saloon at 12 East Thirty-first street, where Riendeau sent Ryan and the investigator to the front door and he and Pieroth went to a side door that opened on an alley.

"Just as Pieroth and Riendeau got to the door it opened and a man and woman slipped out. As they did so Riendeau said, 'There is our party,' and grabbed the girl, whom he turned over to Pieroth saying, 'I will take care of the man.'

"While Pieroth was standing in the alley with the girl Riendeau and the other fellow staged a sham fight about twenty feet away. Pieroth ran over to help Riendeau, and, showing the fellow his star, said: 'We are police officers; behave yourself.'

Blow to Jaw Fells Him.

"He raised his hand to strike Pieroth. To defend himself, Pieroth struck him on the jaw with his fist and he fell to the ground unconscious. It was learned later this fellow was Investigator Schumacker, working with Riendeau and Izzy, but no such information had been given to either Ryan or Pieroth. Pieroth believed Schumacker was resisting arrest."

WOMAN MAYOR OF WARREN OPENS COUNCIL BY PRAYER.

Applications for Licenses for Pool Halls and Shooting Galleries Are Turned Down in Meeting.

Galena, Ill., May 1.—Mrs. A. R. Canfield, mayor of Warren, presided today for the first time at a session of the village council meeting.

The session was opened with prayer by a minister, and the mayor announced this would be a feature of every meeting of the board.

The council rejected all of Mrs. Canfield's appointments except two. The applications of owners of the pool halls and shooting galleries for a renewal of licenses were denied.

REVIVE DERING COAL CO.

Continental and Commercial National Bank and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Buy Up Securities.

The Dering Coal company, a collapsed $10,000,000 corporation, with extensive holdings of coal lands in Indiana and Illinois, will be reorganized by the backing of the Continental and Commercial National bank of Chicago and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York. Attorney Levy Mayer, on behalf of those interests, yesterday bought about $7,000,000 worth of stocks and bonds under the hammer for $681,500. The Dering company issued $5,000,000 fifty year gold bonds, nearly all of which were purchased by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad. The railroad gave the securities to the Continental and Commercial and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as collateral. A few months ago the receiver for the road announced inability to keep up interest payments on the railroad company's notes. Whereupon the bank foreclosed.

CORONER'S DESK STORM CENTER IN GALLOWS FIGHT

Mysterious Lawyer's Demand for Henagow Inquest Records Shows Legal War.

The "mysterious influence" which State's Attorney Hoyne accuses of blocking the police graft trials showed its hand at the coroner's office yesterday when an unidentified lawyer requested the records in the case of Isaac Henagow, murdered at the Roy Jones resort more than a year ago, and found none. They were locked up in Coroner Hoffman's desk.

James Franche, alias "Duffy the Goat," has been tried, convicted of slaying Henagow, and sentenced to hang. Judge Kersten recently granted a new trial, but still the case remains marked "pending at the request of the state's attorney" on the coroner's records.

It is believed to be the only case in Illinois that has been pending for more than a year and the only case remaining unclosed after the suspect has had his inning in court.

Work for Inquest.

It reveals the tense situation between State's Attorney Hoyne on one side, who is trying to prevent the defense from procuring his legal ammunition, and the accused police and old line of divekeepers, who are trying to extract that information, and would, more or less, were an inquest held. The statute makes it obligatory upon the coroner to hold inquests regardless of what steps the state takes. Rumor has it that Mr. Hoffman was on the verge of disposing of the case several times, but has always been prevailed upon by Hoyne to wait until all pending police graft cases are heard.

Strangely enough, an old following of Jones, which would make Franche the "goat," is urging Hoyne again to convict Franche, it is said. Time and time again Jones has been accused of "squealing" in the "payoff joint" cases, but these rumors have never been confirmed. The old Jones following is accused of threatening witnesses favorable to Franche.

Inquests Often Postponed.

Henagow was murdered on April 8, 1914. Edward J. Fleming, Hoyne's secretary, raided Jones' café and kept all the habitues prisoners until they talked. The inquest was set for the following day. An assistant state's attorney interfered on the ground that an inquest would "spoil" the case. The hearing was postponed until April 17, then till April 25, and then "indefinitely."

A well known criminal lawyer procured statements from Bobby Crawford and Zelia Ingraham, singers employed at the resort. These statements, it is said, favored Franche. Later the pair were threatened with Mann act proceedings.

The lawyer above referred to for some reason or other dropped out of the defense and another lawyer was retained. After the conviction Cyril E. Franche, a brother of the alleged slayer, retained Attorney Edward S. Day. It was Day who procured the new trial.

Denial by Attorney Day.

Attorney Day denied it was he or any representative of his office who tried to examine the records yesterday. Mr. Day said he felt a full inquest might reveal a lot of matter favorable to his client, but hadn't made up his mind what steps to take about the uncompleted inquest.

It is believed the coroner has come into possession of some important testimony, but what it is cannot be learned.

Neither Mr. Hoffman nor Mr. Hoyne could be reached last night.

M. E. BISHOPS O. K. FOUNDATION OF ROCKEFELLER

Des Moines Session Urges Cooperation; Merger with the Southern Church Favored.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 1.—[Special.]—Indorsement of the humanitarian work of the Rockefeller institute in Europe and America and its proposed work in China and Malaysia was given this afternoon by the board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church in session here. The board recommended that the missionaries of the church throughout the world coöperate.

The resolution was formulated by a committee of missionary bishops, including Bishop W. F. McDowell of Chicago, Bishop W. F. Anderson of Cincinnati, Bishop James W. Bashford of China, Bishop E. H. Hughes of San Francisco, and Bishop Francis C. McConnell of Denver.

Resolution Adopted Unanimously.

The resolution, which was unanimously adopted, reads:

"In view of the favor with which the humanitarian work of the Rockefeller institute has been received in Europe and America and in view of the announced preparations of the Rockefeller foundation to engage in humanitarian work all over the world, we recommend the coöperation of our workers in mission fields with representatives of the foundation and we rejoice in the plan already perfected by the foundation for the uplift of the uncounted millions of China and Malaysia."

The board at its morning session adopted unreservedly a resolution of union of the Methodist Episcopal church with the Methodist Episcopal church, South.

Fill Place of J. E. Patten.

Justice J. H. Anderson of Washington, D. C., was elected to the board of church federation to succeed J. E. Patten of Chattanooga. This board will settle the basis of union of the two church bodies.

The bishops indorsed the budget finance plan which was recommended for use by the churches at the general conference at Minneapolis three years ago.

A. K. Nippert of Cincinnati was elected to the freedmen's aid board to succeed J. E. Annis of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The place and date for all conferences at which Bishop McDowell of Chicago will preside were assigned as follows: Central Swedish conference, Chicago, Sept. 2; Chicago German, Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 16; Illinois, Springfield, Sept. 8; Northwest Indiana, South Bend, Sept. 29; Rock River, Chicago, Oct. 6.

ENGINEER HITS WATERWAY PLAN URGED BY DUNNE

Isham Randolph Says State Reports Even Show River Route More Feasible.

CRITICIZES STATE EXPERTS.

Isham Randolph, former chief engineer of the sanitary district, in the appended article, opposes Gov. Edward F. Dunne's project for developing a waterpower at Starved Rock by using the old Illinois and Michigan canal. Bills providing for this project now are pending in the legislature. "The Tribune" tomorrow morning will publish Gov. Dunne's reply to Mr. Randolph.

BY ISHAM RANDOLPH, C. E. D. E.

Illinois has paltered long enough with its waterway, and the great business interests of Chicago have participated in that paltering long enough. The time for action has come.

The Panama canal is open to the commerce of the world, and already the cities of both coasts are feeling the benefits of cheap water borne transportation.

These benefits are not shared by Chicago or any other city of Illinois or the middle west. Why? Because there is no adequate waterway over which to transport the inland products of farm and factory to the seaboard. The question will not down and it cannot be answered in a small way.

Big Things Faced Now.

We are told not to despise "the day of small things," but "the day of small things" is long past for Illinois and Chicago. Its crops are big; the output of its factories is big; its interchange with the outside world is in big numbers, and all of this must be cared for in a big way.

Some of our people do not realize this and they are seeking to bring about the building of the smallest thing in the shape of a waterway that a time serving expediency can devise. With these prefatory remarks I will address myself to the waterway legislation now pending before the legislature, which, if it should be enacted into law, would result in expending millions of the people's money for a wholly inadequate channel.

Calls It Catastrophe.

The construction of it would be a catastrophe, for it would delay indefinitely the real waterway which Illinois can have and rob the state of water power worth many millions of dollars. Illinois would have a real waterway today if it had not been handicapped by the Illinois and Michigan canal, which was once a mighty agency in the upbuilding of the state and City of Chicago. But that was in "the day of small things."

The real usefulness of that canal ended years ago, but it has been a political asset, a haven for small political office holders of the sort which in 1904 betrayed the interests of the state and sold properties and rights at the mouth of the Kankakee river, the strategic value of which was very great, for the paltry sum [of record] of $2,200. The same men demanded of the sanitary district of Chicago, for the right to join a dam to the towpath of the canal at Brandon road, the sum of $75,000.

Question Mark Appears.

In comparing these two transactions a very large interrogation mark obtrudes itself. It has cost the state $60,000 in attorneys' fees and court costs in the effort to undo that crime of 1904.

Now an effort is being made to galvanize this relic of the past into a semblance of use by working certain sections of it into an ill conceived waterway which is described in a made to order report, signed by four civil engineers, who salve their consciences by damning in the text that which—with fingers crossed—they sign as their recommendation to the legislature.

What They Really Believe.

They express their real view in the following language [See Illinois waterway report of the board of engineers, dated Sept. 25, 1914]:

"The Illinois and Michigan canal may be utilized for this waterway in part or as a whole by deepening the channel and by enlarging the locks. The channel thus formed, however, is poorly adapted to future enlargements, both as to increase in width and depth, and the relative frequency of the locks limits the speed of water transportation routes."

Now comes a frank statement of facts which conveys the real views of the signatories to this report:

"The river waterway possesses advantages over the canal type in that it gives a greater present width and depth, is readily adapted to any future enlargement, and creates a channel requiring a minimum for maintenance and operation and affording a maximum in waterway facilities. The greater speed of transportation in a river waterway of ample channel and unobstructed by frequent locks results in cheaper freight costs and consequent benefit to the public."

Estimated Cost Too Low.

The project presented and outlined in the bill calls for a volume of work which cannot be accomplished for the estimated cost thereof. It adopts a route which, as just shown by quotations from their own report, is condemned by its framers.

A route which is as nearly the ideal seeming but unreal waterway as any railroad could desire to have it. A route which abandons to the "water power parasites"—to use the language of one of the signatories—the long coveted power sites.

The project calls for a dam at Starved Rock with crest at elevation—115 Chicago datum. Add to this the depth of flow over the dam and the back water would reach Marseilles and cut down the head on the water power already developed there and would materially damage property on the water front in Ottawa.

The proponents of this project ignore the fact that slope is necessary to produce stream flow, and their published profiles show absolute levels in each pool stretch after passing Joliet. This, too, is shown in the bill, and they are not ignorant of the laws of flow, either.

The project calls for locks at each end of the stretch under consideration 55 feet wide and 250 feet long and all intermediate locks are given only 45 feet width and 250 feet of length.

Locks Merely Temporary.

This suggests the idea that the intermediate locks are for a temporary purpose and therefore that for temporary work in the Illinois and Michigan canal the state will squander $1,919,610 (as shown by their estimates, which will be greatly exceeded). If this project should be put through, thereafter opponents of a real waterway would use forcibly against it the fact that the state had planted $1,191,610 in this apology for a waterway (which is offered by the report) in their argument that this investment should not be thrown away.

On Nov. 3, 1908, the people of Illinois voted on the constitutional amendment authorizing the bonding of the state to defray the cost of building a deep waterway from the power plant of the sanitary drainage district of Chicago "to a point in the Illinois river at or near Utica." The sum named was $20,000,000.

Big Vote in Favor.

The returns showed that there were 675,296 votes for and 193,296 votes against the amendment. This vote sanctioned "the erection, equipment, and maintenance of power plants, locks, bridges, dams, and appliances sufficient and suitable therefor." Carefully made estimates based upon surveys made by United States engineers show that the waterway contemplated in the amendment—fourteen feet deep and 300 feet wide, together with the development of the four water powers hereinbefore noted—can be built for the $20,000,000 therein authorized.

Leaving off the water power and certain bridge construction, this waterway, 300 feet wide and only eight feet deep, with locks of the dimensions called for in the report which we are now discussing, can be built for $7,680,481.

Add Depth Later.

And, be it remembered, every dollar of the $7,680,481 to be expended in the manner which I have suggested will be spent in line with the ultimate development of a fourteen foot waterway, which is the depth so long advocated by the proponents of a lakes-to-the-gulf waterway.

No raid upon the $20,000,000 bond issue which would reduce its sufficiency to accomplish the purpose which the people had in mind when they cast an overwhelming vote in its favor should be countenanced.

There have been no less than eight investigations and reports on a waterway from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river by boards of officers of the United States corps of engineers. Their later reports have accepted the Chicago sanitary and ship canal as a completed portion of that waterway. Every one of these eight reports favored the utilization of the Desplaines and Illinois rivers in preference to the Illinois and Michigan canal.

ENDS FIGHT ON WATERWAY PLAN

Ottawa, Ill., May 1.—[Special.]—The greatest handicap to Gov. Dunne's deep waterway project was overcome tonight when, at a meeting held here, representatives of the state and of the cities of Ottawa and Marseilles reached an agreement by which Ottawa's protest on the plan was smoothed out.

The meeting was attended by Engineers Cooley, Sherman, and Kelly, who drafted the plans; Senator Swanson, chairman of the senate waterway committee; Representative Igoe, chairman of the house committee, and Attorney Samuel Alschuler, legal adviser of the commercial associations which are boosting the waterway. They heard reports from J. B. Bassett and R. Monroe, government engineers, who were engaged to check over Gov. Dunne's plans. Two hundred citizens of Ottawa were present.

Objection Made by Ottawa.

The principal objection of the Ottawa officials was that unless the dam at Starved Rock was reduced ten feet from the specifications in the Dunne project—115 Chicago datum—the Illinois river would be backed up so much that the Ottawa sewer system would be invalidated. It also was claimed that the Dunne specifications would force Ottawa to construct extensive dikes around the city or large areas would be inundated.

The administration engineers agreed to a reduction of six feet, declaring that a further reduction would spoil the valuable water power which could be generated at Starved Rock, and it was on this basis that the compromise was made.

Will Open Service Soon.

Springfield, Ill., May 1.—Announcement was made today that beginning May 22 a through waterway freight service will be established between Central Illinois and New Orleans. In anticipation of the building of Gov. Dunne's proposed waterway, connecting the Illinois river with the Chicago drainage canal, a company on that day will begin running packets between La Salle, the head of navigation in the Illinois river, and New Orleans.

This information was received by Gov. Dunne today from E. S. Conway, manager of a Chicago piano company, which will ship a load of pianos on the initial trip at a freight rate of only 72 cents, compared with an all rail rate of $1.10. The company will ship their product to La Salle, where it will be transferred to boat and then taken down the Illinois and Mississippi rivers.

Gov. Dunne today issued a statement declaring that practically the only opposition to the administration bill now before the legislature providing for the construction of the new waterway comes from the private utility corporations of the state, which would lose their monopoly on electric power.

MAYOR GREETED BY SCRUBWOMAN

First City Executive She Shook Hands With in Nine Years' Service.

For nine years it has been the work of Mrs. Anna Jensen to scrub the mayor's office in the city hall. But it was not until yesterday that she actually shook hands with a chief executive of the city.

Mayor Thompson came into his office unexpectedly in the afternoon. Mrs. Jensen was scrubbing.

"O," she said hesitatingly. "I didn't know—I'm afraid I'm in the way——"

"Not at all," responded the mayor, extending his hand. "How are you?"

Shake.

Mrs. Jensen glanced gingerly at her sudsy right hand, then with a quick surreptitious movement wiped it on her apron. This took only a second, and it was followed by a vigorous hand clasp.

"I'm happy to meet your honor," she said, quite at ease now. "I've often said to myself, I'd just like to meet you once. I'll always remember it, too."

"Thank you," said Mayor Thompson. "Do they treat you all right around here?"

"I can't complain."

"Well, let me know if they don't."

And Mrs. Jensen took her scrub brush and pail and went out just as Commodore James A. Pugh and Charles A. McCulloch were entering.

Restores Saloon Licenses.

The mayor restored two saloon licenses which had been revoked by former Mayor Harrison. The license of Stanley Czerwiecz at 2258 Nineteenth street, who had been arrested for counterfeiting, was given to Stanley Kasla.

WOMAN SUICIDE BY GAS.

Mrs. Anna Manshoupp Found Dead in Flat on Augusta Street.

Mrs. Anna Manshoupp of 4951 Augusta street ended her life in her kitchen yesterday by turning on the gas.

When Young Man's Footsteps Lightly Turn to Gretna Green.

When all the world was young, lad,
And all the grass was green,
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen—

The marriage mill sits on the banks of the stream of love that flows through Crown Point, Ind., and its other principal geographical boundary is the first day of May. No one pays any attention to the song a vinculo a matrimoni that tinkles over the falls, for the lusty voice of Judge Harry B. Nicholson, the marriage miller, chanting "God bless you, my children," drowns the roar of top and nether stone and no echoes ever come back from the marital rapids to Crown Point a-snooze in the flowery kirtle of May.

So love's young dream flows down to the ocean, where many a man mistakes the light in a woman's eyes for the faithful old north star, and brings up in the Sargasso sea of divorce. There lawyers croak over the evidence, strongly reminding him of the bullfrogs that sat on the rim of the pond just above the old marriage mill.

This Is the Day.

Unopened mail lay on lacquered desks in many Chicago offices yesterday and unmilked cows on Indiana farms mooed for some one to come and help bossy wet the pail. For the mating season was on with the opening of May, and all roads led to Crown Point.

Judge Harry B. Nicholson, alias the Merriage Miller, alias Cupid's Hired Man, arose the first day of May and methodically beat his soft boiled eggs to a proper consistency just as though nothing unusual was in the wind. For what did this old bachelor justice know of the spring refulgent?

Could he see how Jay S. Kelley's heart, aged 28, fluttered for Ethel May Culter, aged 27? Did he know that Henry Kracke, a widower, five feet four, was burning to wrap Odelia Ringenberg, five feet nine, irrevocably to his bosom? And what of the little 19 year old Hammond widow with whom Bernard Jergens was going to polish off domestic life?

How Romantic!

Why, affinities which had yearned for each other since they were little tadpoles together, away back there before Genesis, might have been waiting outside of Judge Nicholson's office. He didn't know robins were singing. He didn't know the sap was climbing up maple trees and other sorts of limbs and bushes. He's just a bachelor and a marriage miller, and he would not have addled those breakfast eggs for the most famous romance since the world began.

The marriage syndicate of Crown Point breakfasted easily on the first of the month. The miller had just turned in 113 marriages for the last month (representing a personal accruement of $565) to the marriage clerk, H. L. Wheaton, who directs the prospective brides and grooms to the J. P.'s office.

George Miller, aged 23, of Gary, Ind., and Josephine Hemmert, aged 19, a housemaid of Chicago, arrived on the first car via Gary to add a luxuriant Sunday supplement to the daily courtship which was begun just before the war around the beer tables of Vienna.

Mr. Miller Explains.

"She and I," said young Miller, and he held up one finger. "One! No more she and I!" He laid a $5 bill in the palm of Judge Nicholson, which has been dusted by many of the species before.

Bernard Jergens, a bus driver (whaddya mean? An old fashioned bus?) of Hammond, Ind., was next.

"He consoled me when I was widowed," smiled that delightful little graduate of the weeds, Bessie Loetscher, "and I couldn't help loving him. We met in grief, as it were, and here we are with all our happiness to give to each other. Isn't it splendid?"

Vivacious little Mollie Schuppe, who was born in Moscow, Russia, seventeen years ago, threatened to tear down the little courthouse at Crown Point if she were not given a license pretty pronte. But Clerk Wheaton was adamant.

"You're too young," he informed her.

"I'm not too young," asserted the little mujik, "I'm 17 years old, and that's an old maid in Russia."

Clarence Reetz, a telegraph operator of Bellwood, Ind., tried a heavy bass voice on the clerk, with no more effect than Mollie's tears. The boy's father, A. U. Reetz, who had come along to see his son married, also added his arguments.

"So, There!"

"Well," wept little Miss Mollie, "we'll go over to some other town, and we won't patronize you. So, there!" She stamped a staccato on the floor and blotted her tears on Clarence's lapel.

Henry Kracke of 1120 Adams street, Chicago, aged 35, confided to Judge Nicholson that he and Odelia Ringenberg had been keeping company for two years.

"Is that so?" said Judge Nicholson in his surprised way (tucking away the $5 bill).

Others who took the broad hymeneal way that leadeth to—Judge Nicholson—are: Jay S. Kelley, a salesman of 4852 Prairie avenue, and Miss Ethel May Culter, 220 East Forty-ninth street; Earl Carrigan, Hammond, Ind., Helen Wagenblast, Hammond; Frank E. Nichols of Chicago, Blanch Ruddell of Chicago; William Leftridge and Camilla Watkins of Chicago; Albert M. Schulz and Millicent Schumacher of Gary, Ind.

The marriage syndicate of Crown Point works with never a hitch—after 9 o'clock in the morning. "Doc" Clack meets the trains with the marriage phaeton that tags at the heels of two horses, known as Cupid and Hymen. He takes the betrothed up and turns them over to Marriage Clerk Wheaton. Mr. Wheaton gives them a $2 marriage license and then directs them to Judge Nicholson.

Magistrate's Witticism.

There is one little witticism with which the judge closes every ceremony. That is when he finishes inscribing the certificate. The bridegroom always reaches for the certificate, but the judge coyly eludes him.

"No, the lady gets the certificate," he says, "the boy gets the girl."

Regularly Judge Nicholson grinds out that little wheeze in his marriage mill that sits on the stream of love, just above the vale of tears and the Never-Never land where the babies come from.

"I'm the champion marrier of the world." said the judge proudly. "Fifteen thousand couples I've married in eight years. I built up the business in this town. Nobody ever heard of Crown Point until I came here and got to marrying. Bring on your Nat Goodwins. The more the merrier."

Tunes His Soul to Rosa's Eyes; Forgets Wife

Romance of Foreman and Seamstress Revealed When Song Is Published.

ENTERS: TROUBLE

Three years ago Charles Wright was foreman of the tailoring department in a State street store. He was a musical soul, and the whir of the machines and the zip! zip! of the needles forcing their way through thick folds annoyed him.

But the presence of little Rosa Jungman more than made up for the annoyance. Rosa was one of Wright's battery of seamstresses, and, being as much a connoisseur of beauty as a musician, the foreman could scarcely resist an impulse to sing whenever he looked at her and caught her eyes admiringly fixed upon him.

Pours Out His Soul in Rhyme.

The smitten foreman didn't upset the discipline of his department by singing, though. Instead he spent his leisure moments composing songs for others to sing—songs concerning the blueness of Rosa's eyes, the trueness of her heart, and other of her attributes that lent themselves to rhyme.

One day Rosa quit her job. Shortly afterwards another foreman stood in Wright's place. The musical foreman, apparently, hadn't been able to stand the lonesomeness.

Wright didn't look for work in other tailor shops. He gave his musical side full swing and made a deal with a Clark street music publisher who liked his "lyrics." Thus it came about that a song called "No One Can Win You From Me" made its appearance on the counters of 5 and 10 cent stores.

Then the Blow Falls.

The writer of the song was Charles Wright, and it was dedicated to one "Rosa Jungman." Complications ensued at 802 South Taylor street, where Wright had a wife and two children. Wright disappeared.

Yesterday dispatches from St. Louis told of Wright's arrest there on complaint of his wife and her sister, Mrs. Percy Osborne of Oak Park. With Wright a young woman was taken into custody.

"My name is Rosa Jungman," she said. "I am not Wright's wife, but I love him. That is why I went to live with him."

Mrs. Wright said her husband had deserted her six times in the last few years, each time going away with another woman.

PLAY PROMOTER AT FIRE INQUIRY TELLS OF CLASH.

Former Bush Temple Manager Testifies He Was Barred from Theater, Despite Contract.

A new phase in the investigation of the supposed incendiary fire which damaged the stage and furnishings of the Germania theater in the Bush Temple building on Wednesday, developed yesterday through the testimony of Ulrich Haupt of 42 East Superior street, former manager of the theater, at a hearing before State Fire Marshal Walter H. Bennett.

Haupt testified he has a written contract, which entitles him to the use and management of the theater from April 24 until May 16, given to him by Jonn Koelling, president of the German society.

"After I received my contract," said Haupt, "I started my advertisements, hired my actors on contracts, and started rehearsals. Later I received notice from Koelling that I could not have the use of the theater.

"I remonstrated and went to the theater to take charge of the box office and sell tickets. Charles C. Martin, manager of the old company, would not let me in, refused admittance to a young lady cashier I had hired, and told me that I would never manage the theater."

MAYOR DEPOSES HEALEY FOR 4 HOUR CLUB SESSION.

Appoints Charles J Healy Chief of Police During "Ladies Night" Celebration—Silver Desk Set Gift

Mayor William Hale Thompson deposed Chief of Police Charles Healey last night. He appointed Chief Healey's namesake, Charles J. Healy, the chief from 8 p. m. until midnight, when the regular chief went back to the job. Nobody knew of the deposition, however, except about forty members of the Forty club and the women who celebrated "ladies' night" of the club with them.

The affair was held at the Hotel La Salle. Mayor Thompson is a member of the club, and Chief Healey was one of the guests.

The club presented the mayor with a silver desk set with the monogram of the Forty club engraved on it. In the dance that followed the dinner Mayor Thompson and Mrs. Thompson led the grand march. They were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur D. Nesbit, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burras, and Charley F. Healy and Miss Mae Mackey.

HELD AS AN EMBEZZLER.

E. W. Damon Arrested in Restaurant on Charge of Former Employer.

E. W. Damon walked out of the real estate office of George H. Doty & Co. at 1326 East Sixty-third street shortly after noon Friday. Damon is manager of the firm's rental department, and when he failed to report for further duty later in the afternoon Mr. Doty glanced over his accounts. Yesterday he was arrested in a restaurant at Indiana avenue and Twenty-third street, where he was found with a young woman. He was locked up on a charge of embezzling $300. Damon lives at 6233 University avenue.

HEALEY'S SQUADS START RAIDS ON LOOP GAMBLING

Arrest Twenty-six and Seize Racing Charts and Phones in Poolrooms.

GUEST OF HOTEL ALSO TAKEN.

Deputy Chief Schuettler's new gambling squad made its first raids yesterday afternoon.

Twenty-six prisoners and two installments of racing charts and telephones were the results of invasions of two alleged poolrooms, one in a basement at 3519 South Wabash avenue and the other in a room on the fifth floor at 63 West Madison street in the loop.

At the Wabash avenue address members of the squad found seventeen men grouped about a blackboard. They were loaded into patrol wagons and taken to the Stanton avenue station, where they were locked up, John Mullens being booked as keeper. A bundle of racing charts also was seized.

Nine in Poolroom.

Nine men were taken from the room in West Madison street, booked at Central station, and released on bonds. Racing forms and telephones were seized as evidence. Frank Dolan, who gave his address as 45 East Oak street, was booked as keeper.

Early in the afternoon Detectives Collins and Levvon of Central station pounced on William Anderson in room 1134 of the Morrison hotel and arrested him on the complaint of F. P. Kinson of 3754 Greenview avenue, that Anderson has been running a "baseball pool."

This particular diversion is not a new one, but it has not come to the attention of the police recently. It is conducted for the benefit of the "fans" who want to risk bets on the total scores of their favorite teams or of combinations of teams. Payments are usually made at the end of a week.

Says Job Was Offered.

Kinson said Anderson had offered him a job as a clerk in the establishment. Anderson, however, said he himself was a clerk, employed by another man of the same name. He was released on his own recognizance.

Before visiting the Morrison the same detectives arrested five men whom they found shooting craps in a fifth floor room at 12 North Market street. The men, who said they were tailors, were released on bonds.

All but two of the 105 men and women arrested in Friday night's poolroom raids were freed by Judge Caverly in the morning.

Legal Right to Run.

"You men went into these poolrooms licensed by the city and arrested these persons when they were found sitting there, as they had a right to do," he said to Detective Sergt. Thomas O'Malley and the ten men who had made the raids with him. "They have violated no law. If you find any of them idling about these poolrooms habitually without working, why, then prosecute them for vagrancy."

"Well, there's only one thing for us to do if we are gong to clean up these places," said O'Malley after the hearing. "That is to go in and arrest the inmates. However, I'm going to keep watch as the judge said, and if it seems advisable vagrancy warrants will be issued.

Known as Crime Hangouts.

"Most of these places are known to be hangouts for vagrants, pickpockets, and crooks of all kinds. One of the poolrooms has been raided three times within a year."

Capt. Meagher said that several young men of good families were released when they explained that they had simply gone to the poolrooms looking for recreation.

"Dips" Work in Cars.

Pickpockets worked in the Saturday afternoon street car crowds without much respect for Chief Healey's "cleanup" order.

William Schick, a furniture dealer at 1247 Clybourn avenue, was jostled by three men on a north bound Clark street car. When they left at North avenue Schick found his wallet containing $870 was gone.

"The judge's action was perfectly satisfactory to us," he added. "I gave orders to clean up the poolrooms and my men went out and raided the places they thought should be raided. But it was in the nature of a warning, and I hope those concerned will profit by it."

Of the two defendants held, one was charged with vagrancy and the other with disorderly conduct and having immoral pictures in his possession.

James Anderson of 5432 South Artesian avenue found that he had been robbed of $200 shortly after transferring to an east bound Sixty-third street car at South Halsted street. He reported his loss, but said he did not remember being jostled.

HELD ON SWINDLE CHARGE.

Leaders of "Uncle Tom's Cabin Company" Arrested as They Accept Check.

J. M. Falls and Leroy Pederson, who said they live at 1962 Nebraska avenue, were locked up by the police yesterday, charged with trying to operate a confidence game. Leo Goldberg of 354 West Twelfth place said he read and answered an advertisement, and the prisoners took him into an office in the Nebraska avenue building.

He said Falls represented himself as the head of the "Uncle Tom's Cabin company." He said they offered him a position as cashier for the company at $15 a week and expenses provided he would give them a cash bond of $75.

Goldberg met the men yesterday in the shoestore of his father-in-law, I. Levi, at 168 West Van Buren street. When he gave a check for $75 detectives arrested Falls and Pederson.

WILSON FORGETS CARES OF OFFICE FOR GRANDCHILD

President Takes Part in Planting of "Baby" Tree for Little Sayre Boy.

Williamstown, Mass., May 1.—Woodrow Wilson laid aside the cares of president of the United States here today and became merely the grandfather of Francis Sayre, the small son of his daughter, Jessie, and of Francis B. Sayre, assistant to the president of Williams college.

The president came all the way to Williamstown, despite pressing public business, to take part in planting a "baby" tree for his grandson late this afternoon and to act as one of his godfathers at the christening ceremonies tomorrow.

Virtually the entire college population of Williamstown was at the station to welcome the president, who was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson; his cousin, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, and his naval aid and physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson. Others here for the christening ceremony are John Nevin Sayre of Princeton, Mr. Sayre's brother; Mrs. Robert H. Sayre, his mother, and Miss Agnes Winter of Philadelphia, an old friend of Mrs. Francis Sayre.

Tree Planted on Lawn.

Soon after the arrival at Williamstown the entire family party, with President Harry A. Garfield of Williams college and Mrs. Garfield and the Rev. J. F. Carter, gathered on the side lawn of the Sayre home and planted a small walnut tree presented to Baby Sayne by Mr. Garfield.

It was a happy group and the president joined in the laughter caused when the baby grasped the tree with both hands and tried to take it from his father. It was the first time the president had seen the baby since shortly after his birth at the White House.

As soon as the tree was placed in the ground the president turned a spadeful of earth around its roots, and then all present, including Mr. and Mrs. Sayre, followed suit. The baby gurgled delightedly and Mr. Wilson patted him several times on the cheek.

After the brief ceremony tea was served to the family and friends in the Sayre home. The christening tomorrow will be held in St. John's Protestant Episcopal church at 2:30 o'clock and will be strictly private, only members of the Sayre and Wilson families being present.

Many Presents for Baby.

A number of presents, including a drinking cup from the president, were received by the baby today. The president also brought a baseball and bat given him for the baby by the Washington American league baseball team when he opened the initial game in Washington several weeks ago.

The president was greeted by large crowds at Troy, N. Y.; Hoosac Falls, N. Y., and other places as he passed through on the way here. At Troy Mayor C. F Burns and other city officials welcomed him as he took a short walk about the streets, shaking hands with several score persons.

"The people of the United States want continued peace and appreciate the way you have been keeping us out of trouble," said Mayor Burns.

"Thank you," replied the president, "I know the United States wants peace."

SAVE WATER, HEALEY ORDER

Chief of Police Charles C. Healey took official cognizance of recent summer weather by issuing an order yesterday to commanding officers to instruct their men to enforce ordinances prohibiting waste or misuse of water, particularly emphasizing the necessity for enforcing the ordinance prescribing sprinkling hours to the periods between 5 and 7 o'clock in the morning and 7:30 and 10 o'clock at night

A HUANACO from SOUTH AMERICA

Many a strange creature—more than one without a name—will raise its ungainly form in the halls and corridors of the Field museum as a result of the trip of Robert E. Becker, assistant in zoölogy, to the River of Doubt and the dark fastnesses of Peru.

"We don't know what we have ourselves," said Mr. Becker yesterday, surveying the pile of trunks, crates, and boxes that arrived with him, "but here's just one—the huanaco. The huanaco looks something like the llama, if you know what that is, and an interesting thing about him is that he can be tamed. I can't promise to offer any to Chicago householders for pets."

Many of the Becker specimens lived and had their being in the prehistoric ages and members of the museum staff are planning a clinic to name them. Among the antiques for which the scientists have found labels are the agouti and the vicuna, the former a species of wild llama and the latter a quadruped about the size or a small pony.

TWO DAYS OF GRACE GIVEN TAXPAYERS BY STUCKART.

Settlements Made Tomorrow Will Not Be Subject to Penalty of 1 Per Cent, Treasurer Rules.

Approximately 50,000 checks from persons paying general and special assessment taxes were received yesterday by Henry Stuckart, county treasurer.

Many property owners have failed to pay their taxes because of the recent business depression, Mr. Stuckart believes, and a result he decided to permit the payment of taxes Monday, May 3, without levying a penalty of 1 per cent, which is usually callected on all taxes paid after May 1.

"I think it would be unfair to many poor people," he said, "to ask them to pay the penalty of 1 per cent when they call on Monday. The men in many of these families work all day Saturday and do not receive their salary until they leave for home."

WOMAN'S CLUB VOTES TO ERECT $500,000 HOME

At the annual meeting of the Chicago Woman's club yesterday it was decided to erect a club house in the downtown district. The club probably will remain in its present quarters in the Fine Arts building until the new structure is ready.

There was not a dissenting vote to the proposition when it was presented to the club by a committee looking into the matter of new quarters. The committee will seek at site at once, and it is probable the building will be erected on Michigan avenue at a cost of approximately $500,000.

Several aldermen and Chief of Police Healey visited the suffrage headquarters in the Tower building and gave short talks. It was the annual celebration of "Suffrage day." Mrs. William Hale Thompson was there as the representative of the city. She made a short speech, in which she thanked the women for their part in electing her husband mayor. Others who spoke were Mr. and Mrs. George A. Soden, Ald. A. A. McCormick, Miss Margaret Dobyns, Mrs. Edward L. Stewart, Mrs. Harriet S. Thompson, and Mrs. H. C. Newton. San Diego, Cal., May 1.—[Special.]—In the center of a bower of pink roses Mrs. Kathryn Grosscup Jordan, daughter of Judge Peter Grosscup of Chicago, was married this noon at her home in Coronado to Frank Leslie Moon, brother-in-law of Claus Spreckels, son of the sugar magnate.

The bride's only attendant was her little 6 year old daughter, Virginia, who held her mother's bridal bouquet during the service. The bride wore a tailored suit of blue serge and a chic hat to match. Mr. Moon, who is 20 years old, was attended by John Plover of San Francisco.

SHE BUILDS THREE BRIDGES ACROSS RIVER OF STYX

Three agents of death were resorted to by Mrs. Annie Hobe of 7122 South Union avenue, who ended her life yesterday. Mrs. Hobe had been suffering from a nervous disorder for more than a year and had become despondent.

Her husband, William Hobe, a retired stockyards commission merchant, went out in the morning and returned at 11:30. He found both the front and rear doors locked and receiving no response to his knocks forced a window off the rear porch. An odor of gas pervaded the house and Hobe traced it to the bathroom where the door stood half open.

Mrs. Hobe's body lay in the bathtub which was overflowing. A gas jet was open. Mrs. Hobe's throat had been slashed with a razor which lay in the bottom of the tub. Mrs. Hobe was 55 years old.

This car will never be superseded by improvement in appearance by anybody. It is the model of the best car which next year and the year after can possibly produce. The New Lozier Company promised that the 1915 model would be the final word for years to come in the car of beauty, of elegance in art values, of luxury in satisfaction, and of economy in ownership. The critical throngs who inspected the New Lozier last week left the reflection of their admiration in the sales of the car.

The allotment of New Loziers to Chicago is comparatively small. The cars are for instant delivery now. Yesterday every New Lozier in Chicago was sold. While this issue of The Sunday Tribune is going to press a new shipment is being unloaded and taken to our salesrooms. These new cars will be on exhibition today and tonight and every night until the Chicago allotment of New Loziers is gone.

104,000 Men are Working to Supply Goodyear Tires

In the jungle and the field, in our fabric factory, our tire plants, our branches, etc., 104,000 men are employed to meet the demand for Goodyears.

That demand has grown until last year men bought about one Goodyear tire for every car in use.

It is growing now faster than ever. Our sales to dealers have this spring shown an increase of 52 per cent.

We Fortify Tires

The reason is, we fortify our tires. We give you the best that others give, plus five exclusive features. In costly ways, employed by no one else, we combat these six great troubles:

Rim-Cuts
Blowouts
Loose Treads
Insecurity
Punctures
Skidding

Not all these troubles can in any way be completely ended. But we combat them in the best ways known. We do it regardless of cost. Our "On-Air" cure—one exclusive feature—costs us $450,000 yearly.

We Never Skimp

Despite all price reductions, we never skimp these tires. In fact, scores of experts work all the time seeking new ways to improve them. Lately we have added three conspicuous improvements, each of which adds much to our tire cost.

This policy is apparent. Compare Goodyear size and thickness with the average tire. Compare the number of fabric plies. Some Goodyear supremacies can be seen at a glance.

Prices Way Down

Goodyear has made in about two years three great price reductions. They total 45 per cent. The last was on February 1st.

Every saving we make—in rubber or cotton or through multiplied output—goes to Goodyear users. Our present output enables us to give you a value which none can duplicate.

Men who use Goodyear Fortified Tires get better tires than others. They have less trouble on the average, and less cost. The evidence lies in our exclusive features. It lies in our dominant place. And it lies in the swelling Goodyear tide. We urge you to join this army. Any dealer will supply you. (2366)

EVERY FRENCH FAMILY HAS KIN AT FRONT

None Without an Intimate Personal Interest in Great Conflict.

BY HENRY J. REILLY.

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 20.—The first point, and the most important point of what the war means to the French people, is that it is everybody's war, without exception. It probably would be impossible to find a single family in the whole of France of which at least one member is not a soldier.

To hear a woman or a child say: "My father, two uncles, my two brothers, and three cousins are in the army" is nothing uncommon. As a result of this, every one is always extremely interested in and anxious about what is going on. Therefore there are not, as in England, and as is the case in the United States in time of war, thousands of families which have no direct interest in the war because none of their members are soldiers with the army in the field.

No Casualty List Published.

No casualty lists are issued in France However, any relative of a soldiers may by filling out a blank, which is furnished by the government, make inquiries as to what has become of him. This blank returns filled out with the information that the soldier was killed in action on a certain date, at a certain place; or that he is in a certain hospital wounded; or that he was last seen at a certain place on a certain day, and probably is a prisoner.

Information as to soldiers captured by the enemy can be had by means of the bureau established for this purpose in Switzerland. Once the prison camp in which the soldier is confined has been located, the family can write to him, and he can write to them on postcards sent through Switzerland.

Every wife of a soldier who is dependent for her support upon what he earned is allowed 1 franc 25 centimes per day for herself, and 50 centimes per day for every child 16 or under. Widows are entitled to the same allowance for themselves and their children. Unmarried women who are without work and have no incomes are also allowed 1 franc 25 centimes per day.

Aside from the fact that practically everybody in France is a soldier or has many relatives who are, the war is a national one, for the reason that it is being fought largely in French territory, and that a considerable portion of French territory is in the hands of the enemy.

Quit Homes Less Frequently.

As the war goes on people abandon their homes much less frequently than in the beginning. Nevertheless a frequent sight in the larger towns back of the battlefield is a number of refugees in front of the city hall, surrounded by mounted gendarmes.

Pasted in conspicuous places in all these towns are large yellow sheets of paper on which is printed in black ink an order of the following type:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY.
No. 1.

By order of the general commanding the army, by Sunday, 1st of October, all the emigres, without exception, must have evacuated the arrondissements of Dunkerque and Hazebrouck. Only the inhabitants of the communes are authorized to live in them.

The mayors of the towns will be held personally responsible that this order is executed.

The emigres are forbidden to return.

Any disobedience of this order will be immediately punished.

MERVILLE, 30th October, 1914.
(Signed) General Commanding.

It is to the personal interest of these people to leave the zone of the armies, as there is no work to be found there. They have much better opportunities to find work further back in the country.

Citizens the Real Sufferers.

The people in the towns just off the battlefield suffer various vicissitudes. In the first place, due to the presence of the army and the absolute necessity of the army to use all means of transportation, particularly the railroads, the ordinary means of communication are entirely upset.

While supplies in large quantities can occasionally be gotten by rail, more often the local tradesmen have to drive to some town further to the rear having better communications, in order to make their purchases. This inevitably results in an increase of prices, but seldom a great increase.

Towns Military Stations.

These towns are always military headquarters of one kind or another. They are also frequently rail heads, and the point from which supply motor trains start for the army.

The grand place and other public squares and the principal roads leading out of town are the places where these supply motors are parked when not in use. Frequently they are the centers in which are located the evacuation hospitals. This means long strings of ambulances coming and going either to the battlefield to get the wounded or to the railway station to ship them to the rear.

The soldiers and officers who go with these activities are billeted, that is, assigned to different families throughout the town. This is something, however, to which Europeans are accustomed. It generally means no other inconvenience than the giving up of a bedroom to a certain number of officers or soldiers.

Frequently, it means gain to the family concerned, particularly in the case of officers. This because there are a good many things which they want and for which they always pay.

The presence of troops stimulates trade of some character, but it is not a stimulation of which the people may be sure, because once the headquarters is moved forward or back to another town, the stimulation disappears.

Towns Are Bombarded.

Once a town is within range it is subjected to a bombardment, sometimes for a short while every day, sometimes once in a while every few days, and sometimes on and off most of the time.

While one shell cannot do very much damage, and while even a considerable number of shells dropped in a town of from twenty to thirty thousand inhabitants do not cause anything like the destruction which would be commonly expected, some of them do kill and wound people here and there.

The uncertainty as to where the shells are going to land always causes each day a number of people to leave the town. Should the shelling stop for a few days some of them will come back.

While this useless and more or less destruction of property is hard on the people concerned, particularly when it is done by troops of their own army or the army of their allies, it is inevitable.

WATER AND SOAP FOR CITY HEALTH, SAYS ROBERTSON

New Hygiene Commissioner Explains That "Bathing in Oil" Rumor.

With these words Dr. John Dill Robertson, recently appointed health commissioner, yesterday shot a bolt at the rumor that for years has connected his name in some haphazard fashion with the great unwashed. The story has gone 'round the world that Dr. Robertson, superintendent of hospital and head of a medical college, did not believe in bathing, especially in winter.

Dr. Robertson admits a fondness for the idea that under certain circumstances anointment with oils may be preferable to "indiscriminate bathing." But as health commissioner, delivering a message to the people, well, that's a different story.

"Next to Godliness."

"I'm for clean skin, clean clothes, and personal cleanliness from start to finish," said Dr. Robertson. "In my official capacity I shall spread the gospel of frequent bathing—plain suds and water. The title of my first speech to the public will be 'Cleanliness Is Next to Godliness.'

"Do I look as if I didn't bathe?" demanded the health commissioner, with sudden emphasis. The reporter was constrained to say that no such impression was created.

"That infernal story was set afoot thirteen years ago," continued Dr. Robertson. "I made an address before a medical association.

"I quoted authorities disapproving of indiscriminate bathing. Hot baths, for instance, taken immediately before going out into cold temperature. I suggested the application of oils as a substitute. Rushing out into zero weather with the pores of the skin open is a dangerous proceeding.

"But as health commissioner I am going to urge the people to bathe, and bathe frequently. I will suggest only the ordinary precautions."

MUST HAVE CLEAN CITY.

"If we are going to have the greatest city in the world, we will have to have the cleanest one," Dr. John Dill Robertson, the new commissioner of health, told members of the Irish Fellowship club at a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle yesterday. The luncheon was in honor of the medical profession.

"Education must be the keynote of successful sanitation," said Dr. Robertson. "The health department will continue to teach the public the proper methods of sanitation and hygiene, but it must have the coöperation of the public. My job has many aspects, but it all amounts in the long run to keeping the city clean, and to do that I'll have to have the coöperation of the great mass of the citizens as well as the doctors themselves."

Women and children have been specially requested to keep out of the Memorial day parade, which will be held on Monday, May 31.

Col. C. R. F. Koch, the adjutant general, explains that it is planned to confine the parade this year to military and semi-military organizations.

"One of our objects is to impress the foreigners with the dignity of this country," said Col. Koch, "so we must have an orderly parade made up of people who know how to march."

Ten thousand marchers will assemble at Michigan avenue and Twenty-fourth street. The line of march will extend straight down Michigan avenue to Lake street, where the marchers will disband.

SOCIETY DANCES DANGER TO BOYS

FAR FROM RELIGION.

Complicated steps in the latest dances came in for condemnation as a menace to young men at a conference of delegates attending the sessions of the Middle West Society of Physical Education and Hygiene yesterday at the University of Chicago. The "society dances" were scored by George E. Johnson, a superintendent in the New York School of Philanthropy, during a session in Kent theater on the topic "Suggestions for a Greater Physical Education."

"The dances should be taught and conducted in a more wholesome way," Mr. Johnson said. "The modern steps as they are done are far from the original elements of the religious and artistic, which inspired the first dancing."

"A Moral Menace."

He called the manner in which late steps were done "a moral menace," and said only half the proper oversight was taken when precautions were made to shield the girls.

"The young men need safeguarding as well as the girls, but this is often neglected. In the large cities it not infrequently happens that the young men attending dances with society girls are made an easy prey for prostitutes after they leave the halls and the girls. The girls stimulate the young men by an incorrect interpretation of the meaning of the dance.

Dance Great Problem.

"The dance presents one of the great problems before physical educators today. Dancing provides an interpretation for the drama, for religion, art, and courtship. It is of great importance in physical education." He gave a quotation saying:

"It is stated with truth that society men today need no longer visit the underworld—the underworld has come to visit society through its dances."

Cadillac
Standard of the World

Every Good Quality a Car Can Have Is Furnished in Superlative Degree in the Eight Cylinder Cadillac

Yes, set down those things you want your car to be and to do—consider them carefully with a view to the pleasure and satisfaction you want to get—and you find that the Cadillac, and the Cadillac only, is the car that fully meets your requirements.

The Safest Car

The Eight Cylinder Cadillac offers a new order of safety—the safety of easy, careful driving. Eight Cylinder owners will tell you they find themselves driving more carefully, and yet making better time than with any other car. With this car there is no trouble slowing down to go around corners or in taking it easy at any time. Without changing gears the car picks up by just the pressure of your foot. Thus the Eight Cylinder Cadillac is doing more to prevent accidents than all the education in the world, because it does away with the cause of most accidents, which is reckless driving done to avoid the necessity of frequent gear changing.

Easiest to Drive

More women are driving the Eight Cylinder Cadillac than any other model ever produced. One foot slows it down and starts it up—there's hardly anything to do but steer. So willingly does this car obey your slightest command that driving has a new zest it never had before. Scores of owners tell us their wives now drive through down-town traffic without fear in the Cadillac Eight—so sure is their control of this simple car.

Fastest Accelerating Car

Cars that get under way slowly are a nuisance these days. You want to be able to take advantage of every opening—every opportunity—without bothering with gears. And this wonder car seems to sympathize with you, so quickly does it dash ahead at the slightest pressure of your foot. From 2 miles an hour on high gear to 30 miles an hour is a matter of a few seconds—all other cars are left behind.

The Smoothest Car

You can realize now why the Cadillac Eight is the smoothest car. You never have to speed up your motor and go through several gear changes to get under way. It seems as though you just press a button and float away. You are unconscious of the motor—you cannot hear it—you cannot feel it. The car just gets up speed and flies. The wonderfully balanced body, hung on soft yielding springs, combined with this velvety motor, gives a new meaning to the word smoothness. No other car can touch it.

Most Truly Economical

"All this is very grand," you say, "but what does it cost?" Surely this superlative of all cars—this car whose character of performance no other car can equal—surely this car is an expensive car to own and to run. Well, a motorcycle or a cycle car will cost you less to run than a Cadillac. But you are not buying an automobile to see how cheaply you can get about. Economy is a relative matter. Any car that will give you fair comfort and fairly dependable service will in the long run cost about the same as, and probably more than, the Cadillac Eight. Yes, any car selling new for a third less than the Cadillac Eight will still cost you more in the long run. Credit all the claims of its maker and you cannot figure a saving of over $100 a year in tires and gasoline compared with tires and gasoline for an Eight Cylinder Cadillac. Yet everybody who knows anything about automobiles will tell you that the depreciation on the cheaper car will be at least $100 a year greater than on the Cadillac Eight. Now where is your saving?

Cheapest in the Long Run

Cadillac economy is real economy. The penny wise and pound foolish do not drive Cadillacs. Men who have learned to buy the most for their dollars—these are the men you will find driving Eight Cylinder Cadillacs. One railway president in Chicago has already bought three Eight Cylinder Cadillacs. Several other big business men have each bought two Eight Cylinder Cadillacs. These men want utmost comfort, absolutely dependable service at the lowest possible cost. They find it to a superlative degree in the Eight Cylinder Cadillac. It's here for you too.

Most Enjoyable Car

After all you are buying a car for enjoyment. If you have never owned a car it seems now as though any old car would be enjoyable. It would, for a few weeks, and then you would begin to realize its deficiencies and begin to pay for the things the maker ought to have put in when he built it. Comfort on the road; dependable performance at all times; easy driving; smooth riding; a sense of security and safety and a knowledge that these highly desirable things are costing you as little as they possibly can—these are the things that make for enjoyment in an automobile. The Eight Cylinder Cadillac gives them to you in a superlative degree.

So fascinating, so far ahead of all other cars is this new Cadillac that it has practically doubled our business—the largest automobile business in any city in the United States. Some 250 Eight Cylinder Cadillacs are already running in Chicago and the season is hardly open. Every day more men are converted. Every day more men determine to possess this car and every day adds days to the days you will have to wait to get your Eight Cylinder Cadillac. If you order right now you will be in luck to get your car before Decoration Day.

WAR CONSEQUENCES.

Nine months after the beginning of the European war that monstrous reality has become almost domesticated. Our imaginations no longer wrestle with nightmare visions of Christendom run mad and civilization in flames. We have Dr. Jordan's assurance that Europe is destroyed and we have other naïve doctrinaires still at work on reconstructing the constitution of the world, but what events have taught the teachable is that an unparalleled effort has developed unexpected resources and that what seemed only a fatal cataclysm is a revelation of unrealized powers.

In August so frightful seemed the certainties of such a conflict that we did not dream of results incommensurate with the forces let loose. The word which for weeks now has been on every one's lips, stalemate, was buried in the dictionary and amateur prophets spoke only in terms of uncrowned emperors, uprooted tyrannies, reorganized social systems. We were only deterred from throwing our atlases away by the necessity of referring to the map in our first excited following of the military campaigns.

How much of that is in our mood today? Except for utopians, who never leave their dreams, very little. So little, in fact, that we are probably beginning to underestimate the effects of war and the gravity of the changes it may bring about.

At the moment the political changes which seem probable bear no resemblance to those we were so ready to predict a few months ago. Even Turkey has been able to summon unexpected powers of resistance to her expulsion from Europe, though her serious test is yet to come. The Italian situation is as dubious as ever. The anti-intervention party in Greece seemingly has won. Roumanian intentions either wait upon the Italian decision or upon the fate of Russian arms in the Carpathians. Between the main combatants Neuve Chapelle is more than answered by the tremendous drive at Ypres, but that is shortly checked, and we settle back with only the thought that the struggle is endless—and futile. We do not consider Kitchener's promise that in May the war for England really will begin. We have ceased to wait for the collapse of Austria-Hungary. We know that Germany is not at the end of her resources of material power or spirit and that far from giving signs of exhaustion she is, after nine months, fighting victoriously in the territory of her adversaries.

If an unforeseen balance of strength between the combatants seems at this stage to have disposed of our expectations of a transformed map of Europe, we also are inclined to abate our notions of radical consequences in the internal organization of the countries involved. When it was believed that Germany and her ally must be overthrown it was assumed that what happened in the French débâcle of 1871 would happen in Germany. The militarists and the junkers were to be driven from power, the kaiser was to be radically limited in authority, the Prussian hegemony in Germany was to be brought to an ignominious end, and it was hoped by many idealists outside of Germany that something in the nature of a Socialist democracy imbued with ideals of internationalism and pacifism would remove forever from Europe the fear and burden of a military imperialism.

If there is any sign of such developments in Germany it is not discernible to ordinary observation. Whatever our theories of responsibility for the tragic conflict we cannot but be impressed by the efficiency of the German system to deal with the crisis she finds herself in, and since the Germans do not accept responsibility for the war they must naturally feel that the military caste and its policy of preparedness have justified themselves in the salvation of the empire.

Only a German débâcle, which seems now the most unlikely of events, could bring about such a revulsion of feeling as would be necessary to shake the German system as it is.

On the other hand, we find Germany's adversaries compelled to imitate her by resorting to autocratic measures which may leave their marks upon their policy long after the war is over. In England a liberal government whose instincts, traditions, and policies are individualist is compelled to take over the railroads, to interfere with organized labor and with the profits of capital, and, though reluctantly, to be considering revolutionary measures of social, economic, and military character which only visionary extremists would propose in time of peace. The gigantic issue of war is forcing upon England and a liberal ministry the methods of autocratic efficiency. How many of them will remain when the urgent necessity for them has been removed? That depends upon the condition in which the war leaves England. If peace comes soon, or before her material constitution is much more drained, the deep conservative forces of the English character will reassert themselves and there may even be a sharp reaction from war psychology and its acceptance of state control. But it is not unlikely the war has brought to the English a more wakeful sense of the waste and danger involved in the poverty and social degeneracy which the richest nation in the world has permitted to exist within her boundaries. The death of so many men in battle will increase the surplusage of women and force them into industry. The social problems presented by illegitimate children and unmarried mothers will have to be faced and may compel a more humane and intelligent policy than has prevailed. The huge war debts will be met by special taxation, which may have an important effect upon the distribution of certain classes of wealth.

Taxation, if it has been the instrument of tyranny, has been even more strikingly the instrument of its undoing, and in the process of paying off the war debts a general liberalization of laws and institutions may be hoped for.

Yet so far as the effects of the war are now discernible, unless the conflict is carried along to a greater destruction than now seems probable, no spectacular transformations in either the external relations or the internal organization and course of development of the chief contending nations will be brought about. It is still possible, of course, that the conflict will continue until all European society has been shaken from its foundations and a new order forced by conditions unknown in the past. This is not now to be foreseen. The changes wrought by the war are more likely to be gradual modifications and adjustments which will not reduce the European complex to simplicity, erase the international differences of centuries, bring about a "federation of the world," or prelude the millennium.

REPUBLICAN POLICY AND PROSPECTS.

A warm and springlike influence is to be noticed in Republican affairs. Ruddy streaks of hope are discerned in the political firmament and little birds are singing in many an ear.

Is the winter of Republican discontent departing? Certainly Republican leaders seem confident that the days of Democratic rule are numbered.

There are many plausible reasons for this belief which need not be enumerated here. Yet none of the signs observable at this time is so certain as that political seasons are fickle and that there is yet time for a reversal of the popular mood before November 1916.

This thought is worthy of the consideration of the leaders of reviving Republicanism. Progressivism is neither dead nor sleeping. Whatever partisan form or forms it takes, it is a deep and lasting force in American affairs and must be reckoned with always, even when the ebb and flow of partisan fortunes seem to have overwhelmed it.

Republican success in 1916 cannot be so securely predicated upon present conditions that the party can afford to accept as leaders men like Barnes and Penrose or embark upon a tory program on the theory that the public has learned nothing since 1896.

The tendency to overdo government surveillance of private enterprise, to centralize and elaborate bureaucracy, to increase regulation without consideration of the healthy and legitimate freedom of individual initiative, to overemphasize popular control at the expense of government efficiency and responsibility, in a word the excesses of the broad democratic movement called progressivism seem now to be checked. But this does not mean that we count all that has been done in the last half generation a mistake, that we are ready to own the evils we have feared and combated to be good, or that we propose to leap back into the bramble bush of unmitigated laissez faire.

A party reorganized by men who consider progressivism merely a windy heresy and who can think only in terms of the early eighties might win by the sheer sweep of some popular passion, fear or fancied need. Continued widespread unemployment and business depression usually have been fatal to the party in power. But if these influences have been at work to sap the position of the Democratic party there is reason to expect them to be weakened and in considerable measure withdrawn before the next contest. Unless the most reliable signs fail the contest of 1916 will not be carried on in atmosphere of gloom and reaction but in one of renewed confidence and reviving enterprise. The empty dinner pail cannot then be used as the war drum of certain Republican victory. Even opportunism must recognize this.

But a party with the great traditions of Republicanism deserves a policy and a program built upon something better than the cheap and tricky opportunism of the least scrupulous professional politics. If there is to be reunion there must be something better. There must be assurance that the party is in the hands of real leaders—men who represent the ideals, the standards, the interests of the rank and file—not of bosses who intrench themselves in deceit, who think the American people are incapable of self-government, and who really represent the government of the many in the interest of the few.

Progressivism is the strength of true Republicanism. If there is to be effective reorganization it must be upon this basis, and bosses of the Barnes and Penrose variety must be kept off the quarterdeck.

DISCRETION AND TRUST LAW.

Slowly the rule of reason in the interpretation of the trust law is making its way. After the courts, where the new principle originated, come our administrative agencies. Those officials who are in charge of prosecutions for combinations and agreements in restraint of trade no longer talk of the duty of following the letter of the law and hitting trust heads right or left without reference to such questions as social effect, injury, danger of this or that combination of competitors.

A report that should attract wide attention in legal and business circles is that which indicates an agreement between the department of justice and the Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' association. Over a hundred mining companies were represented at a conference at which the department was informed that many of them might be forced to suspend operations and dismiss their workmen because of the waste and handicaps entailed by the supposed inhibition of any and all agreements not in restraint of trade but in removal of needless and destructive competition. The operators wish to establish common selling agencies, for example, and effect limited combinations aboveboard for purposes in no sense or manner detrimental either to consumers or to labor.

It appears that the department of justice acquiesced in their view and encouraged them to go ahead with their plans. No binding promise will be made, but the department will not interfere with the operators under any technical or strained construction of the trust act. The president will have to ratify the agreement reached, but no objection is anticipated from him, since he is in favor of "constructive helpfulness" on the part of the federal trade commission and has evinced his desire on many occasions to relieve industry and commerce of unreasonable restrictions.

It is not proposed to waive the law arbitrarily or to play favorites. The idea is simply to give assurance that the law will be rationally and intelligently construed and not used blindly as a weapon of sheer destruction regardless of public interest or substantial social justice.

SCOTLAND'S premier earl, Lord Crawford, chieftain of the grand old Scottish clan of Lindsay, and one of the most gifted and useful members of the British peerage, has lately enlisted as a private in the royal army medical corps, and, well acquainted with ambulance work, is now at the front in France, acting as an ambulance bearer on the battlefields, and in the trenches. While ambulance bearers are not, stricly speaking, combatants, yet they are constantly under fire in their merciful work of rescue of the wounded and dying, from the zone of fire, and thousands have lost their lives while thus engaged since the beginning of the war.

Lord Crawford is the twenty-seventh Earl of Crawford, the tenth Earl of Balcarres, and the thirty-fifth Lord of Lindsay.

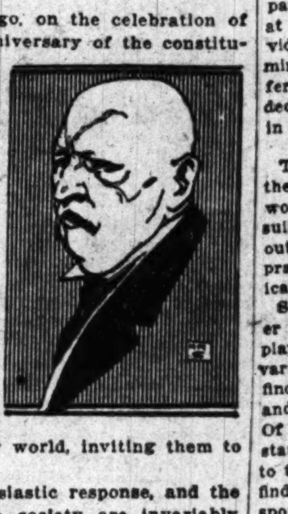
Known among his relatives and friends by the nickname of "Hal," he sat for several years in the house of commons, was a lord of the treasury in the last Balfour administration, and won favor in the lower chamber of the national legislature by the cleverness and elasticity of his speeches and keen sense of kindly humor.

Both at Eton and at Magdalen college, Oxford, he won fame as an athlete, which did not prevent him from taking honors at the university.

After leaving Oxford he became identified with the Magdalen college settlement work in the east end of London. Magdalen college has for near half a century maintained this institution in the slums of the British metropolis, and every Magdalen man, both while at Oxford and after leaving the university, is expected to show personal interest in the work. The Prince of Wales, who is a Magdalen man, is no exception to the rule.

Lord Crawford, like several other members of the house of lords, is an extremely clever boxer, a teetotaler from taste rather than from principle, an adept chess player, and an authority on Italian art. He is married to a daughter of Sir Henry Pelly, by whom he has a family of six children.

One of his younger brothers, the Hon. Ronald Lindsay, who was second secretary of the British embassy at Washington under Sir Mortimer Durand, is married to Miss Martha Cameron, daughter of J. Donald Cameron, who was secretary of war and United States senator from Pennsylvania.



Some fifteen years ago, on the celebration of the one thousandth anniversary of the constitution of the Clan Lindsay at Kinross, in that Loch Leven country where the Lindsays of olden days gave so many proofs of their chivalric loyalty to the ill fated Mary Queen of Scots, a Lindsay society was organized and an appeal was sent out, signed by the late Lord Crawford, by the Earl of Lindsay, by the late Gen. Lord Wantage, V. C., and by other Lindsay chieftains, addressed to the Lindsays of the new world, inviting them to join the society.

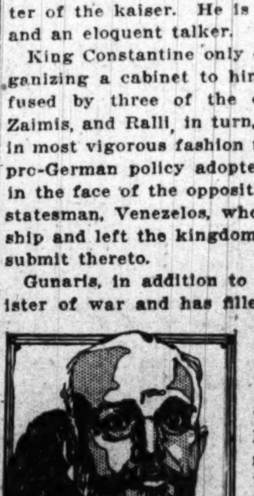
It met with an enthusiastic response, and the annual meetings of the society are invariably attended by representatives from the members of the clan on this side of the Atlantic.

The Lindsays are one of the grandest houses in the history of Scotland, and there are few names to be found so frequently and that figure so prominently on every page of the most glorious annals of King George's northern kingdom.

It is claimed that they are of Scandinavian rather than of Gaelic origin, and that they are descended from the same stock as the dukes of Normandy, who, after the battle of Hastings, became kings of England.

Greece's new prime minister, Demetrios Gunaris, received his entire education in Germany and is a graduate of the universities of Bonn, of Heidelberg, and of Berlin. It is therefore only natural that he should be intensely pro-German and in sympathy with the pronounced German leanings of King Constantine and especially of Queen Sophia, who is the favorite sister of the kaiser. He is a lawyer by profession and an eloquent talker.

King Constantine only confided the task of organizing a cabinet to him after it had been refused by three of the ex-premiers, Theotokis, Zaimis, and Ralli, in turn, all of whom expressed in most vigorous fashion their disapproval of the pro-German policy adopted by King Constantine in the face of the opposition of that great Greek statesman, Venezelos, who resigned the premiership and left the kingdom for Egypt rather than submit thereto.



Gunaris, in addition to being premier, is minister of war and has filled the post of minister of foreign affairs to Christakis Zographos, who a year ago was president of the revolutionary government in Epirus. Zographos, it may be remembered, had been appointed governor of Epirus by Venezelos after the Greek army had seized that formerly Turkish province during the Balkan war. When, however, on the restoration of peace, the great powers insisted on the relinquishment of the northern part of Epirus by Greece to the newly constituted principality of Albania, Zographos resigned his governorship and assumed the leadership of the revolutionary junta, formed to prevent the incorporation of northern Epirus in Albania.

It was while acting as such that he won over the American minister plenipotentiary at Athens. The envoy espoused his cause and severed his connection with the diplomatic service of the United States in order to be free to express his sympathy with Zographos and his condemnation of the policy of the great powers in robbing Greece of the northern part of Epirus for the sake of Albania.

As every one knows, the revolutionary government was compelled to give way and to submit to the incorporation of the northern portion of the province to Albania, Zographos returning to Athens. He is a very rich man and owns large estates in Thessaly.

TIME TO BEGIN TO PLAY.

WITH the advent of spring comes the desire for outdoor exercise. Now that people have found out that the old idea of taking a spring tonic or blood purifier does not help physically, although it may mentally, and that what the body craves and needs is outdoor exercise and a change in diet, the subject of outdoor sports is more prominent than ever before.

Grown people need to play as much as children. Often now, when a man or woman comes into a doctor's office and tells of being tired physically and mentally and of lack of interest in almost everything, cannot think up any definite symptoms, says he or she is getting plenty of sleep, eating regular meals, and, in fact, following the plan of right living as far as he or she knows how, the up to date doctor asks, "Do you play much?" or "How many hours do you devote to play?"

Often he is rewarded with a polite stare, as though the patient hardly believes he has heard aright. In most instances, after being questioned, the fact develops that the patient does not play in the true sense of the word.

The man or woman who wants to keep young must play. Those who have never learned to play must learn, if they care to keep fit. Outdoor play is much better than indoor. Exercise should not be taken that is not enjoyed. A sport indulged in from a sense of duty will do far less good than one in which the player feels enthusiasm. When he can hardly wait for evening, or Saturday afternoon, or Sunday to go to the playground and start in, and forgets everything but the good time he is having, his mind and body will get the full benefit of the exercise.

Play takes people out in the sunshine and fresh air. It makes them forget their worries. It helps them mentally and physically. Play not alone develops the muscles and develops the love for out of doors, but it teaches self-control, honor, social sense. The competition in any form of exercise is one of the best brain stimulants.

The park boards in most cities have provided means whereby any one can participate in whatever sport he chooses at little or no cost. The cities now provide public bathing beaches and swimming pools. The popularity of these different forms of exercise shows that the decision to give the people places to play in is a wise one.

This is the time of year to think over the subject of what form of exercise one would like to indulge in, find out if it is suitable from the health standpoint, find out if it is convenient, so that it may be practiced regularly and not spasmodically, and then to make arrangements.

Some people wait until the warm weather comes, and they see the parks and playgrounds full of people enjoying the various forms of outdoor sport, and then find out that most of the clubs are full, and they cannot play some of the games. Of course, even under those circumstances there are plenty of other sports to take up, but some people, when they find they cannot indulge in the particular sport they want, use that as an excuse not to indulge in any until the next year, when the program is repeated.

The popular spring and summer sports now in vogue in all portions of the country are croquet, handball, roque, tennis, baseball, archery, golf, fly casting, rowing, swimming, and walking. Each one of these sports will be discussed in this article to show the merits from the health standpoint and help people to decide which form of exercise is best fitted for their needs.

CROQUET—Croquet is a game suitable for any one of any age. There is very little exercise in the game, and the good gained is principally from being out in the open.

HANDBALL—This is one of the best and most strenuous exercises. The eye must be keen, the brain alert, and the muscles must move with the greatest rapidity. A man with a soft heart muscle could not stand the pace of this exercise. No one except those in the best physical condition should indulge in this sport.

ROQUE—Not at all strenuous and seems to appeal to people of middle life and past. The bending necessary with the short mallet is good to keep the knee joints and back limbered up. Not harmful to any one.

TENNIS—This is a game for the fit, but a man or woman with a soft heart muscle, beginning with a slow competitor, can indulge in it. For those for whom handball is too severe tennis is an excellent substitute. However, as a rule, the man or woman who is not accustomed to indulgence in outdoor sports will find that tennis is not well suited. Those at middle life or past will find the jumping and running too strenuous.

BASEBALL—Every boy, some time in his life, belongs to a ball team. After marbles and tops his ambition is to be the owner of a ball and a bat and later a mask and mitt. His nine is a most important subject in his eyes. As he grows older, he may drop out of the play and be content to look on from the bleachers, but, as a general rule, his enthusiasm never wanes. The fat man cannot belong to a ball team on account of the long runs necessary, which require plenty of good wind. It is one of the best exercises for the young, and to play good ball the man or boy has to keep fit.

ARCHERY—This sport is not so generally known on this side of the water as on the other side. It appeals particularly to those who do not like so strenuous a sport as tennis. There is no hurried movement in this sport, but everything is calm and deliberate. The training of the eye is very important. The drawing of the bow develops the shoulder and arm muscles, and the chest and lung capacity, and tends to give an upright carriage. Many singers find it a help to them on account of the lung and diaphragm expansion. Walking to and from the target, generally a distance of thirty to eighty and 100 feet, doubled, and bending to pick up any arrows that have fallen on the ground, bring in play the leg muscles. This sport is suitable for young and old.

GOLF—This is a sport that can be followed into old age and can be regulated to suit the fitness of the player. This form of exercise combines walking, hill climbing, and exercise for the right side of the body. The man or woman who has not played for years, and perhaps never, can take up golf and suit it to the individual need. One can play nine holes if there is not time or strength for eighteen.

FLY CASTING—This is a sport that seems to be gaining in popularity. The exercise is not at all strenuous. It develops patience. It trains the eye. For the man who goes fishing and has had little experience in casting this preliminary exercise is a great help. It not alone hardens and trains the muscles to be used when fishing, but trains his eye for the distances.

ROWING—This is one of the exercises of endurance. It exercises both sides of the body equally and brings most of the muscles into play. It is especially good for those who wish to strengthen a weak back or a soft heart muscle. It is one of the best exercises for developing the lungs and chest. To row one must have confidence in himself. One must have poise not to lose his head when away from the shore, if a wind comes up or a swell from a passing boat. To gradually accustom oneself to this exercise is gradually to gain confidence and poise.

SWIMMING—This is another of the endurance exercises. Of all outdoor exercises, it is the best for those who can indulge in it. It brings most of the muscles of the body into vigorous action. It brings into play many muscles that are seldom used. Like rowing, it needs and helps to develop self-confidence and poise. A swimmer should learn when to go into the water and when not. He should not go in when tired, or when in a state of perspiration, or after a heavy meal. Swimming should be avoided by those having weak hearts or kidney disease, or by feeble or old people. One who has a poor circulation and who does not get a good reaction after the plunge should discontinue this exercise.

WALKING—This is the exercise which can be indulged in by young and old, rich or poor, at any time or place. It can be fitted to the needs of any one who is able to walk. While it is really an endurance exercise, unlike rowing and swimming, it can be stopped at any time. If the walk be listless it does little good except for getting out in the fresh air. Change to a brisk trot, and one is enjoying a vigorous exercise with increased respiration. Walking exercises the heart and lungs. The circulation of the blood being quickened by a brisk walk, the feeling of fatigue is very much less than when short slow steps are taken. One should begin the walk slowly and increase the pace gradually. Short periods of rest should be taken, but it is much better to rest standing up than sitting down while out for a walk. When climbing hills the work of the muscles and heart is increased and care should be taken not to carry the exercise too far without giving the heart a chance to recover. One should avoid talking while climbing.

RUNNING—This exercise was not mentioned in the list merely because it is a part of so many of the other exercises. Running is for the young and not for those past middle life. It can prove harmful if carried to extremes. One of the rules to be remembered is that one should never stop dead short, but should gradually lessen the speed.

HORSEBACK RIDING—While this is one of the very best outdoor exercises, it was not mentioned in the list on account of the fact that so few people in cities can afford to indulge in it. It is suitable for all ages, although it is an exercise that few people take up after middle life. Nearly every muscle in the body is exercised, and, while not at all strenuous, it is most exhilarating. It is not necessarily a spring and summer exercise but can be carried on most of the year. One who suffers with a sluggish liver will forget he has such an organ after a good horseback ride.

LEADS TO EYE TROUBLES.

D. S. H., eye surgeon of a great railway system, writes: "I see a great many cases of poor eyesight where the people are wearing plain glasses—glasses that do not suit their eyes. As a result of poor vision, squint, cross eyes, and other forms of eye trouble develop. Eyes cannot be properly refracted except by looking at the retina as an addition to the use of charts. Please also call attention repeatedly to the fact that babies cannot grow unless they get milk fat. They need butter, when they get old enough, as well as milk of good grade. Also note that the Army and Navy Magazine for April, 1912, says that sodium fluoride is an excellent roach remedy."

REMEDY FOR DANDRUFF.

O. E. B. writes: "Please advise me as to the best remedy for excessive dandruff."

REPLY.

Plenty of soap and water. Plenty of brushing is the second best. The others are not in the race.

SHOULD SEE SPECIALIST.

R. G. H. writes: "About a year ago I had a rather serious time with a packing of the lower bowel. Since then I have been unable to prevent a recurrence of the difficulty."

REPLY.

There are cases of obstinate constipation which neither bran, agar, nor mineral oil will relieve. Generally these are people who have relied on enemas or purges until the condition has become extreme. Such people should put themselves in the hands of rectal specialists. The bad habit can be remedied except in very old people.

USEFUL AGAINST INSECTS.

Mrs. C., who has charge of a large public institution, writes that she uses the following method against bedbugs. She buys 10 cents' worth of moth balls, grinds them up, and puts the powder in a five gallon bottle. To this is added enough gasoline to fill the bottle. The solution is sprayed into cracks and corners. Care is taken to prevent explosions from fires.

REPLY.

The method should prove useful against fleas, ants, and other insects.

AMEBAS.

M. B. writes: "Does the ameba which causes pyorrhea exist in the mouth alone or does it infest other portions of the mucous membrane?"

REPLY.

It has been found in the tonsils. Perhaps as we come to know more about amebas, and this one in particular, it may be found in other parts of the body.

THE CONTINENTAL MANNER.

I DON'T THINK
WHAT ABOUT THE SAUCE PIQUANTE?

A number of British navvies have been sent to the continent to dig trenches. This is the kind of thing that we must expect when they return.

WHIPPLE STREET AND MONTICELLO AVENUE IMPROVEMENTS.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please tell me what action has been taken with respect to improving Monticello avenue south of Foster avenue. When will the sewer be laid on Whipple street south of Argyle street?

L. A. WILKE, 2214 Cullom avenue.

Monticello avenue just south of Foster avenue lies in the river bottom of the north branch of the Chicago river. It is subject to overflow and is not fit for habitation. There is no proper outlet available for a sewer to drain this land. The contract has been let for a sewer in Whipple street south of Argyle street, and the work will be done early this year.

C. D. HILL,
Engineer, Board of Local Improvements.

STOREKEEPERS NOTIFIED TO STOP NUISANCE.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The vacant lot on the northeast corner of Montrose and Greenview avenues is being made very unsightly by being used as a public dumping ground for street sweepings and ashes. Your help in stopping this nuisance will be appreciated.

J. M. DWAN, 4417 Greenview avenue.

Most of the rubbish complained of was dumped on this lot by unknown parties. The ward superintendent will have it spread in the lot. He also served notice upon the storekeepers across the street to stop using lot to burn combustible refuse.

WALTER G. LEININGER,
Superintendent of Streets.

MUST KEEP LIGHT BURNING ENTIRE NIGHT.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—To comply with the ordinance, in a three flat building how many hall lights does the landlord have to keep? How late should they be kept burning, and must they be gas or electric?

E. BEAUDOIN, 1322 Cornelia avenue.

Section 143 of the fire prevention and public safety ordinance requires an adequate lighting system of gas or electricity to be kept burning from sunset until sunrise in all halls and stairways of flat buildings three or more stories in height.

J. C. McDONNELL

CANNOT EJECT TENANT.

Chicago, April 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I rented a flat for one year and the tenant has defaulted in his rent for two months. Have I the right to take forcible possession without process of law?

IN DOUBT.

You have no right to eject the tenant and if you do so you will be liable for damages. We advise you to serve the tenant with a notice in writing to vacate within five days. If this is not done, institute a suit called forcible entry and detainer for the purpose of forcing the tenant to move and obtaining a judgment for such rent as is due.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

EQUALLY OBLIGED TO MAINTAIN FENCES.

Chicago, April 29.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me whether or not there is a law or ordinance governing the maintenance of city lot party fences. Are fences on both sides of lot to be maintained jointly or each owner to maintain one side; if so, which side?

B. G. B.

Adjoining property owners are equally obligated to erect and maintain division fences.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COST OF PROBATING ESTATE.

Chicago, April 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Please inform me as to cost of court and attorney's fees for probating a will.

E. J. K.

The court costs depend upon the nature of the estate. From $20 to $50 is the usual amount. The attorney's fee is a matter of agreement with him. This also depends largely upon what is necessary to accomplish the probate of the estate.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RELATING TO BREACH OF PROMISE SUITS.

Chicago, April 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me if one can be sued for breach of promise when he has no money. And if he can be sued after marriage to some one else.

S. O. R.

Suit for breach of promise may be instituted even though the defendant has no money or has married some one else. The fact that the defendant has no money or property of value may prevent collection of any judgment which may be recovered.

BELGIUM AND THE UNITED STATES.

Chicago, April 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Referring to your editorial of Sunday last, "The Isolation of America," I want to state some facts which may perhaps prove interesting. I do not want to answer the question whether or not Dr. Sarolea was really a representative of King Albert, although it would perhaps be interesting to know the truth about it. But I am in a position to state that certainly Dr. Sarolea did not express the views of the Belgian government when he said that America does not have "the respect of the allies." I take the entire responsibility in saying that.

The Belgians certainly admire the fairness of the American people and the splendid stand of absolute neutrality taken by the American government in this war. They understand perfectly that America does not want to fight at the same time the battles of Belgium, of France, of Germany, of England, etc. If, in acting as it does, the American government is criticized by both sides, then you have a very good proof that America is really neutral and the country may be proud of its "isolation."

All the Belgians, those who are now prevented from dying by starvation in Belgium, thanks to the generosity of the American people, and those who are staying as refugees in other countries, all agree in paying the tribute of their deepest gratitude to the American people. They realize the wonderful task of charity of this country and will never forget it. At Louvain the burgomaster, my colleague, Prof. Nerinckx, gave the name of America, Washington, and Wilson to three streets; in Antwerp and Liege the population is wearing badges showing the stars and stripes, and all along the country roads the American motor cars of the relief commission are cheered, and the people take their hats off in order to prove their respect. I know that by letters that were sent to me, and the members of the relief commission stated repeatedly the same facts in the American newspapers.

That is the real spirit of Belgium, that is the truth about the feelings not only of the Belgian people but also of the Belgian government, and the utterances of a man who was angry because "he was not allowed to speak" in some American universities are, in comparison with that, of no importance.

For I maintain that Dr. Sarolea expressed only his personal opinion when he criticized America. My personal opinion is that if America would have protested against the violation of Belgium's neutrality it would not have helped our cause. Germany, nevertheless, would have pushed on her attack, because she claimed she had to do so, and the result would have been that, at the end of the war, America would have had no word to say during the peace negotiations.

Many fair minded Belgians share that opinion. And when the war is over the American people will be loved and cherished in Belgium, not as an awful lot of "dollar hunters," but as a nation which did its duty in international politics and saved 6,000,000 Belgians from starvation —and if America is then "isolated" its people will still find in Belgium their best friends and a grateful nation.

Professor at the University of Louvain.

MUST HAVE A SUBSTITUTE.

Downers Grove, Ill., April 28.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have been much interested in the present newspaper discussions on the subject of Chicago's poolrooms. Our association has been trying for three years to get these places either cleaned up or closed up, but the cooperation which we have received from the papers recently has enabled us to accomplish more during the last few weeks than ever before. Public sentiment has been so aroused that when we now indicate a certain "den" which refuses to respond to our "clean up" treatment we find the task of closing it up very much easier. And, as president of this association, I am writing to thank you for this cooperation.

I wish, moreover, that you would give more publicity to the principle upon which the policy of our association is based—namely: the principle of substitution. No reform activities will ever get very far which are merely negative and destructive.

The one effective process by which the "gang spirit" can be lifted into a higher order of social consciousness is the infusion into its environment of new constructive suggestions. It is a scientific principle, as applicable in social work as in physics, that no energy can ever be destroyed. Suppress it at one point and it breaks out in another. It may be directed, however, and when Chicago directs the energy of the "gang spirit" which is now the source of crime into "social center" activities, and more extended municipal recreations, then, and not till then, will it decrease juvenile crime.

BEHIND the SCENES in the WAR DRAMA

By Baron Hrolf von Dewitz.

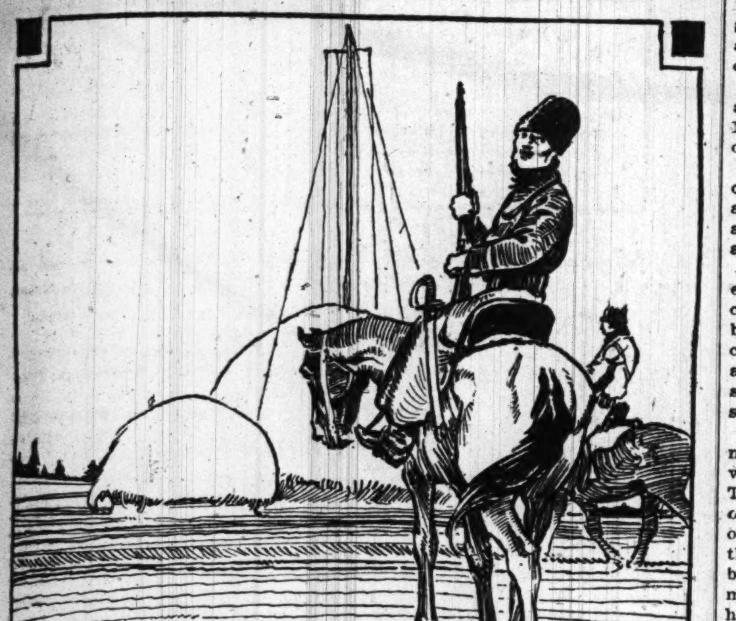
Baron von Dewitz, who, according to Hudson Maxim, has a "masterful knowledge of military tactics and of the philosophy of warfare," has written a book entitled "War's New Weapons," just published by Dodd, Mead & Co. The book deals in an authoritative manner with all the inventions now in use in the business of destruction. Each chapter is prefaced with a vivid and poetic description of the actual use of the weapons. The selections below are included in the book.

The Wireless Signal.

NIETSCHEVO!

It is night on the Polish frontier. Toward the southeast there is a line dotted by the camp fires of the Russians, bivouacking under the cannon of Novogeorgievsk. The night breeze wafts the fumes of the kindly fires across the deserted harvest fields where the peace of utter desolation reigns. Mounted patrols are posted in the distance. Beyond them, scattered over the terrain in a wide arc, are the pickets—lonely soldiers in long tunics peering into the night with bayonet fixed, alert to the slightest sound or movement behind the curtain of impenetrable darkness whence the Prussians are expected.

The night passes without disturbance. The bugles of the fortress call to reveillé. Patrols are relieved. Pickets are changed. As the morning haze begins to lift it discloses a double screen of scouts deployed behind cover in the distance, but as far as the eye can reach there is no sign of an approaching enemy. Toward the north the curtain of mist rises somewhat more tardily, lingering around a few scattered haystacks. The quartermaster is short of forage, and the commander details a squad of men to requisition the fodder. The men advance with teams of wagons. Suddenly the officer reins in his horse. He gives a command. The men unsling their rifles and fix bayonets. The officer dismounts and leads them forward in skirmish line, his eye intently fixed on one of the haystacks which has grown a top piece overnight in the shape of a tall pole with a cross tree. A second command in rasping Russian brings the men up on the double quick. Wires are now visible, glinting through the haze and stretching from the cross tree to the earth. The last fifty yards is covered with a rush. The stack is surrounded by a cordon of bayonets with panting soldiers at the ready.



The officer draws his revolver and shoots into the stack. There is no response. He steps back and deploys his men into a firing squad. A volley is ordered and fired. Still no response, except for a scurrying rustle of mice. The squad pulls up and begins to inspect the stack at close quarters. A hole is discovered on the north side. The officer crawls into it, revolver in hand. He finds himself in a small hollow den and stumbles over a wire. Something clicks and falls heavily to the ground at the same time. The officer withdraws, wire in hand, following the direction pointed by it. With the frail metal thread in his hand the officer is led afield for several hundred yards to a point where the little wire has been spliced into a larger wire running straight to the Russian headquarters.

The officer straightens with a jerk. At last the extent of the damage is clear. The headquarters' field wire has been tapped, and the orders affecting a whole army corps have been flashed by portable wireless to the German field headquarters.

The officer returns to the haystack on the run. The Siberians have pitched the straw with their long bayonets and stand in open mouthed wonder around some strange looking instruments which they have uncovered. None of them know what wireless means; none of them can read. But the officer knows and he can read. He pounces upon a tag tied to the manipulating key of the transmitter. It contains a one word message, written in Russian but in German characters: Nietschevo!*

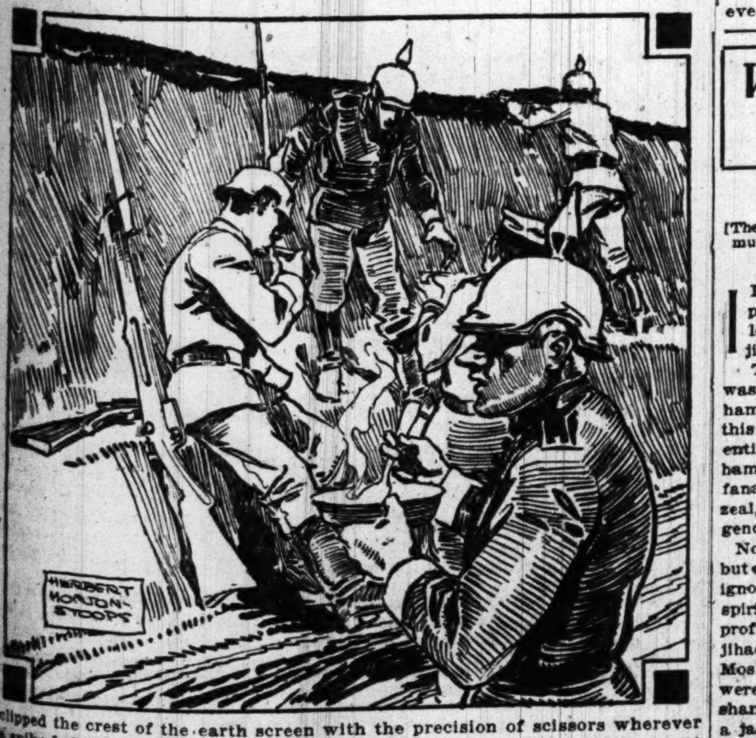
The Supercommissariat.

IT happened during the storm march of the German right wing under Gen. von Kluck against the armored forts of La Fère. The most advanced position was held by a detachment of Prussian fusileers, who withstood the onslaught during a whole day of incessant engagement without food. The men had dug themselves into flat trenches hastily prepared with hand spades. They were practically isolated.

Two companies had been hurled forward to reinforce them, but the distance was too great and the French and English machine guns mowed the men down as a scythe cuts grass. The German rapid fire artillery kept up a continual stream of bursting shrapnel against the British left, which threatened any moment to take the isolated German position by storm. Of the two regiments gambling their lives away in that position there was not one man who did not have a dead comrade beside him.

Most of the men had been shot in the head. The shallow trenches afforded but little shelter against the galling fire of the British, which clipped the crest of the earth screen with the precision of scissors wherever a spike helmet peeped forth. Not only were the Germans exhausted for want of food but their ammunition belts were getting to be as empty as their stomachs, and they were using the belts of slain comrades. Of the 6,000 fusileers in that fire swept position only 2,000 remained, and they were facing what seemed like utter annihilation.



Then something happened that no one will forget who saw it. A big, fat Prussian army cook bobbed up behind a bowlder a few hundred yards behind the German position and fired a rocket with a line attached. A stray bullet bowled the big fellow over like a rabbit at precisely the same moment. That bullet deflected the aim of the ambitious chef and caused the rocket to land exactly in the German trench. Quickly the line was pulled in and an enormous projectile followed. A hail of bullets greeted the advance of the gliding missile, but its armored sides turned every shot very smartly and it was finally hauled into the trench. A tap on the shell, which was of the Skoda 30.2 centimeter caliber, showed that it was not loaded. A wooden cover had been inserted in the blunt end where the priming charge is supposed to be. The cover was dug out, and behold! there was the most appropriate form of ammunition for that exigency in the shape of sausages—sausages packed like sardines—the famous "erbswurst" of the Prussian army that makes dying men stand up and goose step! With a sausage in his left and a rifle in his right it is no wonder that the German fusileers were not routed. Toward night heavy reinforcements reached the position they had so valorously defended.

The fat cook was discovered in the lazaret, where the commander went and saluted him. An Iron Cross now dangles on his proud bosom, but he is not the only cook in the German army who has received and earned it.

Superstrategy.

GENERAL "Vorwärtz!"

A big, square set man is sitting at a table lighted by ornate silver candlesticks. A detail map of the East Prussian boundary is in his lap. Other maps are spread on the table, together with callipers, ferrules, and other instruments.

In the room adjoining are a number of adjutants and staff officers. Some of them are gathered about a large dining table entirely covered by a scale map showing the minutest variation in the terrain under study. The positions of the armies are marked on the map by tape fastened with stickers. Reinforcements under way are identified by arrows. There is a portfolio in which every move made by any and all of the armies is written down with scrupulous exactitude. An ordonnanz is in charge of the big chart and marks with tape any change made in the positions.

At a small table is the telephone exchange, operated by a N. C. O. The wire connects directly with all the army field headquarters. If a general commanding an army has anything to report it must go over this wire, but generals in command of army corps and divisions must first telephone the army commander, and if he thinks the report is of importance also to the commander in chief he orders it relayed over the direct wire.

In a corner is a portable wireless station. Through the window the mast and the antennæ can be seen. The operators are in constant attendance. Messages received are instantly typewritten in triplicate and brought to the commander in chief before any one else is permitted to see them.

The other rooms of the little château are used as living and sleeping quarters for the staff members. The garden lawn has been converted into a military garage, where several high power automobiles, some of them armored, are kept ready for instant use. Sentries are posted at all exits and approaches. A mounted patrol is stabled in the barn.

For several days messages have been pouring into the headquarters, exciting the buzzers on the telephone and the wireless outfits, sending ordonnanzen scurrying from room to room, dispatching couriers by automobile, and adding tape and sticks on the big war map until it resembles a crazy quilt. Gradually corps after corps have swung into line, and army after army has debouched, under incessant fighting, until they occupy the strategic positions selected for them in advance by the big, square set man sitting alone in the little room.

An anxious moment is approaching. The right wing, which was badly mauled by an overwhelming force of Cossacks, has suffered a setback from which it must recover before the entire field army can operate as a unit. The map shows that reinforcements have reached the right wing in the nick of time, but it has not been able to advance as yet and is merely holding its own. The whole campaign, involving more than a million troops, hinges on the fate of the hard fighting right. Every time the receiver clicks and buzzes the officers look up from the map and cease talking, but the expected message does not arrive. The big, square set man is pacing the room with his hands on his back. A frown has settled over his strong, martial face, but he controls himself well and gives no vent to his emotions. For two days he has spoken only in monosyllables, and only in answer to the deferential inquiries of his staff! A lesser man would have been elated at the general advance made by the troops, but this man is aiming for a decisive victory to crush the enemy. Every hour lost by the right wing in reforming and joining his plan of attack may cost him the battle.

Once more the wireless buzzer raps. The operator does not wait to type the message but dashes it off on a blank, and the ordonnanz takes it to the commander in chief. The big man scowls, for the right is not advancing. Suddenly his face brightens with a daring idea. He pens an order commanding the right wing to feign retreat until it appuys on the center, then to advance en masse!

"Gentlemen," he says, "I leave for the front. The battle will be at Tannenberg."

Soon after a high power motor car sweeps out from the terrace of the château carrying an ordonnanz beside the chauffeur and an adjutant sitting beside a big, square set man in a blue-gray mantle. The sentries present arms with a snap, and the big man begins to plan the psychological moment of the battle action. At the very juncture when the feigned retreat shall have led the enemy into a trap and the grand advance of his armies will commence, he, the commander in chief, shall be there to lend spirit and dash by his presence, ready to correct a possible error in strategy and insure the fullest measure of efficient generalship in every division, in every corps, in every army, and as between army and army.

Why the Moslems Ignored the Call for a Holy War.

By El Sheriff Yousouff Wad-El-Heendy.

[The chief ulema of the Ashreff tribe, the grand mufti of Soudan and the chief of the board of Ulema of the Lower Soudan.]

I DEEM it a great honor to be in a position to proclaim to the non-Moslem world why the declaration of jihad (holy war) by the self-appointed Turkish authorities at Constantinople was ignored. For the first time in Mohammedan history we have been afforded this sublime opportunity to prove to the entire non-Moslem world that we Mohammedans are not composed of various fanatical races, imbued with unbridled zeal, and lacking reason and intelligence.

Not only the enemies of our benefactors but even the Turks, betrayed unforgivable ignorance of the true zeal and the noble spirit of the very religion which they profess, in sounding the clarion call for a jihad. Did they think that we, the real Moslems of Africa and the Greater Asia, were subservient tools to be used by a shameless atheist who never was inside a jaamy until the unscrupulous enemies of our just rulers hatched the plot and suggested the fiendish scheme to him?

It appears to me that these handful of conspirators were totally ignorant of the trend of mind of the 90,000,000 Moslems throughout the British empire. Jihad cannot be declared by a soldier of fortune and an adventurer, neither can it be declared to assist others in furthering the malignant designs of the provokers of this war.

An international jihad, as was proposed to the Moslem world, must be declared by the medjlis-i-ulema (the congress of religious heads) of the entire world. It can be declared only after full deliberation of these Mohammedan religious authorities on Moslem canon law. Medjlis-i-ulema can never declare jihad unless it feels, and feels with clean conscience, that the very life of the Mohammedan religion is in jeopardy.

An individual political government may struggle for its rights or even for its existence, and the individual Moslems may form into groups and may assist such Moslem governments out of sympathy, but even then a jihad against the enemy of such a combatant Moslem government is unlawful.

The word "jihad" is the plural of the word "jehd," meaning "a desperate attempt." Therefore "jihad" means "desperate attempts." And again jihad is a collective, universal, last Moslem resort against a universal religious "provoker" or "persecutor." It cannot be declared against a political government just because that political government involves itself with a non-Moslem state, as in the case of the Turkish government against Britain. This is the true interpretation of the Moslem canon pertaining to "Jihad and Its Invocation."

Under these circumstances, how can the Moslem world engage in a desperate bloodshed against one non-Moslem government and fight on the side of another government which is of the same faith and religion? It is beyond the comprehension of all Moslems of any degree of intelligence.

I add a part of a telegram which I had the honor to sign in conjunction with 100 religious leaders of Soudan and which telegram we have addressed to Khartum, to be sent to the government of his Britannic majesty:

The mighty, noble, and superhuman achievements of Great Britain deserve the sincere loyalty of all Sudanese and especially the tribes of Ashraff, of whose number an humble member I am.

We have already offered ourselves and all we possess to battle side by side with Great Britain against Turkey and Germany.

"We are with our present government heart and soul and have no bond with Turkey, which power has followed the advice of Germany and has declared war in conjunction with her. We are firmly convinced that the sole aim of Germany is to cause ruin and destruction. The action of Turkey has been inspired by the advice and example of Germany. We have therefore no connection whatever with the present acts of Turkey or with the war which she is now waging against Great Britain and her allies, and which war is in no way whatever waged for the benefit or interest of Islam or the Mohammedans."

Woman's Business

By Robert Herrick.

WHAT is the best sort of woman, the old fashioned "womanly" woman, or the new fashioned self-reliant woman? Into this trite problem Henry Sydnor Harrison has contrived to put some piquant freshness in his recent story, "Angela's Business." Angela's business, of course, is to secure for herself a husband and, less consciously, a home and babies. The man's business, it seems, in this very up to date romance—for the author describes his story as an "old fashioned romance from a new fashioned point of view"—is warily to escape committing himself to Angela's program until he has convinced himself thoroughly that he and Angela are really about the same business in life. In other words, this sophisticated modern man is quite conscious of all the weapons the old fashioned girl has in her arsenal to use on him—including principally beauty and charm. He slyly slips from her detaining clutch into freedom! But Mr. Harrison's little comedy is not precisely another version of Shaw's theme of the pursuing woman: it is more than that—and less.

At first the Man (for woman's business is assumed to do chiefly with men) bows at the altar of the New Woman, who is a clear headed, able young assistant superintendent of schools. But Mary shows so plainly that Modern Woman (the capitalizing habit is the author's, not mine) can stand on her own feet, without the help of any man, that in masculine pique he turns his attention toward Mary's "sweet, womanly" country cousin, who obviously can't stand on her own feet without clinging to the nearest man. Angela, the sweet and womanly, almost captures this man by the most patent of wiles. There is an episode on a sofa involving some unmeditated kisses that the author treats in a most unromantic manner, quite modern. In the process the kiss between two young persons of the opposite sexes is thoroughly rubbed of all possible bloom: it is seen to be nothing more than a lure, a snare, into which careless, sensual man is likely to tumble with dire consequences.

This modern Samson, alarmed by the fatal kiss, struggles valiantly to break from Angela's silken bonds—if anything so common can be called silk—and finally sneaks out of the mesh by slyly encouraging a less prudent male to substitute himself for Angela's business of getting a man. All this is excellent comedy daintily overlying a serious subject, but toward the close the book becomes more serious. In the course of escaping from Angela's bonds the Man perceives that Angela of beauty and charm is merely selfish and shallow and instinctive, while the outwardly stern Mary conceals reservoirs of filial feeling, is tender and self-sacrificing beneath her competent manner, altogether fit to become the equal mate of a sophisticated modern man. So he tells her; and the story ends with the coming union of these two moderns, equals in mind, and all the rest.

Incidentally, I presume, the man and marriage are supposed to compensate self-sacrificing Mary for having lost her great professional opportunity in order to remain by her mother's side and other personal ambitions of which she was so full at the start of the story. Let us hope so. Also let us hope that this man is wholly satisfied with his modern mate who can so competently get along without him. I forget that he has previously demonstrated his male right of possession by thrashing an objectionable school superintendent who was harsh to the competent Mary. Just what good the thrashing of the school superintendent does to Mary the author forgets to state. At least it shows that modern man has not lost his ancient power of conquest, and so rounds out the proposition symbolically: old fashioned man fought with his fists for his (inferior) old fashioned woman; modern man can fight, at a pinch, for his new, equal, modern woman. Everybody should be satisfied.

MR. HARRISON has played cleverly and amusingly enough with these feminist themes, twirling his pocket flashlight now on this, now on that aspect of the much debated question, What sort of woman is best—for man, of course—the new or the old? And he has answered the question sufficiently to the satisfaction of the new by discovering in her all the attractive old virtues with a lot of brand new, fresh virtues thrown in. And he placates the old by paying ample homage to the substantial worth of the virtues she has always, supposedly, exemplified. According to Mr. Harrison, it is only the new woman who can really make the old fashioned virtues of womanhood effective; the simple, unsophisticated old fashioned girl is seen to be a painted fraud, living on her mother's reputation. It is really she who makes the Disastrous Marriage and the Deserted Home, to keep up Mr. Harrison's habit of emphasizing with capitals. The mere womanly woman, with only beauty and charm, is a sly parasite who still captures those unwary, simple minded males that haven't looked into this woman business.

It is all neat and entertaining, like a demonstration in logic. The only trouble with the little pattern is that it is bookish and unreal. It is a play of types. And types are misleading objects for novelists, although young novelists seem always on the hunt for them. When a young novelist discovers what he thinks to be a real type, when he feels that he has clearly isolated the type in words, as a new germ is in a test tube, he should lock his type up in his desk drawer and leave his laboratory-studio for the open street, where he will encounter not types but men and women—a very different thing; men and women, much alike externally, yet strangely differentiated one from another, no two precisely alike, however much his abstracting and classifying habit of mind may love to group them under his laboratory formula. I don't know how it is with germs, but types are never found in a state of nature.

Thus, the new woman type, so glibly described and discussed in books, argued about as if it really were a human being, is actually never found, unmodified, in living nature. I have never seen a or the new woman. I have met many variations of the woman theme, all the way from the abstract X of old fashioned convention to the abstract Y of new woman freedom, mostly in between these abstract poles somewhere, with fascinating irregularities of development and modification. For life never works like the test tube or the formula. There was always the new woman, ever since Eve gave Adam the apple for his enlightenment. There always will be the old fashioned woman as long as there are men and babies to love, houses to live in, and clothes to wear. That is the plain, simple truth, and all the rest is book talk—clever talk as with Mr. Harrison, or dull talk as in some of the feminist books. If any actual woman contrived to isolate in herself the new woman type, to become wholly and completely like one of Mr. Harrison's supposititious "egoetts," she would be a plain monstrosity or a simple fake like Mary Wing.

BEFORE there was man (consciously), before there was woman (consciously), there was a human being, and this human abides and persists under all sorts of disguises and modifications. As we all know, humans are often selfish, shallow, clinging, dependent; they are also often brave, courageous, intelligent, competent, etc., etc. Just what mixture of all these possible human characteristics any man or woman may have in him or her does not depend on the fact of being man or woman, or on being old fashioned man or new fashioned woman, or the opposite. Mr. Harrison's Angela was a soft, clinging little female sponge, and his Mary was a self-controlled, brave, intelligent human being. Granted, and very good. But life swaps values unconcernedly: we might find an old fashioned Angela, with beauty and charm, who had all Mary's sturdy character, even without her modern education, and such an Angela would make as good a mate for her trapped male as Mary, with all her degrees and competency, could herself!

It is the character that counts, always, the primal protoplasm of the being, not the date or the badge that the human wears.

Doubtless human characters are modified by education, experience, and environment. Women's characters are being modified all the time, like men's, by new ideas and broadening ideals that are coming to them in the perpetually reshaping world. But these characters are not running into the precise little formulas, all new or all old, as in Mr. Harrison's book. It is dangerous to use human beings as pegs in an argument, for one whittles the pegs to fit the argument, instead of modying the argument to fit an infinite variety of human beings.

All of which amounts to saying the commonplace, that a woman can live our modern life to the full and remain a woman in every essential respect, or she can live the modern life to the full in the modern way and be a very selfish and worthless human being. As she always could. Eternally there is for her choice and will, which make character, and eternally there will be. And the fruits of some characters will be sweet and noble, of others sour and base. As always! Meanwhile the writers who are doing most for women in our fresh new world are those who neither formulate nor typify, nor generalize too precisely, like Mr. Harrison, but who, like Mrs. Watts in Jennie Cushing and Mrs. Norris in Susan Brown, are painting actual human women as they come from life, with all the subtle modifications that the life of today is making in human beings.

Which, again, is saying that literature, like life, requires the individual example, not the abstracted formula with a capital letter. As for woman's business, it is today what it always has been—to live.

Message to the United States

By August Schillinger.

The author of the following article is well known to many Chicagoans. He was formerly the German vice consul in Chicago. He is the German consul at Fiume, Austria-Hungary.

AUGUST SCHILLINGER.

I WISH I could describe the enthusiasm throughout Germany in this fight for our existence. Every man is at his post, every man has but one thought, expressed by all his personal energy. We must and we shall win the victory.

The highest price is at stake—the greatness and independence of our country and our national honor. We wanted peace. Our earnest steps to maintain it were in vain. In self-defense—history will be our judge—we drew the sword. A sacred patriotism lives in the heart of every German which no earthly power can destroy. Two million men who were neither in the army nor in the navy offered immediately their military services. There are no distinctions of political factions, of birth, or of wealth. Shoulder to shoulder, the whole nation fights against half the world. Nobody wants to remain behind; every one is eager, whether prince or laboring man, to be in the first lines and to do his share in the protection of our frontiers, our homes, and our women. There is not one family in Germany which could not say with pride, "Our men are at the front." In my own, five men are in the war.

The responsibility for the loss of hundreds of thousands of lives and the destruction of the happiness of innumerable families lies heavily on the shoulders of those who wished this war.

Three great powers, Russia, France, and England, joined in the attempt to destroy a peaceful country. Also, Japan was asked for assistance in this noble work, and negroes and many other colored tribes, to whom the destination of their journey was concealed, were brought to the European battlefields.

Our enemies soon learned that Germany was standing like a rock in all these storms and could not be crushed. They did not let a stone unmoved to try to drag neutral European countries into their nets. But it seemed little enticing to these to become English vassals. So other allies had to be found. "Everything is fair in love and warfare" is not a German proverb. To our mind, a fight must be fought honestly, man to man, with arms good and sharp, of which a warrior must not be ashamed. Such means our enemies chose to use can never be ours.

SHORTLY after England had declared war on Germany our cable to America was cut. When we learned what reports the English government was spreading there we were amazed. We were used to consider the individual Englishman as a man who would find it beneath his dignity to deviate from the truth, and we had drawn our conclusions in favor of the whole nation. England has destroyed this opinion.

There is one thing which is still more disdainful than lies, and that is hypocrisy. It was shouted to all the winds that England—of course, nobody will doubt that the English are the most unselfish people in the world—had to take arms against Germany as Belgium's heroic protectors. The pathos of moral wrath seems rather artificial if one reads the letter of Sir Edward Grey to Sir E. Goschen, dated Aug. 1, 1914, in which he says: "The German ambassador asked me whether, if Germany gave a promise not to violate Belgium's neutrality, we would engage to remain neutral. I replied I could not say that. . . . I did not think that we could give a promise of neutrality on that condition alone."

Naturally it was carefully concealed that since 1906 England had made all detailed arrangements with Belgium about the sending of troops to that country, in case of a Franco-German war, by way of Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne, so that this often mentioned neutrality had long since ceased to exist. The documents found in Brussels are in our hands, and have been published for every one who wishes to know the truth. It was equally well concealed that French troops were in Belgian fortresses long before we crossed the frontier, so that if for our self-protection we had not advanced at once England, France, and Belgium would have pushed their combined forces toward our country. We had informed Belgium twice that we did not come as enemies, and had offered full damages if it let our troops march peacefully through its territory. But the unfortunate country had given up its freedom and had to do as England dictated. Now the Belgians know how utterly they were misled by England, and English prisoners must be protected by our soldiers against the fury of that people.

CAN all bombastic speeches win back the loss of England's prestige as the greatest power on the seas, since a few German cruisers have become the terror of the English merchant marine and the much admired navy of our enemy is not strong enough to protect its commerce?

Can it be denied that, as all other means failed, England tried to starve our country, and so declared war on women and children. And how great was its astonishment and impotent fury when we answered that our submarines would go to work to stop the import to England of contraband and all such goods England had abitrarily declared as contraband.

And what did the English government do? It issued a secret order that, regardless of the offense given thereby to neutral countries, British ships should fly neutral flags, and many of them were painted in the colors of companies of The Netherlands. Twenty-three English steamship companies stopped their service and over 20,000 sailors refused to resume their work.

Can all efforts hide any longer the fact that France and Russia are greatly disillusioned by the comparative lack of active assistance of England in this war. Let us be just. England does not fight for any ideals; its attack on Germany was merely dictated by envy and jealousy which the strides of our industry and commerce and the growth of our navy had aroused. Can there be enthusiasm in a soldier's heart when most of the men of the leading classes stay comfortably at home and indulge in the pleasures of social life while their efforts consist chiefly in trying to induce the poorer classes to sacrifice their lives in the interest of the comfort of the rich for 10 shillings a day?

Does any intelligent Englishman believe the continuous assurances of his government of its confidence in final success when Belgium is in our hands, our troops occupy the northern provinces of France and stand in the center of Poland, and over 800,000 prisoners are in Germany?

Much has been said about our economic conditions. I merely want to state that within a few weeks 4,500,000,000 marks were laid on the altar of patriotism, and a few days ago this sum was followed by 7,000,000,000 marks. The cost of living is not different now than in times of peace, and the savings deposits in the month of February alone amounted to 390,000,000 marks. Life in our cities has its usual aspect, with the one exception that they are filled with troops ready to go to the front.

I wish that Sir Edward Grey, Messrs. Asquith and Churchill, Lord Curzon, and many of their friends may live very long. They may then have a chance to learn better to understand Germany and the German spirit.

As long as there is a German in the field to hold a rifle and to ride a horse, as long as there is a woman at home to nurse our wounded brothers, we shall defend our sacred rights to the last drop of blood.

BIG BANK SUIT LIKELY TO SHAKE UP WASHINGTON

Serious Disclosures Expected in Riggs Action Against McAdoo and Williams.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 1.—[Special.]—Disclosures here today indicate that the trial of Riggs bank suit against Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Controller of the Currency John Skelton Williams is destined to be one of the most sensational episodes of recent history.

Messrs McAdoo and Williams, with the express backing of President Wilson, intend to attack the bank not only as an alleged offender against banking ethics, if not actually against the national banking laws, but as a part of a ring of financiers which, until March 4, 1913, enjoyed special privileges of incalculable value granted by previous administrations.

The bank will endeavor to prove that Messrs McAdoo and Williams sought to wreck it to satisfy private motives of revenge, while dispensing governmental favors to a rival group of financial interests, ambitious to profit from an intimate connection with the administration.

"Pitiless Publicity" to Fore.

At last the country is to be vouchsafed a glimpse of that "pitiless publicity" promised by the president before he was elected. At last this most secretive of all recent administrations is to disclose facts concerning its management of affairs hitherto carefully withheld from the people.

Already Controller Williams has made revelations of the results of bank examinations which, previously, in other cases he solemnly averred would have convicted him of a penal offense. As the matter stands the controller regarded it a penal offense to disclose information regarding banks which the people ought to possess, but no offense at all to reveal such information to defend himself from the attack of the Riggs bank.

Bitter personalities already have been injected into the controversy. To the animadversions upon the bank officials emanating from the treasury former Senator Bailey, the Riggs counsel, has flung back a reply that has sent a ripple of laughter through the departments in which the idiosyncrasies of Controller Williams are known. It was:

Trial Begins on May 12.

Altogether it is apparent that the trial of the bank's injunction suit against Messrs. McAdoo and Williams, which will begin on May 12, will involve a washing of dirty linen of the political and financial variety unparalleled in many a day. It is possible that the result of the litigation will determine the destinies in a large measure of the Wilson administration and of the federal supervision of national banks, if not the new federal reserve banking system itself.

Washington has received indisputable evidence that the banks throughout the country sympathize with the Riggs institution in its fight for liberation from alleged persecution by Controller Williams and his sponsor, Secretary McAdoo. The people at large, apparently, are reserving judgment, realizing that, when powerful politicians and powerful financiers fall out, the ordinary citizen undoubtedly will learn something to his advantage.

Outside of the professional Democratic politicians, who side with the administration, and the professional Republican politicians, who wax enthusiastic over any attack on the party in power, the people seem to be maintaining the attitude of the husband who delivered the famous adjuration, "Go it, wife; go it, bear!"

Will Go to Supreme Court.

The struggle will be a bitter one and long drawn out. Whether or not the lower court restrains the treasury officials from retaining the $5,000 penalty exacted of the Riggs bank for refusal to render certain reports, the loser in the first clash will appeal from the decision, and ultimately the whole question of the prerogatives of the secretary of the treasury and the controller of the currency will be passed upon by the Supreme court.

The trial of the suit will furnish the public the first opportunity of learning the facts regarding many transactions and occurrences which have been the burden of gossip in Washington for many years. The people will be given a peep behind the scenes in the drama of the relations existing between big business and big politics

Prepares to Receive Thousands of Ad Men

JAMES M. DUNLAP

Thousands of advertising men will pour into Chicago on June 20 to participate in the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which will continue until June 24. The Iowa delegation alone has made reservations for 1,000 at the Sherman hotel and the Grand Rapids Advertising club has chartered the steamer City of Grand Rapids, which will bring them here and serve as a floating hotel.

The work of handling the publicity men lies largely in the hands of James M. Dunlap, chairman of the convention committee of the Advertising Association of Chicago.

BANISH SALOONS, PLEADS HEAD OF NAVAL STATION

Commandant Moffett Tells Senators of Pitiful Pleas from Cadets' Parents.

"Gentlemen, it is pitiful the number of letters I receive from parents in all parts of the central west states concerning their sons who are apprentices at the naval station asking me for God's sake to look after their boys, and it has been frequently my duty to write these parents telling them I have been obliged to discharge their boys for drunkenness."

Commandant W. A. Moffett of the naval training station at Great Lakes spoke thus before a subcommittee of the Illinois senate, composed of Senators John Dailey and Morton D. Hull, yesterday. His object was to show the harmful effect of Waukegan and North Chicago saloons on the apprentices.

Boys Learn Drinking Habit.

Commandant Moffett told the senators that so long as any saloons are near the training station, neither the state nor nation can be assured that the 1,000 boys undergoing training are not learning the habit of drink.

"We desire," said the commandant, "a five mile dry zone, so that the atmosphere of drink will not pervade our training school. The fate of the nation may some day depend upon the fitness of these lads. The unsteady hand of a drinker, who formed his habit here, may misdirect a shot that should win a battle."

Apprentices Tell of Drinking.

The commandant corralled more than a dozen boys who had been charged with drinking in Waukegan saloons to testify before the committee. Their evidence showed that drinking in saloons is a frequent occurrence among the cadets.

It was brought out that they purchased intoxicants while in uniform and that they were seldom asked their age. Most of the boys in training are minors. One witness said that at the Log Cabin saloon, where he had been accustomed to buying, he was refused a drink last Monday night, with the information that "they were stirring up a row about selling to sailors, but that he expected it would blow over in a couple of weeks."

DANVILLE SALOONS SHUT DESPITE "WET" MAJORITY.

City Council Refuses to Grant Licenses to Seventy-three Saloons in Town.

Danville, Ill., May 1.—Danville was voted dry by the city council in special meeting today for the first time in the history of the city. The council was called in special meeting at 8 o'clock this morning to act on the renewal of licenses of seventy-three saloons, which expired at midnight last night.

The action of the council means that Danville will be without saloons for at least a year, until another expression of the people is had, when the proposition will be submitted to a vote again.

Lincoln, Neb., Saloons Closed.

Lincoln, Neb., May 1.—The twenty-five Lincoln saloons were closed here today with the expiration of the municipal year. Remonstrances were filed against the granting of licenses until May 10. Rather than take the cases into the courts, saloon men decided to remain closed until the election of a new excise board May 10, which will have power to grant new permits.

GERMAN AIM IS TO WEAN ALLIES FROM BRITAIN

Little Hope of Pressure Being Sufficient, Will Irwin Holds; War Will Drag On.

BY WILL IRWIN.

[Copyright: 1915: By the New York Tribune.]

LONDON, April 20.—Your correspondent has been pinched again. In fact, he has at last established a record. I (to adopt at once the person proper to a war correspondent) was in the first party of correspondents arrested by the Germans during this war. But I shared the honor with three others. Later I was arrested by the Dutch on the charge of being a correspondent. It is quite a unique honor to be arrested by a neutral nation, but again I had to share it with others.

Now I stand alone on my dizzy eminence. I am, so far as I know, the only correspondent whom it took two great nations to pinch. I was arrested simultaneously by the French and the British, the former taking charge of my baggage and the latter of my person.

My person fared better than my baggage. It was allowed to go to a hotel on parole, and later its cruel jailers invited it to dinner, where they tortured it with Turkish cigarets of a kind not usually to be obtained in France, and old port.

The baggage never appeared again until I was dispatched to England, a comparatively free man. Consequently, I slept in my underclothes, and I combed my hair with a comb which the corporal of the guard had carried on the retreat from Mons and had been carrying ever since. The whole thing grew out of a delicious comedy of errors which I cannot relate now because of the censor.

Germany Looking for Terms.

Having now qualified as a war correspondent, let me proceed to the business in hand.

This war is in mid-channel. The situation, as I take it, resembles roughly the situation in our civil war, when Lincoln during 1863 (wasn't it?) held his conference with the leaders of the south.

There is no moral doubt Germany has been looking for terms. Everything indicates that, circumstantial evidence as well as "inside information." Of course, these overtures have not been made directly or even officially. Possibly the neutral powers have not been consulted.

It is more likely that two strange gentlemen have just happened to register at a hotel in Switzerland or Italy, and have just happened to meet at dinner in a private room to discuss the future of the war—purely theoretically, of course.

Whatever terms Germany has offered have undoubtedly been unsatisfactory to the allies as a whole. So far as the general alliance is concerned, the war will probably go on.

But there has been a special effort to tempt France and Russia into deserting the alliance. It is suspected that France could quit the war now at great present advantage—an increase of territory, probably the security of Belgium, possibly some kind of indemnity.

Germany wants to free herself to attack that enemy which is frankly the object of all popular German hate and all official German ambitions—England.

French Fortitude Surprise.

Every one who has observed France during this war has been astonished by the fortitude of the French—a fortitude hardly expected in a people so highly civilized, so polished and so essentially peaceful. It has never been so strong as in its apparent answer to German overtures.

The French have always maintained that they entered this war not so much for the old, wistful dream of winning back the lost Alsace as for the permanent security of France.

If it stops now, on a minor advantage, it will have the work to do over again in the next generation—or so it feels.

But the temptation is great and special. It did not want war in the beginning, and it does not like it now. The men who must decide for France have their sons out there on the line. If they have not had other sons killed they know what has happened to the sons of their neighbors.

Here is a chance to gain temporary advantage for France—and to save the lives of those sons. I cannot imagine a stronger bribe being offered to any man. Yet they seem to have shut their eyes and ears, these leaders of France, and to have made the heroic decision.

CAN'T CONSIDER PEACE NOW, SAYS T. P. O'CONNOR

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By Central News.]

LONDON.—The opinion of all England is in hearty agreement with the opinion expressed by President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard that peace at the present time cannot be considered.

Seeing in the cabled extracts from newspapers of the United States the discussion that is going on there I have sought expressions from leading and typical figures of the different political parties of England. I found, in the first place, some disinclination to discuss the question of peace terms, not because of any doubt or indecision existing in the minds of those interviewed but because we have all felt that the futile proposals by Germany's mouthpieces in America have already been justly appraised and rejected by the sound political instinct of the American people.

The most representative and the most respected spokesmen of American opinion have said what all here feel, in much the same words that would be employed by Great Britain's political leaders.

All those whom I have interviewed have felt that it would be unfair to America and even unfair to Germany if there were left the least doubt as to Great Britain's feeling on the question of peace terms.

Seeks Unofficial Opinion.

I deliberately refrained from interviewing the members of the ministry, in order that what expressions I procured might be those of men independent of official ties. Asquith's speech in the Guild hall last November sufficiently indicated the views which he yet holds. Sir Edward Grey, secretary of foreign affairs, has indicated in his speeches virtually the same opinion.

The Rt. Hon. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, writes me: "In my opinion any discussion of terms of peace is not only premature at the present time but is futil so far as the British empire is concerned The only advantage we can gain in this war is security as to the future. No terms of peace conceivable at present would give that security."

Must Whip Germany Good.

Austen Chamberlain, who has inherited all his father's political sagacity writes me:

"I agree with President Eliot that it is worse than useless to talk of peace while the forces which provoked the war and which would provoke another at their own time remain unchecked. Germany is still in occupation of territory which she has occupied in defiance of the laws of nations and of her own pledged word."

I pass to the Labor party. Arthur Henderson, who has virtually acted as leader since Ramsay MacDonald took up his somewhat hostile attitude in regard to the war, gives me this expression:

"I can only repeat that I am opposed to any proposals or any terms on the part of the government at present."

Walsh Leader in Labor Party.

"I cannot imagine anything more visionary, more ill timed or more calculated to be destructive of acceptable and lasting peace than the formulation of peace terms at this moment," he said.

George Barnes, a leading trades union official, who has for many years represented a Glasgow constituency largely by the Irish vote, with whom he is popular, replied to my query, "Tommy rot." He apologized for the unparliamentary phrase and proceeded: "Such proposals are calculated to do more harm than good. There is one way of ending the war. That is by putting down German militarism forever. Anything else will be merely a respite."

The picturesque figure of John Ward, tall, robust, and bearing traces of the two occupations to which he has devoted his life, "navvyin" and soldiering (he fought in Africa when Kitchener was making his early fame and he has recently helped in forming a battalion of "navvies"), appeared in the house of commons recently resplendent in the uniform of a captain. He was more emphatic than the rest.

"The time to talk of peace is when we are in Berlin, not before," he declared.

GRAINS SCORE SHARP UPTURN

EXPORT SALES SMALL.

Wheat deliveries were 940,000 bu, which were a little larger than expected; but they had but little effect on the market. After a slightly easier tone right at the start there was general buying by commission houses and later shorts bought freely, giving the market a sharp rally, the July being the leader. Net gains for the day were ⅝@1¼c. The May did not show much snap. Trade was light in the near month and without much feature.

Ware-Leland and Wagner were the leaders in the July buying. Early Shearson-Hammill and Bartlett-Frazier were sellers of the May. The cash trade here was slow and sales were only 80,000 bu. Offerings from the country were light. Receipts, however, continue liberal, and primary receipts were 614,000 bu, compared to 422,000 bu a year ago.

Rains General in West.

There was no rain of importance in the territory east of the Mississippi, but there were excellent showers all west and southwest. The northwest was generally fair. Predictions were for more unsettled weather in the middle west. Crop reports were favorable and in Oklahoma the prospect is for a record yield. The condition in that state has been raised six points to 92 in the last month and there is ample moisture for the maturing of the crop. Missouri May condition was 90, against 102 a year ago and 82 in June last year.

In the northwest crop advices continue favorable as a rule. Foreign news was not of an influential kind. The Dardanelles operations are making fair progress, but it is admitted it will be a long time before the Russian grain fleet is released.

Liverpool Tone Easier.

Liverpool cables were unchanged to 1d off. The spot demand abroad was not quite so keen, and the big stocks afloat caused some reluctance in buying. The seaboard reported 50,000 bu wheat sold for export. Duluth stocks showed a decrease of 1,686,000 bu for the week, and it is expected the visible will show a big decrease on Monday. Primary receipts for the week were 4,552,000 bu, against 2,576,000 bu a year ago.

Clearances were 776,000 bu, against 542,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts were 162 cars, with 187 cars the inspection yesterday. Northwest receipts were 163 cars, against 217 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 153 cars, compared to 236 cars a year ago.

Corn Makes Good Gain.

The corn market was strong after the opening. There was commission house buying of a good class and shorts were also free buyers. Resting prices were ⅝c to ⅞@1c higher. Cash prices were ¼@⅝c up and there was a moderate demand, sales being 40,000 bu. Offerings from the country were moderate. Primary receipts were 4,573,000 bu for the last week, against 1,890,000 bu a year ago. For the day primary receipts were 759,000 bu, compared to 394,000 bu a year ago. Deliveries were larger than expected at about 2,000,000. Clearances were 269,000 bu for the day. Cables were unchanged from Liverpool, which was affected by the more favorable Argentine reports. Weather map showed general rain in the western half of the belt.

Oats Deliveries Heavy.

Oats deliveries were about 3,000,000 bu, or about the same as expected. After the opening there was general buying of oats regardless of the big deliveries which were supposed to have been paid for largely by shippers. Cash prices were firm and about ½c higher. Sales were only 115,000 bu. Offerings from the country were moderate. Selling was scattered. Primary receipts were 529,000 bu and for the day they were 3,346,000 bu, against 2,463,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were quite liberal at 488,000 bu. Receipts here were 150 cars, with 59 cars inspected yesterday.

Hog Products Are Steady.

Provisions deliveries were large, but had small effect on the market, as it was expected they would be liberal. The cash trade is fair. Commission houses and shorts were fair buyers of products and offerings were not heavy. Hog prices were steady to 5c off and receipts were 12,000, with 32,000 expected on Monday and 130,000 for the week. Western receipts were 452,400, compared to 402,000 a year ago.

HOGS.

Receipts of 11,000 hogs at Chicago yesterday rather exceeded the expectations of the trade and the market was weak to 5c lower, closing at the bottom. Shippers paid up to $7.80 for offerings, while packers bought animals in the quarantine division at $7.70 and lower, taking the bulk at $7.45@7.70. Pigs showed little change for the day, selling largely at $6.50@7.00 for prime shipping weights. The hog trade was active at the prices and there were no animals left unsold at the finish.

Final prices made hogs mostly 10c higher than a week ago, while pigs were unchanged to 25c higher. The average price of all hogs received here this week was placed at $7.50, against $7.55 last week. Receipts for the week aggregated around 121,000 head, against 105,700 head last week and 118,300 head a year ago. Shipments for six days were 18,200, against 14,200 last week and 30,151 a year ago.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 3,600; Swift & Co., 1,500; Sulzberger & Sons, 1,000; Morris & Co., 800; Anglo-American, 1,000; Hammond, 900; Boyd-Lunham, 400; Western Packing company, 300; Miller & Hart, 500; Independent Packing company, 600; Brennan Packing company, 700; butchers, 300; shippers, 1,000; total, 12,600.

CATTLE.

Steadiness pervaded the cattle market at Chicago this week and final quotations showed little change from those in effect a week ago. Common, heavy steers finished at a decline of 10c, while practically all other classes of steers were unchanged. Beef cows and heifers also held on a steady basis, while dairy cows lost 25@40c. Bulls were without change and calves declined 25@50c under pressure of the biggest receipts of the year to date. Cattle supply for the week exceeded that of the previous week by more than 2,000 head, and the fact that values showed stability in the face of this increase was taken to indicate a broadening of the dressed beef trade. Steers topped the week at $8.75, compared with $8.80 last week and $9.50 a year ago. The bulk sold at $7.25@8.25.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 123,600, against 116,400 the preceding week, 107,900 a year ago, and 106,700 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 2,001,000, against 1,978,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Lambs touched new high record marks at Chicago this week, but had a reaction before the close, and finished unchanged to 10@15c lower than a week ago. Sheep and yearlings did not hang up any new records and closed 10@50c lower for the week, after selling at stronger prices at the beginning of the period. At the high time Colorado lambs in fleece sold up to $11.15, or 55c higher than the previous record established in 1912. Prime fed western lambs at $11.00 were 50c higher than the previous high record for that class. Receipts for the week were the smallest in several weeks and less than 50 per cent of the arrivals for the corresponding week last year. Shipments showed a decrease of nearly 50 per cent for the week and were not 20 per cent of last year's.

Farm Mortgages.

While dry farming in the western part of Oklahoma and Kansas and all that section of the plains is accounted somewhat too uncertain in returns to make mortgages conservative and desirable, there is much so-called dry farming done in other parts of the country which brings good crops every year. To the north in western Dakota and Montana and also west of the Rocky mountains dry farming methods are used with satisfactory results. In parts of Washington and Idaho such methods have been used with success nearly half a century.

The amount of rainfall is probably somewhat greater than further south, but the chief advantage seems to be that the precipitation comes regularly every year and at the time of year when it does the most good. The fact that the average rainfall of a region is only sixteen or eighteen inches a year does not necessarily condemn it from the investor's standpoint. If most of this rain comes in the spring and early summer it will do as much good as twenty-two inches half of which comes in the late autumn.

In regions where the rainfall seems a little scant the record of crops raised for a series of years is the only reliable test. If the farmers sow wheat annually and expect to get small crops usually and "make a killing" every three or four years let people who live in that part of the country and are familiar with its possibilities do the financing. But if the land produces a crop every year mortgages are safe.

In the regions where rainfall is limited the lower lands often are irrigated. Mortgages on irrigated fruit farms call for caution. The investor may be told what large crops are produced and how many hundred dollars an acre the land is worth. This valuation is just where the trouble arises. The land is valued on the basis of wonderful crops and high prices that probably will not be obtainable for many years. The result is that mortgages are too large and are just as likely as irrigation bonds to end in loss.

One other great pitfall for the investor is worn out land. A farm may show a fair record of crops when a mortgage is made, but if the farmer is shiftless, lets the fertility of the land run down and fails to keep buildings and fences in good condition the security soon becomes impaired. The mortgagee, unaware of what is going on, perhaps renews the loan without investigation and when it finally falls due he may find a farm not worth as much as the amount of the mortgage. Reasonable vigilance will prevent losses from this cause.

Marconi's Wireless.

E. R. M., Prescott, Wis.—Marconi's Wireless Telegraph company, limited, was incorporated in England in 1897 to acquire the Marconi patents. In 1900 it sold its rights to operate on board ships to the Marconi International Marine Communication company, limited, and in payment acquired capital stock of the latter. The company also has large holdings in the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company of America, the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company of Canada, and similar companies in Russia, France, Belgium, Argentina, Spain, and Germany. The parent company has £1,000,000 capital stock and recently paid a 7 per cent dividend off 1914 on its £250,000 preferred shares. The company owns shares of subsidiaries of a par value of £1,594,583 and a book value of £856,119. Apparently the parent company sold rights to the subsidiaries, taking in exchange enough stock to give it control in each case. This inflated the capital stock of the subsidiaries so that they are not able as yet to earn much in the way of dividends. The American Marconi pays 2 per cent a year.

American Chicle.

A. K. B.—The American Chicle company pays 1 per cent a month regular dividends on common stock and 1 per cent extra, usually every other month. It has outstanding $8,000,000 of common stock, also $3,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred. Net profits in 1913 were reported at "about $1,600,000"; surplus after dividends, $340,000. The company is a consolidation of a number of chewing gum manufacturing concerns. Its balance sheet of Dec. 31, 1913, showed assets as follows: Real estate, $519,984; machinery, $324,524; stock, $1,520,144; cash and receivables, $3,419,178; good will and patent rights $8,128,607. Evidently there is not much back of the common stock except the success of the business. The company makes only meager reports. The common stock is not a conservative savings investment.

Brief Answers.

H. H. C., Wilmette, Ill.—The Coal Products Manufacturing company has outstanding $600,000 capital stock and $550,000 of bonds. It makes no reports of earnings or dividends. No opinion can be formed as to its bonds. As between different denominations of bonds there is no choice except the objection to small bonds because of the extra work of cutting coupons. Sometimes, too, bonds of $1,000 size can be had at a slightly better price than small ones of the same issue.

F. P.—The stock of an old industrial company with a long record of dividends paid is sometimes a fairly safe investment, but the stock of a new concern not yet established can be only a speculation as far as the small investor is concerned. The oil refining business is no sure thing. There are independent companies whose stock is worthless as well as independents which pay good dividends.

ROCK ISLAND MAY PASS INTEREST

Default on $99,936,000 First and Refunding 4s Next October Expected.

WOULD UPSET AMSTER.

It is understood to be the present plan of the insiders in Rock Island to default the semi-annual interest due Oct. 1 on the first and refunding 4 per cent bonds. If this plan carries it will of course wipe out the present standing of the stockholders and also place between them and reorganization the $20,000,000 5 per cent debentures. The first and refunding bonds would then come into control of the property.

The authorized issue of first and refunding 4 per cents is $153,000,000, of which $99,936,000 have been issued. The semi-annual disbursement on these will amount to $1,998,720. But prior in date of interest payment is the semi-annual disbursement on the $20,000,000 5 per cent debentures. This will fall due on June 1 next and amounts to $500,000.

The market price of the two issues mentioned indicates the uncertainty obtaining with reference to their position. The first and refunding 4s are quoted at 68 and the twenty year debenture 5s around 25. A few months ago the $75,000,000 collateral trust 4s were quoted around the figure that now obtains for the debentures. The collateral trust has given way to the stock, which is selling around 25.

In Way of Financing.

One of the reasons advanced by insiders for defaulting interest on the refunding bonds is that adequate financing cannot be otherwise arranged for because of the terms of that issue, a clause in the mortgage securing which reads:

"The railway company shall not and will not create or suffer to be created, while any of the first and refunding mortgage bonds are outstanding, any mortgage, pledge, or other lien or charge subsequent to the lien of this indenture, upon the mortgaged and pledged premises or any part thereof."

The probability of foreclosure under this mortgage will make much more difficult the position of N. L. Amster and friends who are seeking to maintain the property without receivership.

Debenture 5s Committee.

A protective committee for holders of the debenture 5 per cent bonds has been formed, consisting of Seward Prosser, president of the Bankers' Trust company, New York, chairman; E. K. Boisot, vice president of the First Trust and Savings bank, Chicago; A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the Chase National bank, New York; Edwin G. Merrill, president of the Union Trust company, New York, and James Speyer. B. W. Jones, 14 Wall street, New York, is secretary of the committee. Deposits of the bonds are not called for.

New York Bank Figures.

The New York bank statement showed the largest expansion in loans in several months. The increase was $30,504,000. Apparently, however, the borrowing resulted in a correspondingly large increase in deposits, for the latter item showed a gain of over $39,000,000. The net result was a decrease of $854,500 in the surplus reserve. The excess reserve item, however, stands $170,180,370.

IRREGULAR DAY IN WALL STREET

"War" Shares Still Hold Stage, but Fail to Make New High Records.

U. S. STEEL ADVANCES.

Total sales of stocks, 508,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $2,250,000.

NEW YORK, May 1.—In its main aspects today's short session of the stock exchange was largely a repetition of recent days, in the sense that a very considerable part of the turnover was again in so-called war stocks and allied shares.

Westinghouse and others in that class constituted the most prominent features, although they failed to make new high records, and, in fact, reflected selling for profits at the end. Studebaker was strongest of the motor group, with a new high record on rumors of dividend prospects.

Standard stocks were more or less neglected throughout, and for the most part fell under yesterday's lowest quotations, though showing some betterment at the close. United States Steel was the only one of the speculative favorites to show relative steadiness, rising to its best in the final dealings.

The market was more than an ordinarily professional affair, much of the trading representing week end settlement of outstanding contracts. The course of prices from time to time suggested a renewal of bearish operations in some of the more vulnerable issues.

General news of the day, which dealt with improved conditions in many lines of trade, particularly textiles and steel, together with latest war developments, played little if any part in the day's operations.

The bond market was even more irregular than the stock list, on a minimum of trading. United States coupon and registered 2s and Panama 3s declined ¼ per cent on call during the week.

Mercantile paper, 3½@3¾. Sterling exchange, easier; sixty day bills, 4.7650; for cables, 4.7960; for demand, 4.7920. Bar silver, 50½. Mexican dollars, 38½.

RUSS PRISONERS GIVE EXAMPLE OF FORTITUDE

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

II.—THE ENGLISH CAN'T SAY "NITCHEVO."

VAALS, Holland, April 11.—The only happy Russian prisoners I have seen are the wounded ones who lie in German hospitals near the front, free from vermin at last, and by their beds a pot of ointment which will insure their continuance in that blissful state. It takes more to make a Russian happy than it does a Frenchman.

For the rest the Russian prisoners are swarthy men in uniforms of a dirty grayish brown—the least dressy color imaginable—and always they are clearing away the debris of bombardment, mending the roads, or peering out from beneath the bars of churchyard gates, the national word that is forever on Russian lips—"Nitchevo" [" It doesn't matter "] in their patient eyes even when their tongues do not utter it.

Work on Elbe Canal.

Thousands of the Russian prisoners who have been transported to Germany have been put to work on the Elbe canal, which is being built at a cost of $150,000,000. They are well paid.

I never saw a Russian prisoner give a sign of resentment nor heard one utter a word that sounded like complaint. "Nitchevo" tells their whole story, and the Germans have caught it up from them, applying it to many an irksome situation that is most easily borne by pretending that "it doesn't matter."

Thus the sad men in dirty brown have taught us all a lesson in fortitude. The plight of the wounded prisoners in transit is often so bitter hard that only a Russian could say "Nitchevo" and mean it.

Lowicz Church a Prison.

A sorrier mess I never saw than that in which wounded Russians had to dwell during some days at Lowicz before railway cars could be spared for moving them into Germany. Their prison was the abbey church, and the floor of the abbey church was a kind of morass of melting snow, sodden straw, and bloody bandages.

The night fires had burned low and around them lay the silent wounded, one man in each group who had a good leg or a sound arm occupying himself in scuffing or throwing snow and wet straw around the edges of the fire when it showed signs of spreading over the floor.

"This is very dangerous," said "lieber Putz," the Munich artist who was painting with icy fingers in one of the side chapels. But what was to be done? The wounded could not be allowed to perish for lack of fire and, other than this huge church, there was no housing for them in Lowicz.

Captains' Ctories Unreliable.

The stories of prisoners of war are of value, as a rule, only as indicating a state of mind. As information they amount to nothing, and a correspondent soon learns to discount them by more than half—and then throw aside his notes of them.

Sometimes prisoners lie to save their pride, sometimes to ingratiate themselves with their captors by telling things they think their captors want to hear, and sometimes just to while away the time. A favorite remark of extenuation by prisoners is:

"Your artillery was too much for our nerves. We could have fought you hand to hand, but we could not stand the eternal pounding of your long range guns."

And again:

"We were so hungry we had to let you take us. Nothing to eat for four days. Hunger beat us."

Russian officers say that Russian soldiers caught in a tight place throw down their arms with the cry, "Prussian comrades, don't shoot," and seem thoroughly glad to have their troubles over. I don't know this at first hand.

Expected No Quarter.

Next to the Russian the Turcos, who cannot speak French, are perhaps the most easily taken prisoner, but for a reason that is no discredit to them. When the officers who can give them their orders in their own dialects are killed these soldiers are doubly lost because they cannot instantly comprehend the orders of officers who speak only French.

It was also their conviction in the early days of the war that no quarter would be given and that they would be killed instantly they were captured. This thought, far from making them fight more desperately, was only a source of demoralization. Their helplessness in the event of the loss of their officers and their tendency to panic frequently cause the German officers to remark: "These Algerians are only food for cannon."

Grumbling Offends Comrades.

Once they calm down, the Belgian prisoners are pleasant, chatty fellows with a good deal of manner, and once they get over the sulks the English are agreeable and communicative and undeniably of good pluck. I never saw but one pusillanimous one and he was growling about ill usage in the manner of a letter to the Times—with rude cockney trimmings.

"You wyte!" he muttered. "You wyte till they 'ear about this in England! Nothink to eat! Nothink to drink. B——y blasted country! you wyte!"

He was making rather a pitiable show of himself, and his comrades did not at all care for it.

"Stow it!" said one, and the proud Briton stowed.

Still, he was very bedraggled and weary and he had plenty to grumble about.

For one man of that kidney you will come upon twenty Englishers of the right sort—like a battered youth from Yorkshire with whom I visited from the free side of the freight car door.

"Any of you heavily wounded?" I asked.

Wounded Have Hard Journey.

This talk was on the French frontier of Belgium, and considering the weary miles the man had yet to be trundled in the evil smelling freight car the next thing he said was sad enough, or rather the answer to it had to be. What he said was, "Are we in Germany yet?"

Nay, they were not, but nobody had the heart to tell them that what with side trackings and delays for the dressing of wounds it probably would be another forty-eight hours before they would be across the little kingdom and into the Rhineland.

It is beyond question that in the early days of the war—the days of their disasters in Belgium and France—the English had a poor opinion of their French allies an opinion the Germans then shared.

"They will not accept battle," said a German officer to me at Beaumont. "'Today,' we say, 'it comes,' and we have been saying that for three days. But they fall back. You yourself have seen the highway and the signs of wild withdrawal. As individuals there are no braver men. As an army they are scared."

English Prisoner's Story.

An English prisoner spoke in the same strain of the French, though, as has been hinted, the narratives of prisoners of war must be taken with a whole handful of salt.

What this Englishman—a mannerly, clean speaking private—said, was this:

"We had been seventeen hours on our feet. Most of that time in the trenches, with the water up to our knees. The French withdrew, leaving our wings unprotected. The movement was not known by us. They are always doing that. They withdraw without warning and leave us to face the music."

The only unsoldierly aspect I have observed in the relatively few English prisoners who have come under my eye is the condition of their teeth. It is shocking, and in sharp contrast to the gleaming teeth of the Saxons whom I have seen guarding the English.

Such a thing is very important, as every German soldier knows. That is why dentists all over Germany are giving their Sundays and holidays to treating without charge the teeth of the wounded soldiers in the hospitals and the soldiers who are training.

Never saw a year like it!

Over a year ago, when the engineers finished the last tests on the 1915 Sixes and said "Go ahead" to the Manufacturing Division, we knew the 1915 SIX was good. So we started in to make a whole lot more Sixes than we sold in 1914. War times—yes, and the calamity-howlers busy as usual. And yet thro' it all the sales of this Studebaker SIX kept jumping so from month to month that we wish we had built twice as many.

For there's going to be a BIG shortage of Studebaker Sixes months before the season closes.

It's simply that the public has stamped its "O.K." on the car. At $1385 it gives all that a SIX can give. It's as handsome a car as you ever laid eyes on—a big, roomy, massive car—long, low-lying and with graceful lines that flow unbroken from radiator to tail-lamp—not faddish, but refined and in perfect taste. And with a satiny lustre that STAYS bright.

Then, too, Studebaker SIX has made good on the roads. It was the FIRST of the Sixes at less than $2,000. Other Sixes have followed—slashing prices until most of them only cost a couple of hundred dollars more than a Studebaker.

But not one of them has the experience that Studebaker has—or will have it for one or two years to come. For you must remember that this was the FIRST of the Light Sixes—and this SIX has been on the roads THREE years. In over 20,000 owners' hands, Studebaker engineers have been able to watch this SIX—to see where this and that little improvement might be made.

And it takes time and study like that to get Balance into a car such as this Studebaker SIX has—to get the marvelous riding qualities that this Six has—to smooth away the wrinkles and develop a motor as silent and powerful and vibrationless as this Studebaker motor—to develop the wonderful accessibility that you find in this car.

You can't just sit down and design such qualities into a car. Takes the roads to make designs GOOD. And Studebaker is the only manufacturer of Light Sixes that has had that opportunity to study its cars on the roads in any numbers and for any adequate time. And so when you look at the car itself and what it has accomplished and what stands back of it, you can appreciate the reasons for its wonderful popularity—and for our saying that if you want this SIX the public has O.K.'d—you'd better see your Dealer NOW.

No other summer resort worthy of the name is as close.
The closest popular Michigan resorts are more than 100 miles distant from Chicago by rail, or 80 miles by boat.
Thirty-nine miles along the Illinois shore to the North takes one merely to the center of the millionaire settlements of Lake Forest, Highland Park, etc., where lots sell for thousands of dollars each.
Thirty-nine miles along the Lake Shore to the South takes one among the industrial cities monopolized by steel mills, cement works, oil refineries, etc.
To the Southwest and West there are no summer resorts, no bodies of water bigger than puddles after summer showers. And the lakes to the Northwest on the Wisconsin border are much farther distant from Chicago than is Cedar Lake.

CUB RECRUIT HURLS MATES TO 3-1 VICTORY

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1.—The Cubs made a clean sweep of their two game series here by beating the Pirates, 3 to 1, today in a frigid zone exhibition. Pete Standridge went the full route like a veteran and outpitched three slab opponents. He held the Pittsburghers down to seven hits and would have shut them out with better support.

Good let one of the seven safeties get away from him with a man on first in the fourth and it let in the only Pirate tally. Only three safeties were made off Standridge in seven innings, but the locals pressed harder toward the finish.

Steadies When Pirates Threaten.

They had men on third and second with two out and Hinchman up in the eighth. Pete stopped Hinchman with a pop fly. Two more singles in the ninth put the Pirates within reach of a tie, but again Standridge steadied and retired the last man on a fly.

Adams, who started against the Cubs, lasted only four rounds, during which six hits and all of Chicago's runs were made. Lejeune contributed to the good cause by booting a couple of singles. Manager Clarke substituted Kantlehner on the rubber in the fifth and he blanked the Cubs until he gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth. Conzelman had a checkered career in the ninth. He struck out three Cubs, but they had the bases filled on two passes and a safe bunt with only one gone. Standridge and Good were the men who struck out in the pinch.

Lejeune gave the Cubs the jump in the second after an uneventful first round. Zim sent a single crashing to center and it squirted away from Lejeune, giving Heine third base before any one was out. Saier went out on a soft bounder to Johnston, but Williams responded with a long fly on which Zim trotted home.

Cubs Get Two More.

The Cubs landed on Adams hard in the fourth, but scored only two runs with three singles, a triple, and an error. Schulte led with a single and reached second on Lejeune's boot, out was run out on Zim's rap to Adams. Saier whaled one over center for three cushions, scoring Zim. Williams singled to left, scoring Saier, but was out himself trying to stretch his hit to second. Bresnahan singled, but Phelan fouled out.

Standridge held the Pirates to one hit and a pass for three innings, but they got to him for a run in the fourth with the aid of Good. Hinchman singled with one out. Wagner poked a safety through to right and Good fumbled it, letting Hinchman score and Wagner reach second. Lejeune popped out. Schang walked and Gerber skied.

Kantlehner Relieves Adams.

Kantlehner replaced Adams in the fifth and not another man reached first on either side until two were out in Pittsburgh's sixth. Then Phelan's wide throw gave Wagner a life at first, but Honus was caught stealing a moment later.

Two down in the seventh, Phelan singled and Standridge walked, but Good was called out on strikes. In the eighth Schulte singled and stole second with only one out, but was nipped at third when Zim missed the ball in a hit and run play. Heine then popped out.

Costello took Kantlehner's stick and popped out in the home eighth. Then singles by Johnston and Baird, with Carey's out sandwiched between them, put men on third and first with two out. Baird stole second, but Hinchman popped the side out. Score:

BY MAROON.

The University of Iowa ball players won another success by downing the Maroons yesterday on Stagg field, 7 to 4. The game was a hangover contest, the Hawkeyes having tied, 5 to 5, in their first game with Chicago three weeks ago. Deardorf and Des Jardien faced each other again yesterday, the little left handed Iowan getting the better of the argument.

Errors by Maroons, coupled with hits by Iowans, gave the visitors an early lead. Iowa totaled seven hits to the Maroons four. All but one of the visitors' bingles were utilized in making runs.

Deardorf was the hero of the contest, pulling himself out of three trying situations when the Maroons had two or three on bases. The pitcher made the only extra base hit with a double in the seventh that drove in two runs. Score:

Illinois, 4; Northwestern, 1.

Coach Huff's Illinois pennant chasers boosted their percentage yesterday by a 4 to 1 victory over the Purple. The contest developed into a brick-top pitchers' duel between Red Juel and Red Gunkel, with the Illinois slab artist having slightly the better fortune in the breaks of the game. The Purple pitcher allowed six hits and fanned eight, while Gunkel held the home team to four bingles and whiffed seven. Score:

WHALES DOWN BUFFALO, 2 TO 1, IN FRIGID FRAY

BY SAM WELLER.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 1.—Mike Prendergast played the part of Eskimo for the Chicago Whales this afternoon and fed the Buffalo Blues the blubber ball, which proved distasteful, and only one Buffalo stepped to the plate for a full meal. The final count of the frigid contest was 2 to 1 in favor of Chicago.

Hanford, Zwilling, and Fischer did all the hitting for the Whales, netting seven safe swats. Hanford and Fischer each contributed a double. The few fans who were brave enough to sit through the contest, which was a brilliant exhibition despite the terrible cold, bemoaned the fact that their own Charlie Hanford, a member of their team last year, had become an enemy.

Hanford Poles Three Hits.

The Englishman played a great game against his former teammates. He was given a hand the first time up and responded with a two base wallop to the left field fence. He was unable to locate the pill on his next visit and fanned, but in his next two trips to the pan he delivered safe swats, giving him three safe ones in four trials.

Dutch Zwilling scored the second run for Chicago and got two of the hits, while Catcher Fischer poled a double and two singles. Leslie Mann was a victim of Anderson's curves and fanned his first three times at bat. He was relieved by Flack in the eighth inning and Max made a great catch for the final out in the ninth inning which saved the game for the Whales.

Farrell Stars in Field.

Johnny Farrell covered himself with glory by sensational fielding and saved the game on several occasions through his stops and perfect throws. He had five assists and two putouts.

Prendergast started a trifle unsteady and one run was garnered off his benders in the opening session, but after that he was as stingy as a miser, allowing only three scattering bingles in the last eight innings.

Both Score at Start.

Hanford gave the Whales a start with a two bagger in the first inning. Charley stole third and scored on Zwilling's single to right. This lead was not held long, as the Blues evened matters in their turn at bat. Prendergast was wabbly at the start and walked Dalton, the first man up. He was pushed along by Downey's single and scored on Hofman's slam to center. Chase hit into a fast double play, Zeider to Farrell to Beck.

The Whales took the lead in the fourth, when Zwilling beat out a slow roller to Smith and moved up on Fischer's single. Both advanced on Fritz' sacrifice. Zeider attempted the squeeze play and when Smith fumbled the ball Zwilling counted. Beck was passed and Farrell forced Fisher at the plate. Prendergast ended the inning by fanning. That ended the scoring for the day.

MAHAN TO COACH I. A. C. TRACK MEN

BY JACK PROCTOR.

John F. Mahan has been chosen coach of the Illinois Athletic club track team to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Charles Wilson. The board of directors of the tricolor club offered the position to Mahan last night and he accepted. He will take up his duties immediately.

Mahan is a well known track coach and athletic director, having held six positions in both east and west that have brought him into prominence. He is a member of the Mahan family which has produced many famous athletes. The new I. A. C. coach is a cousin of Captain Elect Mahan of Harvard, all-American half back.

Mahan's first position was athletic director of Georgetown university in 1898 after his graduation from Dr. Sargent's physical training school at Harvard. He was studying law when he was called to this position. In 1901 he went to Dartmouth as track coach and gym superintendent.

Two seasons later Mahan was called to his native city to be athletic director of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was successful in Boston. The tech school enjoyed six years of athletic prosperity during his régime. His next position was at the University of Maine where he remained for two years before coming to Chicago in 1908 to be superintendent of parks and playgrounds at Evanston.

Organizer at Evanston.

The friends that he made in the north shore suburb brought him the position at the I. A. C., for his success in organizing the park system and promoting athletics in Evanston was one of the reasons that he was chosen for the club position. He resigned to go to Purdue as track coach in 1912.

The track teams at Purdue had never been prominent in conference athletics. Mahan made the Boilermakers a championship contender during the two years he was in charge of the spring work there. Oliphant, the all around field star, and Applegate and East, two fast quarter milers, were three of Mahan's best men at Purdue.

Starts Work Tomorrow.

Mahan will begin his work tomorrow. The new director announced that Alma Richards, the Cornell high jumper who leaped 6 ft. 5 in. at the Pennsylvania games last week, will compete again for the Tricolor club this summer, as well as several other collegiate champions whose names will be announced in a few days.

Mahan said he would begin immediately to train a team for the San Francisco championship events this summer.

EVANGELIST BILLY SUNDAY UMPIRES A SCHOOL GAME.

Paterson, N. J., May 1.—[Special.]—It was about all "Ma" could do to drag Billy Sunday off the baseball diamond today. Once back on the green turf the evangelist capered about as if he loved it. He pawed the grass, and you could almost see him trying to grip it with invisible spikes.

"Strike tuh!" he yelled, one hand in the air. It was just the same pose he uses so often on the platform. Sunday as an umpire looks very like Sunday as a preacher. He was not a particularly good umpire, for he had to reverse his decision once, and so bring upon himself the dear old bromides like "Robber," "Shut the gate," and "Back to Winona Lake."

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

From Bill to Steve.

[Copyright: 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.]

PITTSBURGH, May 1.—Steve. Well Steve dont never trust no woman to do your busness for you and the best way to do is do it your self and dont leave it to no woman. But Gussy was in such a hurry we should find some place to live that I had to leave her hunt for a flat for us and she left them run all over her and now wear tide up to a lese for 1 yr. but you bet they wont hold me to it because I dont half to stand for no deal Gussy made and she must think Im some millionair or some thing.

Before I left home I and her made it up that she was to look for a good flat because she wouldent wait till I was back and I dident want to argue with her because it dont get you nothing. So I says for her to do the best she could for say $22.50 or $25 per mo. and get some wheres near the ball pk. because it dont look like her old mans comeing threw with no automobile for us the cheap old stiff but hes still sick yet and may be he will losen up when he feels better. So then I left town with the club to go to St Louis and Cinn. and Pittsburgh and while we was still in St. Louis yet I got a letter from Gussy sane she had found a swell place 5 rms. with bathe near garfield pk. for $27.50 and if it was all right with me she would sine up a lese for it so I wrote right back and says nothing doing and we wouldent pay no such price and she must of over herd me when I was talking a bout bean near a pk. because I ment the ball pk. and not no garfield pk. I cant go out and practice no ball in a place like garfield pk. where theys nothing but kids and there mothers running lose all over the place.

FLAT TO RENT

I told her to try again and get a place some wheres near the ball pk. and to not bother about no 5 rms. because then we wouldent have no excuse to tell her brother or some of her relitives supose they should get the idear in there head that they wanted to pay us a vissit but if we hadent only the 4 rms. a parlor and dinning rm. and kichen and 1 bed rm. we could say we was sorry to not be able to put them up but they wasent no rm. for them to sleep and of corse theys some peopl I would like to have come and stay with us and if you was to be in Chi over night Steve we would put you up in the parler on the lunge with some regjar bed close. And I says she neednt to worry a bout no bathe rm. on my acct. because if we was near close to the ball pk. I could all ways get in there for the shower so she wrote back and insted of her looking for an other place she gos back to the same place and the man tells her he will come down to $25.00 per mo. and she says it would brake her hart to pass it up because it was the swellest place she ever seen for the money so I seen where she was going to make a big fuss so I wrote back and told her to go a head and take the lese provide it we wouldent half to pay no money at all wile I was on the rode with the ball club but we would pay $25.00 per mo. for all the moe. I was home and not on the rode and if nessary she could go and stay at the old mans wile I was on the rode and then of corse the man that oned the flats couldent expect to get no money out of us because we would only just be storeing our furniture there. Or I says we would pay him $18.50 per mo. for evry mo. in the yr. weather I was home or on the rode.

So she wrote back and I just got the letter today and she says she put my proposishon up to the man and he turned it down but I dont believe she put it up to him like I gave it to her or how could of turned it down but any way he turned down what she says and then he says she better take it right a way at $25.00 per mo. for the hole yr. because they was a lot of other peopl looking at it and 1st. thing she knowed it would be gone and she fell for that old Army game and sined up the lese and now we got a expensive a flat on our hands for the hole yr. and supose Id get trade it to the N. Y. giants and they been after me ever since I come in to the league then we would be liveing in N. Y. city and pain $25.00 or more rent there and have a flat on our hands in Chi for $25.00 more and that would be a fine thing eh Steve but I guess they aint no danger of Bresnahan tradeing me and it looks like I would be in there regiar pretty soon now but any way its a fine way to do busness and you bet I will get out of that there lese if I half to go to a atty. at law and besides I dont see whats the matter with us liveing at her old mans where theys plenty of rm. and it dont seem right for Gussy to want to live a way from him when hes been sick and theys no telling when he will be sick again.

Respy. BILL.

BATTED BALL BREAKS NOSE.

Larry Young, aged 18, 922 South Wood street, was knocked unconscious yesterday afternoon when he was struck in the face by a baseball while participating in a game on a diamond in Lincoln park. The ball had been hit by another player. Young was revived at the Passavant hospital, where it was found that his nose was broken.

The freshmen co-eds track team of Northwestern university won the interclass meet at Patten gymnasium yesterday with 25½ points. The other teams scored as follows: Seniors, 21; juniors, 19; sophomores, 6½.

KAUFF TO PLAY WITH BROOKLYN

Commission Refuses to Reinstate Jumper; Giants Drop Claim to Him.

Cincinnati, O., May 1.—The national baseball commission today refused the application for reinstatement of Benny Kauff, the Brooklyn Federal league players who signed a New York National league contract last Thursday.

The finding of the commission follows:

Player B. Kauff applies to the national commission for reinstatement in organized baseball. His request is refused for the reason that in the past he had not respected his contractual obligations and therefore in our judgment is not a desirable person to be identified with the great national game.
(Signed) AUGUST HERRMANN,
B. B. JOHNSON,
JOHN K TENER,
National commission.

Can't Play with O. B. Club.

The decision was arrived at after numerous telephonic communications had taken place between Chairman August Herrmann and Presidents Tener of the National league and Johnson of the American league, the other two members of the commission. The result of the decision will be that Kauff cannot play with the New York Nationals or any club operating under the rules of the national baseball agreement.

Following the announcement Chairman Herrmann said:

"The finding speaks for itself. The commissioners voted it unanimously, and further discussion on my part would be useless. So far as I personally am concerned you can say for me that a player who has twice violated a contract is not a desirable man for baseball."

Giants Drop Their Claim.

New York, May 1.—As a result of a conference this afternoon between H. M. Hempstead, president of the New York Nationals, and R. B. Ward, president of the Brooklyn Federals, in connection with the special meeting of the Federal league called to consider the status of Player Benny Kauff, Hempstead announced that he had surrendered all the claims of the New York Giants to the services of Kauff. President Hempstead gave out the following statement after the conference with Ward:

"Kauff's services were offered us several weeks ago, and it was represented that he was under no contract with any club, but a free agent. We investigated these statements carefully, and not until we felt thoroughly satisfied that he was free to sign a contract with us did we sign him.

"In this conference Mr. Ward brought to our attention facts of which we had no previous knowledge and which we believe give him the right to Kauff's services. Had we known these facts in the first place we would not have felt at liberty to sign Kauff, and, having learned of them, we willingly surrender his services to Mr. Ward."

Gilmore Suspends Kauff.

Kauff was tonight indefinitely suspended by President Gilmore of the Federal league. Gilmore made this known in a statement, in which he said:

"Player Benny Kauff of the Brooklyn club of the Federal league has been indefinitely suspended by me for a gross violation of his contract. His suspension takes effect at once.

"Kauff signed a perfectly equitable contract with a duly authorized agent of the Brooklyn club. The contract was approved by me as president of the Federal league. Kauff is suspended as an example to him and to every other player in the league."

HOSE TROUNCE TIGERS, 5 TO 0; RUSSELL STAR

Tex Holds Foes to Two Hits, While Schalk's Homer Nets Three.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

The winning spirit was rampant among the White Sox yesterday and they thrashed the ferocious Detroit Tigers again, this time by a count of 5 to 0. The Tigers were so badly beaten that they were humiliated, and the fellow who did the humiliating was none other than Reb Russell, the come back Texas boy, who is getting even for a lot of humiliation he had to endure during the 1914 season.

Reb was going his fanciest, as well as his fastest, pace, and he held the sluggers from the jungle to a couple of scattered hits. Donnie Bush got one in the fourth and Sam Crawford dropped one to safe ground in the seventh.

Nine Tigers Strike Out.

A lot of Tigers fanned because of the hurling prowess of the Texas boy. Nine were retired that way, and one of the nine was Ty Cobb the Great. He got his medicine in the seventh after the crowd had been riding him jokingly all afternoon, and when Ump. Nallin called the third strike on one that seemed to bend through the groove, Ty went into a tantrum of rage and stormed about so furiously that the umpire banished him from the game.

From the second inning on the Detroiters were a badly beaten bunch and their heads were down. They looked as bad as the Sox did over in Detroit recently when Rowland and his aspiring boys were trimmed four times in succession.

Rowlands at Top Speed.

The Sox were running in high gear all the way and never looked more like champions. They clouted the ball when clouts did business. They made only eight blows but they utilized six of them in the production of runs.

With two on in the second, Ray Schalk, the crack catcher, whaled one down to the left field corner for a homer. Roth and Eddie Collins worked together for one in the third and Eddie Collins, Felsch, and J. Collins produced the final one in the eighth.

Jennings had three hurlers on the slab but Covaleskie was the main one. Dubuc began but retired with one out in the third, Covaleskie taking the job and going to the eighth when he gave way to a pinch hitter, after which Reynolds finished.

Crowd of 10,000 at Game.

With the wind coming off the lake in frigid fashion, conditions were bad for baseball, but nevertheless there was a crowd of about 10,000 persons who braved the breezes to see the contest.

The Sox set off a lot of fireworks in the second inning, which put three runs over the plate and set the crowd in an uproar of joy. Two were out when the fuss began, Weaver starting it off with a single to center. He stole and made third when Covaleskie pegged badly trying to pick him off second. Brief walked and he and Weaver began a double steal. Peters bluffed a shot to second, then pegged to third, and had Weaver caught off the base, but Kavanagh dropped the ball.

Schalk's Homer Scores Three.

Schalk then poled a liner over third and the ball popped past Veach and rolled to the flagpole for a home run, Weaver and Brief counting ahead of Schalk. Russell got to second on Kavanagh's heave to the stand, but the rumpus ended when Quinlan grounded to Jacobson.

In the last of the third Roth led off with a two bagger to left and legged it home when E. Collins singled to center. Eddie took second on Cobb's peg to the plate and moved to third later when Covaleskie made a bum shot to second. Felsch fanned, then J. Collins smashed to Covaleskie and E. Collins was nailed at home. J. Collins stole, but Weaver fanned.

The Sox had chances for more runs in the fourth and sixth, but the runs failed to materialize. In the eighth, however, with Reynolds on the slab, E. Collins led off with a bingle to center and Felsch sacrificed. J. Collins caromed a single off Bush's toes, sending Eddie home. J. Collins took second on a peg to the plate and then tried to steal third but was shot out. Weaver ended the round with a roller to Fuller. Score:

PETE RUSSELL
PAUL GERDES

BY MAROON.

University of Chicago athletes will utilize their football training for the fancy steps, their baseball windups for similar positions in the late dances, and derive other benefit from their athletic ability in the annual interclass hop, one of the biggest social affairs of the year at the Midway. Paul Russell, captain-elect of next year's varsity football team, and one of the best quarter backs in the middle west, and Paul Gerdes, end on the freshman eleven, captain and center of the basketball team, and pitcher on the baseball team, were chosen because of their popularity to lead wings of the dancers in the promenade.

Russell will head the junior division and Gerdes will lead the freshmen dancers. Buell Patterson, a member of the football squad last fall, will be in charge of the sophomore division, and Ira Russ will lead the seniors. The selection of athletes for social honors at the university has not been customary in former years.

Russell is from Oak Park and belongs to the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. Gerdes lives in Harrisburg, Pa., and is a member of Phi Delta Theta. The athletes have been told to pick their own partners.

Notes of the White Sox.

The final game of the Detroit series will take place at Comiskey park today.

If the Sox win today they will be tied with the Tigers for second place in the race.

Russell had the Tigers either striking out or popping the ball up in the air most of the time. As a result the south siders had a total of only five assists.

For a second or two it looked as if Hap Felsch had whaled a triple in the fifth inning when he drove a liner to deep right center. Sam Crawford spoiled it by making a swell running catch.

Schalk's homer was a bit lucky, but it counted for a four baser just the same. It was a low fly over third base and Veach came in fast, hoping to get the ball and cut off a run at the plate. In his hurry he missed the ball entirely and had to chase it to the far corner.

Eddie Collins and Buck Weaver executed their daily double play in the most dangerous spot Reb Russell was in all afternoon. Bush started the fourth with a single, and Vitt slapped sharply to Collins, who made a clean scoop and quick toss to Weaver, who, in turn, shot to Brief just in time. This occurred with Cobb and Crawford coming up.

The Sox joked a bit with Ty Cobb in the fourth. With two out he walked and after two strikes had been called on Crawford Ty started to steal second. Crawford fanned on the play, making three out, but Schalk pegged to second just the same. His peg was high and caromed off Weaver's glove to center field. Ty, not knowing Crawford had fanned, scrambled up and dashed madly for third, and Roth pretended to be waiting anxiously for the ball there. Ty almost slid for third, then started to go on home before he saw the joke.

RITCHIE WANTS TO BOX GIBBONS IN TITLE BATTLE

Willie Will Meet Mike in Welter Bout if the Latter Makes 142 Pounds.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Failing to land a return match with Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion, Willie Ritchie, the former titleholder, has launched a campaign to win the welterweight title. Ritchie now wants to meet Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul Phantom, in a twenty round contest to determine the welterweight championship.

Owing to the failure of Packey McFarland to close with Gibbons, Ritchie said he will take Packey's place and if the match is closed he is willing to throw it on the market and award it to the club offering the best inducements. Ritchie makes one demand and that is that Gibbons make 142 pounds at the ringside.

Weight May Bother Mike.

Whether Mike will make this weight is a question. The St. Paul fighter is growing and getting bigger all the time and it is doubtful whether he can make 142 pounds. When Mike agreed to make 145 pounds for McFarland he said it was the lowest poundage he could possibly make, so the weight question may prevent the contest.

Ritchie will be in town today to open a week's engagement at a local theater tomorrow. He has signed articles to meet Matty Baldwin in Boston on either May 11 or 18 in a twelve round decision contest.

White Leaves for Boston.

Charley White and Manager Nate Lewis left yesterday for Boston, where White is scheduled to box twelve rounds to a decision with Eddie Murphy on Tuesday night. The local lightweight has been training daily at O'Connell's, where he has boxed every day with Frankie Lynn.

Jack Kearns, manager of "Red" Watson and "Fighting Billy" Murray, yesterday shifted training camps. The manager took his fighters from Forbes' gymnasium to Ike Bernstein's resort on the south side.

Billy Wagner, brother of Charley White, will leave today for Battle Creek, Mich., where he is matched to box ten rounds with Artie Kaufman on Wednesday night.

ARMOUR UPSETS MONMOUTH.

Monmouth, Ill., May 1.—[Special.]—Warfield's muff of Herman's fly in the eighth gave Armour three runs and a 6 to 5 victory over Monmouth today. Shanefelt pitched good ball, striking out twelve men, but received bad support. Score:

For Players of Skat.

BY A. I. LAUER.

The tournament of the Lincoln Skat club, at which John M. Heaney, candidate for the directorate of Illinois, acted as skatmeister, enjoyed a good turnout of skat devotees. The winners follow:

1—E. Einhorn, 13 net.
2—F. Strobehn, 734 points.
3—J. Van Doehren, club solo against 8 matadores.
4—R. Berndt, won 21, lost 3; net, 18 games—554 points.
5—J. Krauskopf, 627 points.
6—Hugo Fritzche, high play 192 points.
7—J. Stelli, heart tourney against 7 matadores.

Judge Hosea Wells, since his reelection to the Municipal bench, has been presented with his first case—a case of cut glass—by the American Skat club, of which he is president.

To play skat well is an accomplishment which few possess. Skat is a game into which the element of skill enters largely, a game of strategy, of logical deduction, of far seeing possibilities, and full of surprises. Although there are many thousands of players, few are good performers. All skat players, however, look upon whist as the chess player looks upon checkers. In all other card games high cards are necessary to success; not so in skat—if one holds cards sufficiently worthless it is nevertheless a winning hand [nullo].

It is hoped that within the next ten days definite information can be given concerning all transportation arrangements, including rates of fare, etc., to Peoria. The tentative plan is to arrange for a special train leaving Chicago shortly before noon on Saturday, June 12, arriving in sufficient time to allow for a comfortable meal, the rawing of seats for the first session Saturday night, etc. An arrangement of this kind will necessitate little absence, if any, from the regular duties of those attending and should be productive of a large turnout.

President J. M. Gross of the North American Skat league is in the city today, a delegate of the Peoria Turn verein to the meeting of the Central Illinois Turn Bezirk at Turner Hall Eiche in Kensington. Our directors will no doubt greet him there and talk over matters of importance regarding the coming tournament.

Inquisitive Fans.

La Crosse, Wis.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please inform your readers in which, if any, of these cases a claim of interference should be allowed: 1. The first baseman, A, stands just inside the diamond, on a line from first to third base, with his foot touching first base at the point nearest him. The baserunner, B, is obliged to make an "outside curve" in order to pass A and is touched with the ball in the hands of C, the second baseman, before reaching second base. 2. A stands outside the diamond at a point four feet from first base and three feet from the base line between first and second. While rounding first base B touches A and is himself touched with the ball before reaching second base. 3. B is being run down between second and third bases by C and D, the baseman. E, the shortstop, stands between C and D and three feet from the base line. B runs into A and is touched with the ball in the hands of D before reaching third base.
LOUIS SHAW.

There was no interference in the first play cited and major league umpires probably would allow none in the other two, although it would depend entirely on said umpire's judgment. Such interference must be intentional to be penalized and the plays must be seen to make a definite decision.

HIGH SCORES IN FIRST WEEK OF STATE PIN MEET

Bowlers ended the first week of the state tournament yesterday with some tall scores holding first places, although only one record of the Illinois Bowling association was broken at the Randolph alleys. The new record is the 300 game rolled by William Feltz of the Wabash league in his singles, the first time a perfect score has been rolled in a tournament in Illinois and the second time the feat has been performed anywhere in a tourney.

Bob Raydl and Jerry Kral rolled into third place in the doubles on an early shift last night with 1,214, Kral getting 622. Roy Davis and Paul Wilson hit 1,19[illegible] on the same shift for fourth place, Wilson carrying the pair with 629. Raydl's 623 and Davis' 613 were other high counts of the all star squad. Scores:

30.7 Miles
On a single gallon of gasoline.

Yesterday morning a standard six-cylinder FRANKLIN ran on the streets of Chicago 30.7 miles on one gallon of commercial gasoline, 59 test.

This record performance is certified in every detail. The measure for the fuel has the O. K. of the Sealer of Weights and measures. The grade of gasoline is certified to. The entire test was under the supervision of Mr. Daniel Roesch, mechanical engineer of the Armour Institute of Technology, and Mr. Harry Tarantous, Motor Age officials, who have sworn to the correctness of the results.

After the test, the car with its occupants was officially weighed on the public scales and tipped the beam at 3340 lbs. This light weight, combined with smooth running, and the economical, valve-in-head, direct air-cooled engine, give the FRANKLIN the country wide record for efficiency.

The car that made 30.7 miles on a single gallon of gasoline yesterday is here for your inspection. Look it over and take a ride.

ARBITER BESTS REDS' MANAGER IN DIAMOND MILL

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—[Special.]—In the seventh inning of today's game between Cincinnati and St. Louis Umpire Rigler laid Manager Buck Herzog's right eye open with his mask and then broke the Cincinnati manager's nose with a hard right to the face. Rigler got in another punch before police and players were able to separate the pair and Herzog landed once on the umpire's ribs.

The argument occurred after Tommy Leach had been trapped off second by Miller Huggins on the moss covered hidden ball trick. Leach raised a yell when Umpire Hart called him out. Hart appealed to Rigler as umpire in chief, and Rigler upheld the decision.

Spikes Umpire in Foot.

When Rigler waved him in, Tommy came on the run, protesting all the way. Herzog then ran out of the dugout and shook his fist in Rigler's face. In the mixup Herzog started pushing Rigler around and his spikes came down on the umpire's foot, cutting it. It was then that Rigler drew off his mask and sent a crushing blow along Herzog's face, cutting his right eye. Herzog rushed in, but Rigler staggered him with a right to the nose.

Rigler tonight admitted that Herzog had not called him names, as most of the spectators believed, but had jostled him about and had refused to leave the field when he was ordered off. Then, Rigler says, Herzog deliberately spiked him.

Both Held Under Bond.

Herzog and Rigler were both arrested tonight. Each was released on $500 bond for appearance in the Municipal court Monday.

The game was won by the Cards, 9 to 5. Score:

Buck Weaver, Crack Shortstop of the Chicago White Sox.

Buck Weaver, the White Sox shortstop, as he looks off the field, is presented readers in a picture reproduced by rotogravure process as a supplement in another part of this paper.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Chicago's baseball fans recently voted that George "Buck" Weaver was the most popular White Sox player, but the folks back in the little town of Stowe, Pa., voted that long ago. Even before Buck became the shortstop of the Sox the fans in Stowe were unanimous in the belief that he was destined to do great things, and they watched with enthusiasm his rise from the home town team to the Chicago club, where he has made his mark in the world as one of the best of shortstops.

If Buck Weaver wasn't filled with determination and persistency it is quite possible he still would be back in Stowe playing for the home folks on Saturday afternoons and perhaps running the town billiard hall the rest of the time. The world never would have heard of him.

It was the love of the game that carried him to the front and one may expect Buck to be playing as long as his body will stand the physical strain. After that one may expect to see him watching games from the grandstand or possibly running a big league club of his own.

Buck has had to battle his way to the front amid strong competition, and he has beaten all his rivals and holds the job with the White Sox alone. When he came up for his first big league trial he carried with him a reputation as a weak hitter and was said to be erratic in his fielding. He didn't hit much the first year, but he didn't give up, and persistency and continued trying have made him a batter of good standing. There were times when he did seem erratic and, although he heaved the ball away many times, he never permitted the mistakes to weigh on his mind but went after the next one with greater dash and determination than ever. This spirit has been rampant in the boy in all his baseball career and advanced him when the same conditions would have sent many a young man back to the old home town in despair.

It was on Aug. 18, 1891, that Weaver arrived in the world. He was born at Stowe, Pa., where his father still lives. His schooling was had there. While he was still in the grades he began playing baseball with the small boys on the lots, and by the time he was 16 years old he was about the best player in town. While he played in other positions than shortstop, the latter always was his regular position.

It was in the fall of 1909 that Weaver was first discovered by any one outside of Stowe, and his modesty at that time nearly prevented his entering the baseball profession. He had been shortstopping that summer for a team there known as the St. Marys. When the big league season ended a barnstorming bunch of Connie Mack's team went there to play an exhibition game.

The Stowe crowd hired some outside help. One of the helpers was Charley Dooin, then catcher and manager for the Phillies. Buck made up his mind to ask Dooin for a trial with the big fellows the following spring, but on the day of the game he never got up his nerve, and while feeling despondent over the thing that evening he was approached by Catcher Lapp of the Athletics, who had taken notice of the boy's ability.

When Lapp learned of Buck's ambition to get into the game professionally he promised to help him. The Athletics had a scout named Kennedy, who also was present at the game and had seen Weaver in action. Lapp took Weaver to Kennedy and Buck asked for a job. Kennedy promised to do what he could, but soon after that he quit the Athletics to scout for the Cleveland club.

Before the winter was over Weaver got a letter from Kennedy offering him $125 per month with the Cleveland club. Buck wrote back his acceptance without delay. But spring came on and Buck received no contract or order to report. He was about to give up when the season opened and he hadn't been notified to join the team, but he had heard of the national commission which settled all such matters, so he presented his case. The commission decided that the Cleveland club was in the wrong and would have to pay him. By that time two weeks of the season were over and Buck received a pay check from the Cleveland club for two weeks, then was released to the North Hampton club of the Connecticut State league.

It was there Buck did his first professional playing, and he wasn't a success. Before he had been in harness a month the manager went to Weaver and said he would have to let him go. Buck was convinced of his own ability, however, and demanded an unconditional release, which the manager finally granted.

With his release in his pocket Buck started for home, stopping in Philadelphia on the way. He went out to the Phillies' park to see the game, and there met Charley Dooin, who remembered him from the exhibition game of the previous fall. Dooin talked like a big brother to Buck and promised to help him, and in a few days had secured a job for him at York, Pa., in the Tri-State league.

There Buck got away to a good start and had a good season—so good that he was recommended to Charley Comiskey. The result was that the Sox drafted him in the fall of 1910. This pleased the young shortstop, who thought that he was to have a trial with the big fellows at once, but before spring came Weaver was informed that he had been turned over to the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league.

Still determined, Weaver put in the season of 1911 on the coast, and went so well that Comiskey recalled him. The following spring Buck joined the White Sox in the training camp at Waco, Tex. Even then not many thought he would win the position, but Buck began working for it the first day and there never has been a time since that any one else had a chance to beat him, though several players, including Joe Berger and Russell Blackburne, have been candidates.

Weaver struggled through that first trial with the White Sox burying a great grief in his heart which none of the other players knew about for weeks afterward. Only a day or two after joining the team at Waco the boy got a telegram from home saying his mother had died. It would have been impossible for him to have reached home in time for the funeral, so he figured there was no use in going. He knew if he left Joe Berger would be put at the shortstop job, and if Joe started off well there might never be another change. Buck stayed and continued to play at top speed. One night Ed Walsh found Weaver in his room crying. Then it was learned for the first time that Buck's mother had died.

While Weaver still has a sentimental feeling for Stowe, Pa., he has given it up and taken Chicago as his home town. At the close of the season of 1914 Buck married a Chicago girl and took an apartment in Englewood, where he now resides. His father, who still resides in the old town, is planning to move here and make his home with Mr. and Mrs. Buck this fall.

Not only did Buck become a citizen of Chicago during the last year but he became a Chicago business man as well. Just before starting to California on the last training trip Weaver purchased a billiard room on the south side. Next to playing baseball, Weaver likes billiards. As soon as the season is over he will give all his time to his place of business, which is likely to become the winter hangout for ball players.

Notes of the Whales.

The two teams left at 8:30 o'clock for Chicago. They will return here for another game on Monday, which will end the series.

Jackson, Flack, Black, Brennan, Clemens, and Wickland were left in Buffalo over Sunday, as the team returns here Monday.

Manager Tinker will take four pitchers to Chicago for the double header Sunday. They are Johnson, McConnell, Brown, and Prendergast.

Manager Tinker developed a cold in his back and was unable to take his place at short. Zeider went over to that position, while Fritz covered third.

Secretary Williams was replaced by Assistant Secretary Buckingham on the short trip to Buffalo. Williams will rejoin the team tomorrow for the long invasion.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 1.—[Special.]—Ad Brennan, who is strictly a hot weather pitcher, was asked how he would like to work today with the thermometer near the freezing point. "I'd sooner go over Niagara Falls in a tub," Ad replied.

Tinker had intended to send Hendrix to the mound, but when notified that a double header would be played in Chicago tomorrow he reserved Claude for one of the games and turned the task over to Prendergast. His selection evidently was a good one, as Mike is strictly a cold weather twirler, the result, he says, of eating plenty of ice cream.

Cub Sydelights.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1.—[Special.]—Home again tomorrow.

The Cubs copped five victories and met three defeats on this trip. One game went fifteen rounds to a draw.

Catcher Tyree was given a ten days' notice of release today. He will remain the property of the Cubs for that time, and in the meantime President Thomas hopes to place him with some minor league club.

Schulte made a life saving catch in the ninth. He robbed Wagner of a wallop into the left field corner. The ball would have hit the wall on the fly if Wildfire had not pulled it down. That was the opening play of the last half, and but for Schulte's catch the Pirates would have made lots of trouble with the two hits Schang and Viox got.

HATCH VICTOR IN BIG M. A. A. RACE FOR SIXTH TIME

St. Louis, Mo., May 1.—[Special.]—For the sixth time in the history of the Missouri Athletic association's marathon, Sidney H. Hatch, the 32 year old veteran of the Illinois Athletic club, breezed home a winner today. Hatch's time, 3:05:35, was slow for the race, but the Chicago man received little, if any, competition. The full marathon distance, twenty-six miles, 385 yards was covered.

The only men who were anywhere near Hatch in the later stages of the race were also Chicago runners, and they, too, were outclassed by the winner. Olaf Lodal of the Danish-American A. C. and Charles Mellor of the Logan Square club finished second and third, respectively. Lodal's time was 3:18:24, while Mellor traveled the distance in 3:31:28.

Maintains Steady Pace.

The race undoubtedly developed less competition and excitement than any former race. Hatch maintained a steady pace over the entire route. He ran easily all the way and as the men who set the pace began to tire and drop out he forged to the front. To win the event he was not forced to extend himself in the least and finished in great condition.

Lodal and Mellor also ran steady races, but were tired by the long grind. Bill Mathews, the other Chicago runner who was backed to give Hatch a hard race, failed to come to St. Louis. Only seven of the twenty-one starters finished.

Order of Finish.

First—Sidney H. Hatch, I. A. C., Chicago. Time, 3:05:35.
Third—Charles Mellor, L. S. C., Chicago. Time, 3:31:28.
Fourth—William Tsimpris, C. A. C., St. Louis. Time, 3:43:40.
Sixth—Manuel Cooper, Chicago Hebrew Institute. Time, 4:00:00 1-5.
Seventh—A. Monteverde, Y. M. C. A., Morristown, N. J. Time, 4:35:00.

Culver, 8; Morgan Park, 7.

Culver, Ind., May 1.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy defeated Morgan Park academy in a game with a thrilling finish, 8 to 7.

HARD TEST FOR GOLF PLAYERS AT INDIAN HILL

New Country Club Course Will Compare in Time with Any in West.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

Pretty nearly everybody who attended yesterday's formal opening of the Indian Hill Country club left in possession of a bit of fresh information, that being that the golf course is not only of championship quality but also that it now ranks as a test of golf with any other club in the west. As the chill in yesterday's weather operated to prevent the opening from classing as what club committees love to term a "gala event," and the attendance was not of more than sixty or at the most seventy members, this description of the course will be, probably, in the nature of news to a majority on Indian Hill's carefully selected roster.

The club was opened too late last year to attract general attention save for its social aspect and activities, and as nearly all its members belong to other golf clubs also, the course was put to very little use. Seasoned golfers fight shy of new courses, knowing that only immense expenditure of money can overcome lack of age.

Plan for Real Golf.

The promotion of the Indian Hill club was undertaken and carried through in such a brief time and with so little pother and promise that none save the little group who did the work knew that the course was designed and made with real golf in view, and not at all with the idea of merely providing an agreeable rendezvous for fair-to-middling players who happened to be socially congenial.

The course over which yesterday's players golfed exhibited on virtually every hole the result of heavy expenditure and expert revision since the 1914 season closed. The course is now as stiff a test of the game as even the Chicago Golf club's. Donald Ross, whose achievement at Belleair is the talk of every golfer who has played that Florida course, has been in charge of the changes, the while he directs the making over of the Skokie links, and he has wrought with a sense of beauty as well as of golf. The simplest of the pits and traps are good to look at. Not a change has been made without fine regard for landscape effectiveness. The treatment of the made hazards is a lesson in how this sort of thing may be done to combine beauty with good sport.

Par of Course Is 76.

The course falls just short of 6,400 yards for a 76 par—39 and 37. One of the founders boasted yesterday, as he listened to the compliments on the changes: "We are four strokes slower than any other course north of the city!" The point of the boast is that the general belief is that Indian Hill is not really a matter of golf at all, and very much a matter of afternoon tea.

There is a fine getaway utility in the first hole, 550 yards, unbroken the length of its fair green, and with a carry from the tee that is quite reasonable for even the short driver; but its par of 5 is to be had only by the player who is a master of direction. And it is the first and the last hole of the eighteen which even the par player at Indian Hill can unaffectedly term a cinch. There is not so much variety in eighteen holes on any other course in Chicago, with the sole exception of Beverly. The seventh and eighth of the new course are of the same length to an inch—330 yards; but the resemblance ends when the lateral measurements are compared.

Eighth Hole Difficult.

That eighth hole will, if left as it was found at yesterday's opening, go into the golf lore of Chicago along with Glen View's Old Hickory and the seventeenth of the Flossmoor course as it was last year. It is ever so slightly doglegged, demands a placed drive if the player is to be guaranteed an even break in standing for his second, and has its finish on a raised green that slopes sharply to deep, narrow, ravine-like pits at either side. A rollup approach is possible—just; but, to make it, the ball must be negotiated on a narrow incline that is well nigh sheer.

It is so hard, although so fascinating, a hole that even the rounder who made the boast above quoted, termed the eighth "cruel." When his attention was called to the fact that Ross' purpose to add to the cruelty is indicated by markings for a wide, rambling trap to catch a sliced drive—and the whole temptation of the prospect from the tee is to slice in order to get position—he explained that the trap will be dug only in case the green is lowered or the surrounding pits made less of a penalty for the player whose ball is not grasped by the ungracious green.

Fifth Hole Is Dogleg.

There is a wonderful dogleg for the fifth hole. The first nine ends with a hole calling for an exact mashie pitch of 130 yards; the second nine starts with another across water—this is merciless to the player whose accuracy is not 100 per cent—and the seventeenth is a taxing iron shot across water to a sloping green for 135 yards. And there is a glorious eighteenth—520 yards, and no quarter! It is up a gentle hill from the tee to the well protected green, and the golfer who gets his 5 here is not likely, in the nature of golfers, to stop telling about it for many days.

Not all the planned changes have been made; but they are in the making, with the work interfering not at all with anybody's game. The fine seventeenth, described above, is to be given added piquancy as sport and worth as landscape with a new tee, six feet in the air, reached by steps. The hole then will have [illegible] of the blind quality as to the water, which now flows below the line of vision from the ground tee. A new arrangement of the greens is to be made for the tenth, seventh, and twelfth holes; and a new [illegible] is being [illegible] diagonally across the second.

Not all of the greens were responsive yesterday, but it is expected they will yield after the first rain.

JACKSON PARK GOLF RECORD CUT

Thomas A. Warren Turns In 64 Card for Long Course as It Is at Present.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Opportunity so presented itself to Thomas A. Warren at the Jackson Park long course yesterday that he secured a strangle hold, not loosening his grip until he had set a record of 64 for the course as it now is played over.

The spring course is shorter than the full course, as most of the temporary greens are in front of the regular greens. At the eleventh hole the putting green is on the east side of the lagoon. Warren was unfortunate in that he was not playing over the full course, as he certainly would have tied the record. Then, again, he was fortunate, as he will be able to claim for all time the record of the course as at present arranged.

Only One Poor Shot.

Warren was competing in the qualifying round of the monthly class handicap of the Jackson Park club. With him were Dr. Clyde Cadwell, L. Sanders, and H. L. Minor. All through the round Warren played almost perfectly, making only one poor shot. His approaches, with two exceptions, were within four feet of the flag. Following is the card:

Out	4	3	3	4	5	3	4	3	4—33
In	3	3	3	2	5	6	3	3	3—31	64

TWO weeks ago Broadview, a suburb of Chicago, was known here as "Dream City." The Chicago speedway is located at Broadview, hence the sobriquet. One spoke of the speedway in a voice significant of doubt.

On Tuesday, April 20, 300 men started erecting a two mile oval there with sixty days between them and June 19, the date granted the local promoters by the American Automobile association for holding a 500 mile race.

Today there is every evidence the track will be finished by June 5, in time for fourteen days of practice prior to the race. The original force of workmen has been increased to about 1,000. The track is being surfaced at the rate of 300 feet a day. The four subways to give motorists access to the infield will be completed this week.

The speedway proper will have a surface of 2x4 timbers laid on edge. Over 6,000,000 feet of lumber are required for the track.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 1.—[Special.]—Thirty-eight machines had been nominated in the 500 mile race to be held here at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 29 when the entry list closed tonight. In addition to this number fully seven or eight more are expected by the speedway officials, since all entries mailed bearing May 1 date will be accepted. The entries follow:

GOLF HONORS GO TO HAGEN; EVANS IN TIE FOR SECOND.

San Francisco, Cal., May 1.—Walter Hagen of Rochester, N. Y., national open golf champion, made a score of 140 for thirty-six holes in the first half of the Panama-Pacific exposition open championship tournament today on the links of the San Francisco Golf and Country club. This was the best score of the day. Hagen made a record for the course in his eighteen hole round this afternoon when he went out in 30, seven under par.

Harry Davis of San Francisco had 144. John Black of Oakland was second of the professionals with 150. Charles Evans Jr. of Chicago, western amateur champion, also had a card of 150.

PLAN AUTO RUN FOR CITY TEAMS

New York, May 1.—[Special.]—A plan for a national intercity team match, run under the direct auspices of the contest board of the American Automobile association, and in which at least a half dozen cities will be represented, is the outgrowth of the visit to this city of Clifford Ireland of Peoria, Ill., western member of the A. A. A. contest board.

The affair probably will take place in October and start and finish at Washington, D. C., headquarters of the A. A. A. It will be a two day run, similar to the event made famous by the Chicago Automobile club and the Chicago Athletic association.

Cup and Trophy Up.

The trophy for which the teams will compete will be the American Automobile association cup, which heretofore has been contested for in the national tour, and a $500 cup given by President John A. Wilson of the A. A. A., conditions for which will be named later. It is planned to have the trophies presented by President Woodrow Wilson, who is a cousin of the A. A. A. leader.

The indorsement of President Wilson, Chairman Kennerdell of the A. A. A. contest board, and A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the A. A. A. executive committee, was gained by the western idea at a dinner given last night by Mr. Ireland to C. G. Sinsabaugh, former champion of the contest board of the Chicago Automobile club, who has removed to New York to become editor of Motor. At this dinner the plan was discussed by a number of prominent New Yorkers, who saw plenty of merit in the idea. That it will be held is promised by Chairman Kennerdell, who will ask his board to approve of the plan.

Enthusiasm in East.

So enthusiastic were the easterners that it is declared that it will be possible to get at least a half dozen five car teams. It looks now as if Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Brooklyn, and Cleveland could be counted on to take part. As in the case of Chicago's famous match, only amateur owners will be allowed to participate, and the losing teams will have to banquet the party at the finish of the match in Washington.

Mr. Ireland returns to Chicago tomorrow, prepared to take up the matter with the joint committee of the Chicago Automobile club and Chicago Athletic association, which will be called into consultation because it is so familiar with such matches.

Sporting News Notes.

Dellwoods will meet the Crawford All Stars at Seventy-ninth and Woodlawn avenue today.

The new gymnasium of the Hebrew institute will be dedicated June 6.

In the final outdoor swimming meet of the season of the Central Y. M. C. A. team will meet Sinai Social center in a dual meet in the latter's tank Tuesday night.

Arthur B. Harrison has been elected president of the United Order of Foresters' Baseball league, Arthur Solomon, secretary, and John Prestel treasurer. The schedule begins on Sunday, May 16.

Hits Machine as Pilot Hurries to Track; 2 Women Hurt.

Portland, Ore., May 1.—Hurrying to the Rose City speedway this afternoon, where his car was entered in the racing events, Emerson Reed drove his machine into another car, instantly killing Theodore C. Hyde and injuring Harry S. Miller so badly that he died in a hospital.

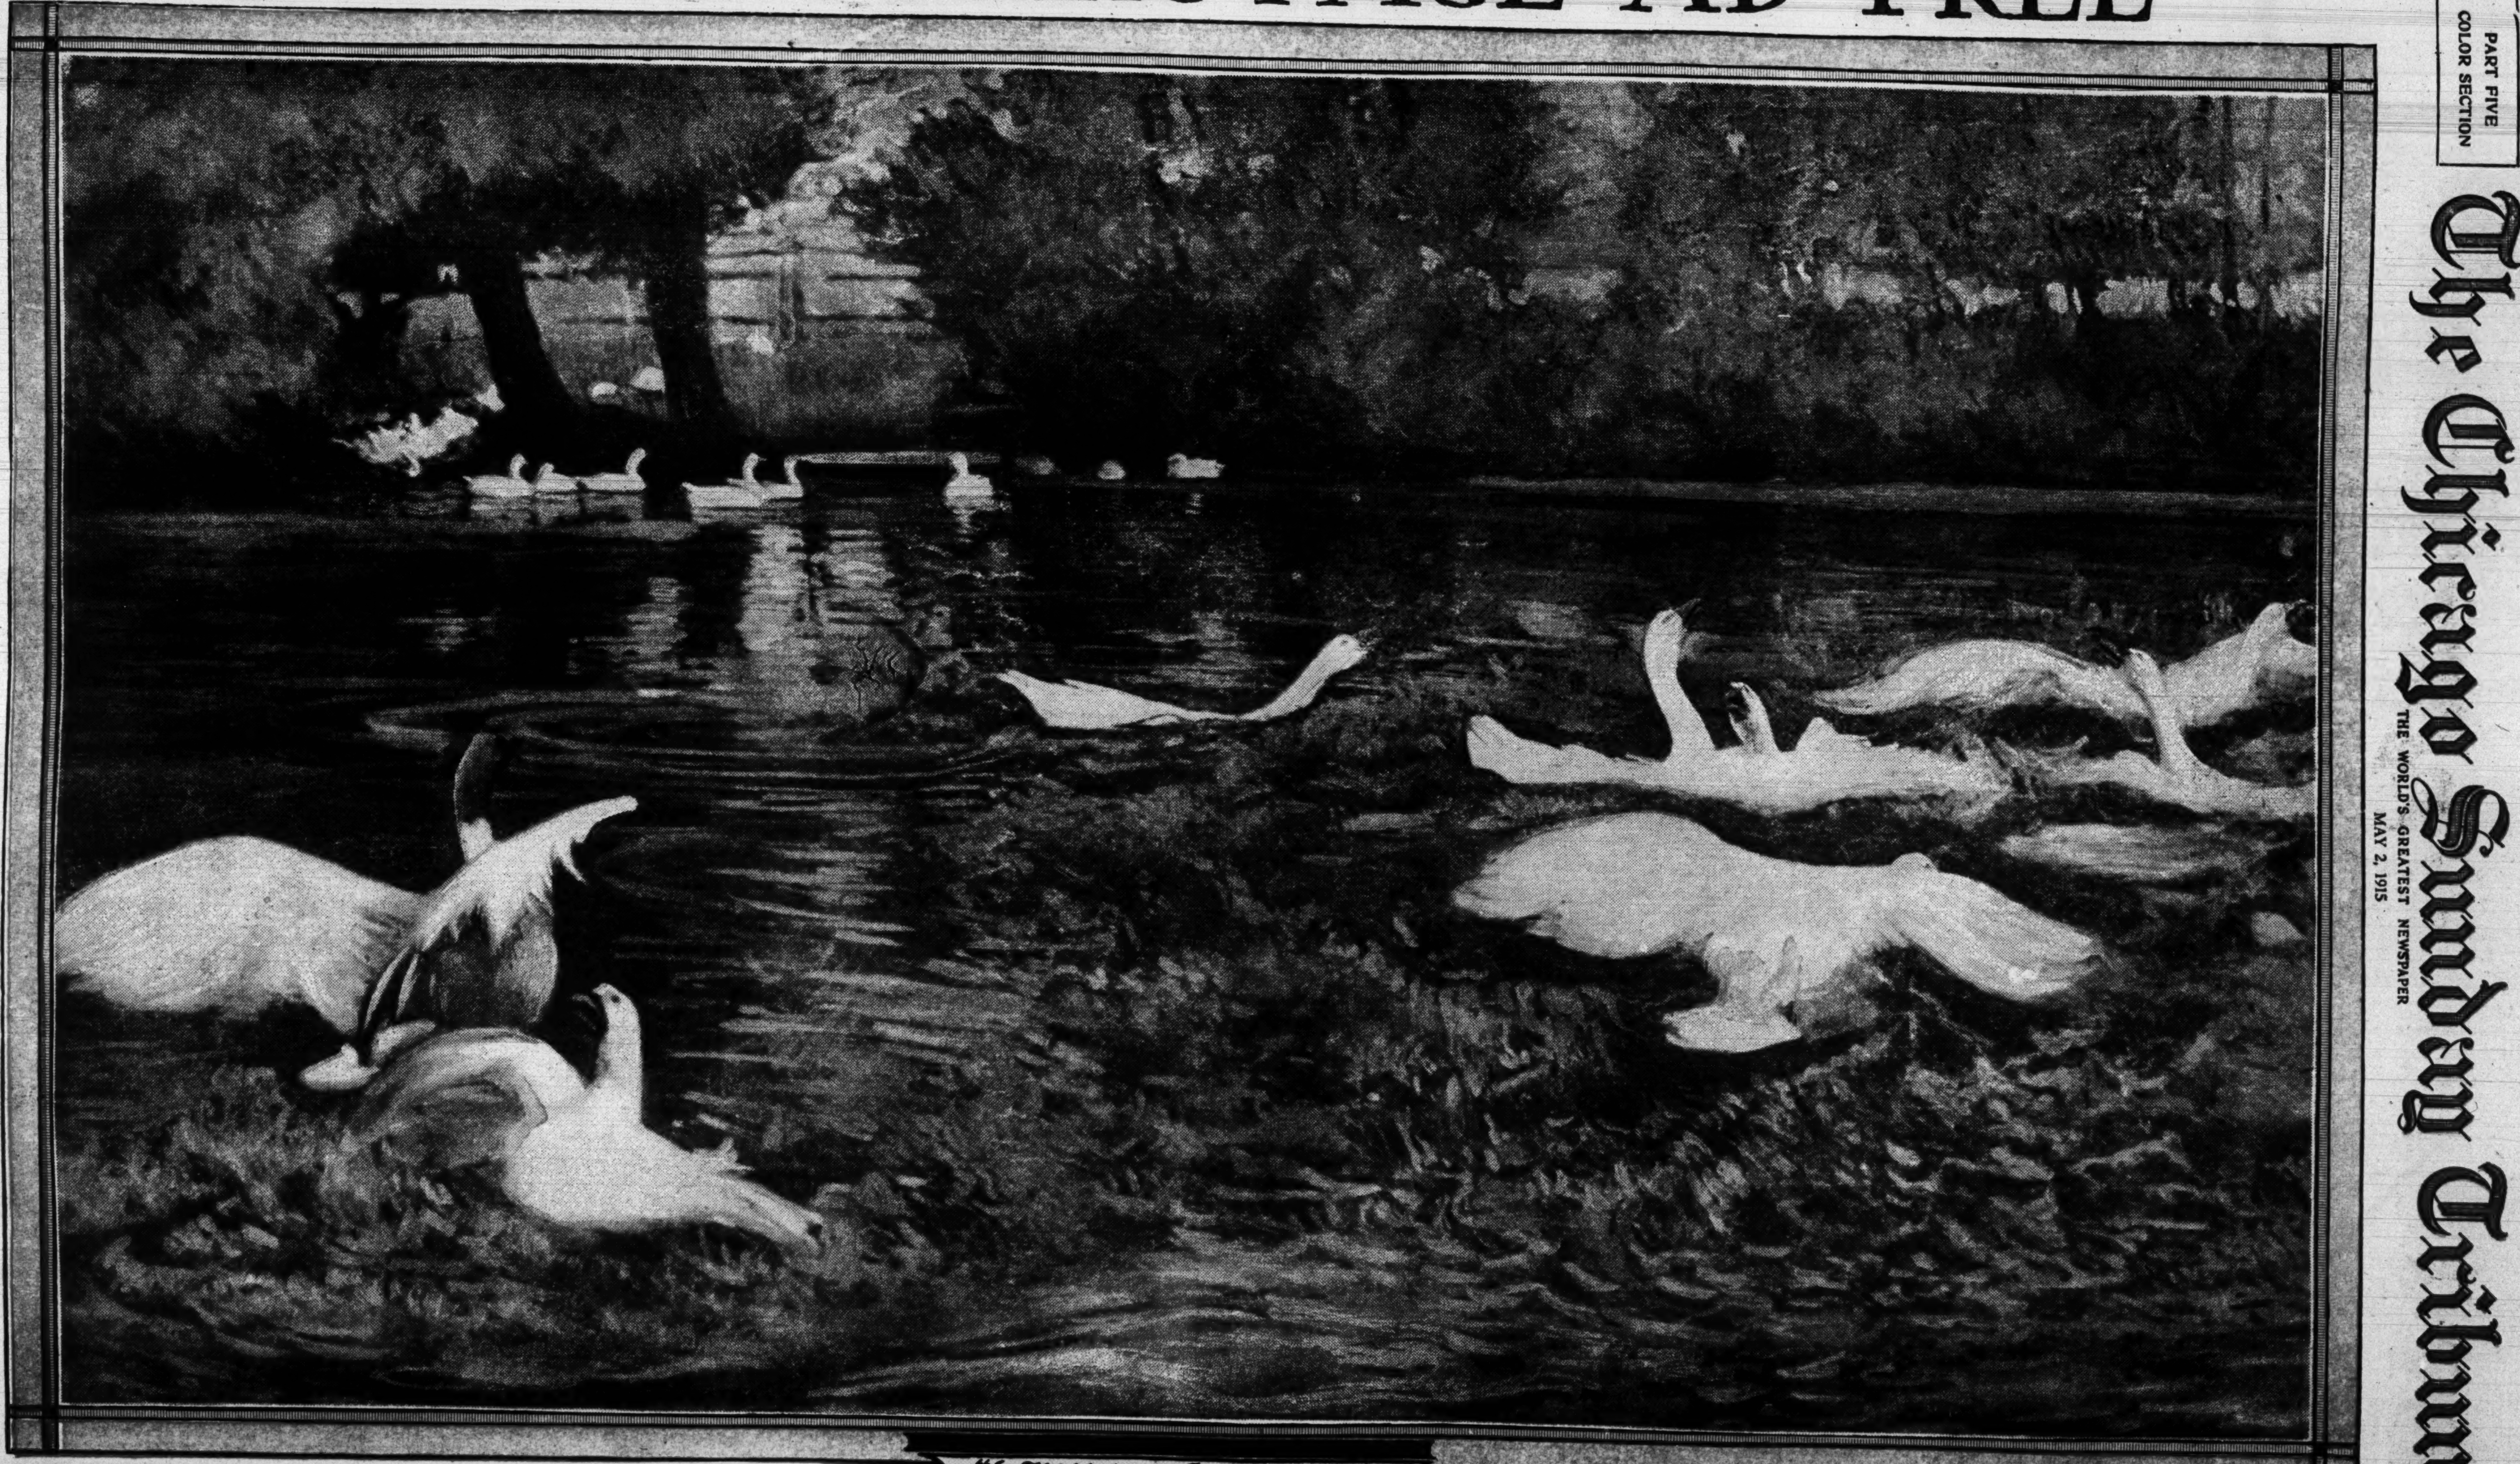
STILL ANOTHER PAGE AD FREE



"In Wilder Aufregung"
(Geese at Play)
From a painting by
Rudolph Schramm-Zittau

[Copyright by Fritz von Frantzius, Chicago.]

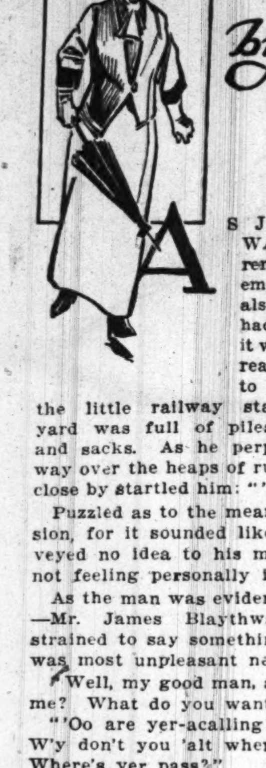
Twice in the last few months The Chicago Tribune has printed a "full page ad" free of works of art contained in the Art institute and reproduced in color and photogravure at remarkably low prices. In one instance the list included accurate copies of ancient and modern masters, printed on postals, which sell for a penny apiece. The second time the list contained twenty-five color reproductions of the world's most famous masterpieces, each of which may be had for 25 cents. All this newspaper publicity has resulted in such tremendous sales for the Art institute, according to its directors, that we are reprinting by special request the list of the twenty-five masterpieces to be had in exquisite color reproduction for 25 cents each. This time it is a reproduction of Rudolph Schramm-Zittau's masterpiece, "Geese at Play." The original is 68½ by 118 inches in size, and the reproduction, which may be had at the Art institute for $1, is 11 by 18 inches.

A UNIQUE and unprecedented offer is being made you by the Chicago Art institute. For $1 you may purchase this perfect reproduction of Rudolph Schramm-Zittau's "Geese at Play," which has recently been presented to the Art institute by Fritz von Frantzius. This picture is of a type similar to Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair" and possesses the same qualities of general appeal. It was first exhibited in 1911 at the Munich Secession and later in 1912 exhibited at the Grosse Berliner Kunstausstellung, where it created wide interest and universal admiration. Its reproduction in inexpensive copies for the public as a whole is considered of such importance that The Tribune is giving it a full page of publicity.

The artist, Rudolph Schramm-Zittau, is ranked as the foremost painter of ducks and geese. He also is doing some work in sculpture, animals being his specialty. He was born at Zittau, in Saxony, in 1874, and was under the influence of Germany's best known animal painter, Heinrich Zugel, during the early years of his education. He is said to be the best of "allover" painters and the subjects of his paintings are almost invariably familiar and happy ones. This is particularly true in the case of the "Geese at Play." It is a rather large canvas in the original, and in the copies the blue of the summer skies and waters is just as clear and just as blue and the toned whites in the snowy plumage of the fowls make up a color scheme that is sparkling while it is restful.

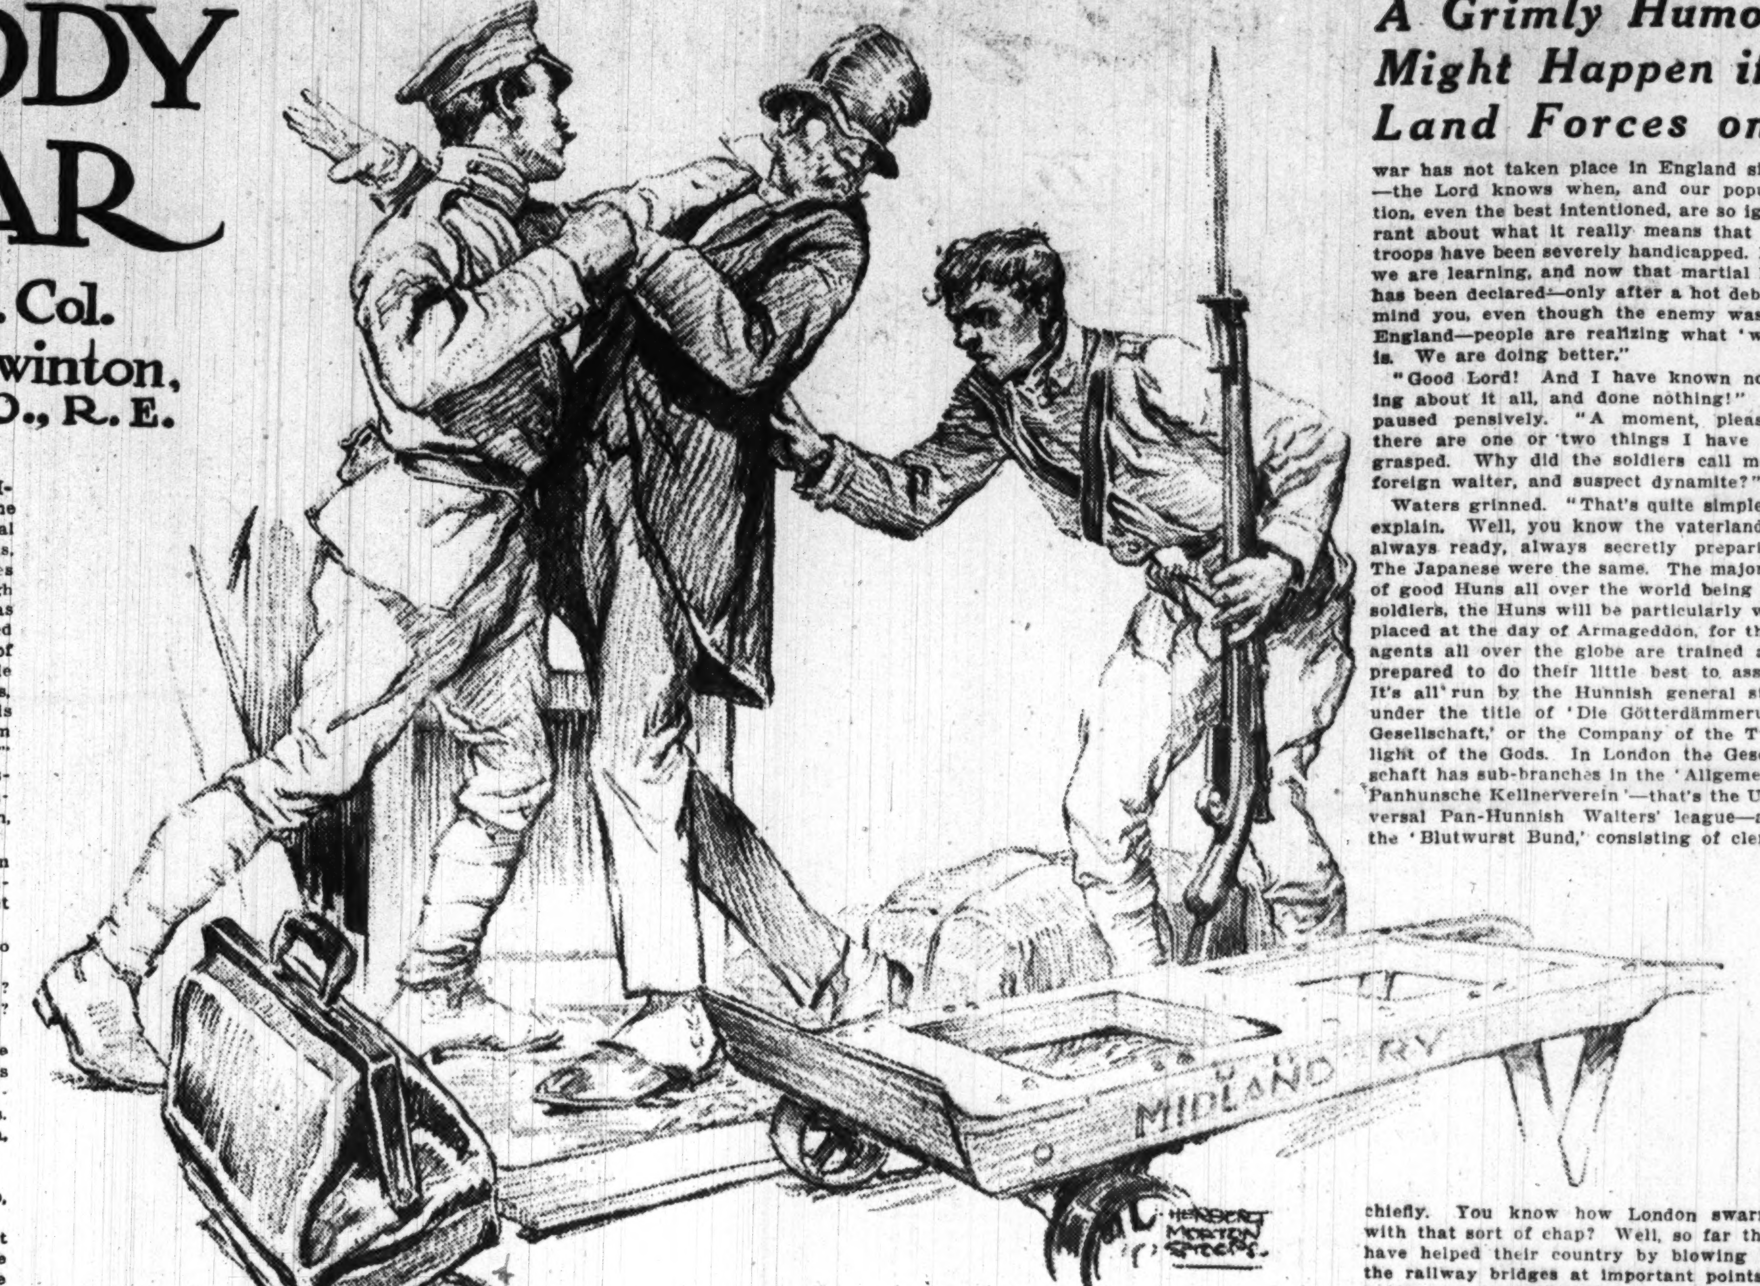
From the opinions of competent critics both on this and the other side of the Atlantic there is every reason to believe that this is destined to become one of the world's most popular paintings. In the original it is 68½x118 inches in size, but in the splendid color reproduction which sells for $1 it is 11x18 inches.

An EDDY of WAR



by Lieut. Col. E. D. Swinton, D. S. O., R. E.

A Grimly Humorous Story of What Might Happen if the Germans Should Land Forces on the British Isles.



AS JAMES BLAYTHWATE pressed on he remarked the unusual emptiness of the roads, also that several houses had blinds down, though it was but May. He was really quite astonished to observe the state of the little railway station. The whole yard was full of piles of crates, cases, and sacks. As he perplexedly picked his way over the heaps of rubbish a shout from close by startled him: "'Alt-oo-goes-there?"

Puzzled as to the meaning of this expression, for it sounded like English, yet conveyed no idea to his mind, he walked on, not feeling personally interested.

As the man was evidently addressing him—Mr. James Blaythwate—he felt constrained to say something, for the bayonet was most unpleasant near his waistcoat.

"Well, my good man, are you speaking to me? What do you want?"

"'Oo are yer-acalling of yer good man? W'y don't you 'alt when ye're challenged? Where's yer pass?"

Convinced that by some curious chance he was dealing with a drunken person, James determined not to exasperate him by disputing the point, but to let the matter pass. Waving the soldier aside with his umbrella, he said soothingly:

"Tut, tut."

"Tut, tut, indeed! I'll tut-touch yer up, if that's yer little game."

With that the now irritated soldier put his head back and roared out some more incomprehensible jargon: "Corpril of the gord!" at the same time pointing his bayonet more fixedly at James' person.

"Refused to 'alt when challenged, corpril," said the first soldier. "Tried to force me. Shouldn't wonder if 'e is one of them furrin waiters, an' got dynamite or something in 'is bag; d——d furriner anyway."

"You come along o' me, sonny," said the newcomer, who wore stripes on his arm and breathed hard on James' neck.

The latter was petrified with rage.

"Wh-wh-what the ——" he stuttered, and then speech failed him. Illness and confinement to bed, excitement and the hasty walk to the station, coupled with this last outrage, worked their cumulative effect. He turned pale, felt faint and sick, and staggered slightly.

Seeing that he looked ill, the corporal loosened his hold on the collar, and saying "You'd best come quiet," offered his arm, at the same time relieving James of the bag. Two more khaki soldiers had turned up meanwhile, so he was gently led toward the platform. As he was passing through the booking office he sought his handkerchief with his disengaged hand. "Ah, use yer revolver, would yer?" and before he could get his handkerchief his arm and again his collar were violently seized.

This had a tonic effect, all feeling of faintness vanished, he saw red. The fighting blood of all the Blaythwates since the days of the city trained bands was roused. Uttering in a yell language, which, whispered, would have paralyzed his co-church wardens, James wrenched himself free from his captor with a rending noise—as his frock coat tore in two—and led off briskly with his pudgy left, dealing the corporal what, in the idiom of the ring, is known as "one on the boko." That member of the "backbone of the British army" countered neatly by driving James' hat down to his chin with the black bag. Then as one man they leaped on him. There was a kaleidoscopic scene of red faces, khaki, and black cloth, which appeared fitfully from a cloud of dust, accompanied by scuffling, grunts, and shocking remarks, such as "Get the blighter's revolver! Mind the dynamite! Biff him!"

The struggle was sharp but short. There emerged two khaki figures, very disheveled and minus helmets—between them a man in dusty gray clothes. All were breathing heavily.

"Ave you searched the blasted anarchist?" said the corporal.

"Yes, corpril."

"Got 'is revolver?"

"There ain't no revolver.'

"Been through hall 'is pockets?"

"Yes, corpril; 'ere's the contents in my aversack."

"Another case for the provvo marshal! I wonder what 'is game is. Looks like a furriner, or one of them blooming Chunchooses, with that beard an' all. But 'e swears like an Englishman. No pass, tries to force a sentry, assaults me in the execootion of my dooty. . . . I think 'e's woozy. Yes, take his boots off, same as a drunk, and put 'im in the pris'ner's room. I've given 'is bag o' dynamite a cooler in that bucket." With that the corporal went away.

James was taken into the dirty, oil smelling lamp room, his hat pried off his head, and the door locked on him, with the parting remark: "'Ope you'll doss down comfor'ble in the 'Otel Seesil."

He sat panting on the floor for some minutes. It must all be a frightful dream—the result of his fever—to be thus seized, abused, and assaulted by drunken soldiers on the platform of his own station. Where were the station master and porters, the usual staff?

But no, he was not dreaming.

Many ideas occurred to him. England should ring with the atrocity. He would exact a heavy penalty for all this or he was not a free Briton, and habeas corpus had been enacted in vain. His best course at present was to take a quiet line toward this band of drunken miscreants and wait till he could see some one in authority. Of course, he would escape if he could, but then he would have to return to Irrawaddy Villa and face Mrs. Blaythwate! For once he did not wish to face his wife.

Now Constance Blaythwate was a dear, motherly little soul, and having, unluckily, no children, poured all the honey of her affection over her husband.

As this lady does not enter further into this chapter of "our" Mr. B.'s biography, we can dismiss her in a few words. She was middle aged, plump, and pleasant, nearly always wore a silk dress with a dash of lace (as some of the bar haunting clerks would describe it), and a large cameo brooch. She loved her husband and her home; the whole house, from the door mat with "Forget-me-not" worked into the pattern, to the diminutive cozies which kept the boiled eggs warm at breakfast, showed signs of her loving care. Her husband's turnout, too, did her credit.

Of course he had worried about his absence from business, but to have known about the war—war actually in England, added to the troubles in the east—would have long delayed his recovery. This same ignorance was now to provide one day at least of sore trial for James, though, to be just, it was his own fault and not hers. How could she have known what his intentions were? Barely two short hours before James' brusque arrival at the "Hotel Seesil" he had been comfortably ensconced in an invalid chair, enjoying, or perhaps suffering, the nursing attentions of his wife.

"Now I think you'll do, darling," she had at last said, as she gave a pat to the pillow behind his head and wheeled the armchair round back to the light. "I'm glad you are sensible enough to see the absurdity of thinking of town. I shall not be back till luncheon, I have so much to do this morning, but Gwladwys will bring up your hot broth and toast at half-past eleven." (Gwladwys was the up and down maid.)

With that she took a parting glance round the room, finally went out, as there seemed nothing more for her to fuss over.

As soon as she had left the room her husband's dull and somewhat furtive expression underwent a transformation into one of alert purpose. He listened intently. After a few moments the front door banged and he heard the crunch of heels along the gravel drive of Irrawaddy Villa (James did business with Burmah). In a trice he was out of his armchair. Shuffling to the window, he cautiously peeped out from behind the blinds. He was just in time to see that it really was his wife, as she disappeared round the corner of the conservatory. With finished cunning, bred of long premeditation, he waited at the window for five minutes to see that Connie did not return to fetch something she had forgotten, or to give him some last injunction about himself. No, he was safe. At last he would get to his business, and away from this house of bondage.

He whistled; he would get to town again, be at his office, and see how things had got on during his absence. He was not the senior partner, but without wishing to appear conceited he knew that he—Mr. James Blaythwate—was really the firm. He had received no letters for weeks, and had not even seen a paper, so close had his wife kept him.

For a fortnight he had meanly pretended to acquiesce in her wishes, with the secret intention of giving her the slip at the first opportunity. Now he would do it.

His chance had come. The hospital nurse who had continued watch over him during the occasional absences of his wife had left him for good. His wife would be out for at least—he looked at the clock—two hours. He would catch the 10:40 up—not his usual train, but it would do. Without waste of time he proceeded to dress.

At last he got as far as standing before the glass to tie his necktie. The devil! He had quite forgotten his six weeks' beard, or rather fluffy Newgate fringe, for it could hardly be called a beard. Connie had not allowed him to shave, as she thought the hair kept his neck warm. There was a gray thread or two among the brown fluff, and it looked positively loathly. There would not be time to shave and catch the 10:40, and the next up train was not till 12:10. Now James was a natty man, and took a proper pride in his dress, had a nice taste in cravats and washing waistcoats.

As he gazed at himself in the glass he almost determined to risk the 12:10, but the thought of the veal broth at 11:30 settled the matter. Beard or no beard, he would catch the 10:40. He tied his tie, put on the best starched white waistcoat he could find. There he was—ready! He opened the door and crept down to the morning room, collected some papers, which he rammed into his pocket, and many letters which he threw into his black bag, and brushed and put on his hat. Down the hall he tiptoed, stopping to scrawl a pencil note to his wife—"Back to dinner, love"—and so out at the front door, closing it as gently as possible.

And all in blissful ignorance of the dread happenings of the last few weeks! We all remember that by May of that year the war in England was at its height. The dinghies had disgorged their thousands, and the Huns had landed their armies, as the papers put it, "on our fair country's soil," and seemed to be on the point of overturning the southern counties. It was a critical moment. Indecisive encounters had been fought, but, notwithstanding the gallantry displayed by our troops and the promptness with which schemes had been improvised to meet the invasion, the possibility of which had never been officially recognized, the enemy seemed to have establishd a foothold. At this time of stress, when reinforcements sent east had so severely drained the supply of soldiers, it needed a mighty effort to get together a sufficiently large citizen army to cope with the invader.

It was just at this juncture that James Blaythwate, slinking down to the station, with nothing bigger looming on his mental horizon than an overmastering desire to escape his fond spouse and get up to his business, had suddenly encountered war—red war—and was now recovering from the shock in the "Hotel Seesil."

To return to him. He stood up and examined his prison. The door was stout and secure; the window was open, but barred. By squeezing his face close between the bars he was able to see the sentry walking up and down.

While James was cooling his fevered brow against the iron bars something happened. The corporal, whose nose was now quite bulbous, came up with a fresh soldier, who faced the sentry. The corporal emitted a series of barks, and the men indulged in a sort of war dance, and with much waving and slapping of rifles solemnly set to partners. The new man changed places with the old sentry, who went away with the corporal.

James watched all these rites with a keen eye; he was perforce taking some interest in soldiering. The new sentry was a mere lad, and a pleasant looking one to boot, so James, by now wary, plucked up his courage and whistled. No result. The sentry gave no sign. "Soldier!" said Blaythwate.

Again no result.

"I say, sergeant!" said the guileful James, with unction; "could I have some water?"

This was productive of some result, but the soldier did not reply or approach. He merely put back his head and yelled out the same shibboleth as the previous sentry: "Corpril of the gord!"

As this worried N. C. O. came running up James could not help wondering at the strange habit of sentries of not replying when addressed, but of shouting for some one else.

As soon as he had ascertained what the "anarchist" wanted the corporal brought a tin mug of water. As the prisoner was quiet, he untied his hands to allow him to drink and waxed more affable. James wanted to put a number of questions; but the corporal was most reserved. All that he would vouchsafe was that he—Blaythwate—would see the officer soon enough if he remained quiet; that the penalty for spies under martial law was death, and that anything he said now might be brought up in evidence against him! With that he tramped off.

His hands being free, he reached for his handkerchief. His pockets were empty, his money was gone, his watch and chain, cigar case, and the specially important papers he had placed in his pocket—all gone! His feelings underwent a revulsion. War! What did he care? Damn war! What was war to him compared to his business? He had lost enough already by his illness, and was he now to be robbed by men paid to defend him? He vented his ire upon his battered top hat, furiously kicking it round the room.

Presently he heard the tramp of armed men. The door was thrown open, and he was told to "come on." His heart gave a leap as he saw that he was being taken toward the station master's office. The rubicund little station master, Mr. Jones, was a friend of his, or rather as much a friend as anybody in his position could be to one in Mr. Blaythwate's. But as the party approached the office James was surprised to see printed over the door the words, "Railway Staff Officer." Arrived at the door, he was almost startled out of his skin by a bellow of "Prisne-ran-descort, How!"

Eventually Blaythwate found himself standing before a table littered with papers, behind which sat a tired looking man, also in khaki, apparently writing telegrams for a wager. He did not even look up for some little time, but continued to write. He was evidently an officer, and James gradually became indignant at being practically ignored after his shocking treatment. He burst out:

"Sir, I protest, I——"

His speech was cut short by a heavy nudge in the ribs and a hoarse whisper of "Wait till the officer speaks to you."

After a minute or two the latter, who was unshaven and appeared as if he had been up all night (as indeed was the case), looked up sharply.

"Well, corporal. What is this?"

"Pris'ner, sir. Refused to 'alt when challenged, tried to force number two sentry, and assaulted me when confining 'im. One of these furrin anarchist waiters, I think, sir."

"Have you searched him?"

"Yessir. 'Ere's a hinventory of 'is effecks, which are in this 'aversack, an' money an' personal trinkets in the pooch." And he handed them to the officer. James felt there was now at least a chance of getting his papers back.

"Was he armed?"

"Non' on 'im, sir, but 'e 'ad a suspicious lookin' black bag. I did not open it, sir. Thought it safer to drown the charge first; some of these 'ere infernal machines are made to go orf when they're opened, I've 'eard. The bag rests in a fire bucket in the booking office."

James writhed.

The officer, who had been keenly examining Mr. Blaythwate, decided to hear what he had to say before wading through the evidence. He said:

"Who are you?"

"I am James Blaythwate of the well known firm of Blaythwate Bros. & Buttery——"

"What nationality? Say 'the.'" [N. B. This was a test word.]

"Why, English, of course. What the devil——"

"Hold on a moment, Mr. Blathway. You must admit appearances are against you. To cut matters short—have you a pass?"

"No, I have a season."

"No, no! I mean a martial law pass or permit, to identify you and allow you to travel."

"No. I don't even know what you are talking about."

"Can you name any responsible local man or official to vouch for you? You don't look as if you were the gentleman you name."

James caught sight of the cheery face of the station master passing the door.

"Mr. Jones!" he called out. "Mr. Jones!"

Mr. Jones came in and coldly looked this bearded tramp up and down. Then a gleam of recognition came into his eyes.

"Why, if it is not Mr. James Blaythwate! Why, Mr. Blaythwate, sir, I hardly knew you."

This was conclusive. At any rate, the officer took it as a proof of identification.

"Well, what about this charge, Mr—er——?"

"Blaythwate," put in James.

"Thanks. Mr. Blaythwate, what have you to say? It is a very serious charge in time of war."

"I think I can explain all that, sir. It is all a misunderstanding," pleaded James, now quite humble. "I could explain it to you," with a meaning glance at the escort.

"Do you answer for this man, Mr. Jones?"

"Why, yes, sir; he is a churchwarden of my church."

At this Capt. Waters nodded to the corporal. The latter discreetly though noisily withdrew his cohort. Mr. Blaythwate then proceeded to explain matters, amid many interruptions from the telephone. The captain found very soon, to his stupefaction, that Mr. Blaythwate was ignorant of the fact that the country was invaded or that war was in our midst. Finally, he said: "I see well enough that an error has been made, and I apologize on behalf of my men, who were only doing their duty. There were mistakes on both sides. I will do all I can for you. If you will go into that little room labeled 'Officers' you will find some water and somethig to drink. Please make yourself at home for a quarter of an hour. I then come off duty, and will see you. I'll have your boots and bag taken round."

"Look here," said Waters, 'before I start off to explain matters fully—do you still wish to go up to town?"

"Yes, please."

"Well, I'll write you out a pass which will carry you through, but you will not go up for some time. The Flying Cit—the train for business men, you know—goes up at 9 a. m. every day. It is the only up passenger train. There are several up empties, running back from the front, which do not stop here, but I think there is a 'mixed wounded and sick' coming through in about an hour, which will. But you can't go up as you are. Will you go home and change? You have plenty of time. But I think I would take off that beard. Beards are regarded with suspicion nowadays. I am not going to shave for a few minutes, so I will lend you my shaving tackle first."

James was only too pleased, and ten minutes afterward had his usual pink chin, smooth and clean, and felt good. He and Waters became almost confidential. He told the latter all his adventures in detail, and found him most sympathetic.

"Yes, that's the worst of it," said he; "a war has not taken place in England since—the Lord knows when, and our population, even the best intentioned, are so ignorant about what it really means that our troops have been severely handicapped. But we are learning, and now that martial law has been declared—only after a hot debate, mind you, even though the enemy was in England—people are realizing what 'war' is. We are doing better."

"Good Lord! And I have known nothing about it all, and done nothing!" He paused pensively. "A moment, please—there are one or two things I have not grasped. Why did the soldiers call me a foreign waiter, and suspect dynamite?"

Waters grinned. "That's quite simple to explain. Well, you know the vaterland is always ready, always secretly preparing. The Japanese were the same. The majority of good Huns all over the world being old soldiers, the Huns will be particularly well placed at the day of Armageddon, for their agents all over the globe are trained and prepared to do their little best to assist. It's all run by the Hunnish general staff under the title of 'Die Götterdämmerung Gesellschaft,' or the Company of the Twilight of the Gods. In London the Gesellschaft has sub-branches in the 'Allgemeine Panhunsche Kellnerverein'—that's the Universal Pan-Hunnish Waiters' league—and the 'Blutwurst Bund,' consisting of clerks chiefly. You know how London swarms with that sort of chap? Well, so far they have helped their country by blowing up the railway bridges at important points—points most cleverly chosen so as to impede our mobilization. Among other things, they messed up all the telephone and telegraph wires in London. The result was chaotic. They say that when the chief of staff was trying to telephone to some general about a move he got on to the chef at the Carlton, who gave him h—l for not sending up enough plovers' eggs!

"This being so, we are particularly watchful against all foreigners now. . . carried a bag, you wore a scrubby beard, you did not appear to understand the sentry, you struggled—hence the mistake. Well, if you'll excuse me, I think I'll turn in a spell. It won't be so long before your train comes along. Here's one of the empties running through now."

It was a tedious wait, but as he sat on, James had plenty to think about, and was getting himself adjusted, as it were, into his new world. He was interested to see some trains of wounded go up, and several others of soldiers, guns, horses, and supplies pass through on their way to the front.

At last his train arrived.

"Once in a first class carriage I shall feel myself again." He was soon to be undeceived. The train was a long one, made up of carriages, flat open trucks, and cattle wagons, all rather dirty.

"I suppose you've got a pass," said the guard rather crustily. Blaythwate hastened to show the permit Waters had written for him on the yellow form. "O, all right, but you can't go in the carriages, you know, as they're full of wounded. Get into one of those open wagons. They haven't cleaned the cattle vans, but, please God, they'll do it some day."

Presently they started. At any rate, he was now at last on the road to London. He looked back at the station.

It was not quite deserted, for there was something moved. It was coming down the road, and hurriedly, too. By jingo! A female figure, a cerise colored bonnet. It could not be—yes, it was Connie, and no other!

It flashed through his mind that she must have returned early, discovered his escape, followed on his track, and come to see whether he had got away yet. She was running now. Doubtless she saw that the train was moving out. Faintly borne on the breeze, the now familiar cry greeted his ears: "'Alt-oo-goes-there?"

That was all; the train was now increasing speed, and the station was receding into the distance. James sank down on a tarpaulin, and wondered with a sort of detached interest what his wife's encounter with the sentry would be like. She mightn't understand, either. He pictured her rather annoyed. Would they call her "woozy," too? He felt almost inclined to back the lady if it came to a struggle. Fancy Mrs. B. having her boots taken off! Bad James chortled a little, I am afraid.

Presently, after crawling along for a while, they stopped away from a station on the top of an embankment. Something had happened here, apparently, for a lot of baulks of timber were strewn about at the foot of the slope, and heavy things had been dragged along. Blaythwate saw a number of men on the line at the front of the train. It was no use speculating, he knew, but he hoped that they were not being attacked by the enemy. There was hammering going on, and many figures could be seen running about. He was just moving over to have a look from the other side when a voice from below addressed him:

"Have you any jacks with you?" The speaker seemed to be an officer, from the authoritative way in which he spoke.

"No, I haven't seen any Jacks; but there are lots of soldiers in the train," was the innocent reply.

"What d'you mean? I want to know about my stores, not your d——n silly jokes. Didn't you come up with the stores?"

"No, sir," responded the other, who, seeing how arbitrary these soldiers were apt to be, thought he had better be respectful. "I haven't anything to do with stores. I am only a passenger."

The officer passed on hurriedly, and another man in dirty khaki then came up, asking whether there was any news from the front, and adding that "the —— waiters were probably surprised that the bridge had been mended so quickly."

"Oh, has the bridge been broken?" asked Blaythwate.

"Of course, what do you think?" said the man; "but it wasn't what you might rightly call a demolishin'; we only had to shore up the ends of the girders, but it was a bit awkward, 'cause we're short of plant; that's the reason why the captain asked if you'd got some. . . . D——n foolishness, I call it," continued he, "not to have seen that these anarchist jokers would be after doing damage. It's good biz that they're mostly swep' up into camps like that one over there"—indicating an assemblage of tents which lay in an inclosure of barbed wire not far from the line. "They were getting a bit unpopular, and if just a few of them were lynched it served them jolly well right. The police are shepherding them now to rights, but it 'ud be better to dump the lot somewhere abroad, I think. So long!" The train moved on.

Time was getting on, and our passenger was becoming very tired and hungry. The journey was horribly tedious, so he thought it would be well to lie down and see if he could get a little sleep. After all, he found the tarpaulin was better than nothing as a couch, and he slept the sleep of exhaustion. He was aroused by being shaken.

Dazed and blinking, James painfully climbed down from his truck. It was night. In front was a network of rails shimmering in the different colored lights reflected from the signals which dotted the night, high and low. Engines were on all sides, pulling and pushing long trains of trucks, some empty, some full of horses.

A sudden rusty croak, almost at his feet, startled him, and, looking down, he saw a patch of blood red light on his leg. He looked again, and saw the cause. It was a ground disk signal which had been switched round. By its light he realized how near he was to the next rail, and hastily drew back toward his truck.

Presently the guard and two other officials came down the line discussing the detraining of the wounded.

"Hullo! You still here? I'll show you the way to the station if you will follow me."

Blaythwate cheered up.

"Now, then, just come along with me, keep close behind, and step where I step," and off he strode, Blaythwate following him, with furtive glances up and down the lines as he crossed each rail.

"Where are you bound for?"

"I did intend to get to my office in the city, but I counted on being carried right through into St. Paul's station."

"Why, bless you, sir, that's impossible. That's what we've all been wishing for for the last three weeks. The waiters blew down Blackfriars bridge the first thing. They are knowing ones, and knew where the shoe would pinch pretty well."

"But what is the special importance of that bridge? I should have thought Cannon street much more important. Though I personally do not go there as a rule, there are thousands more city men who go to Cannon street every day than to St. Paul's."

"That's right, sir, from your point of view, but you see it's this way. Their object was not to inconvenience the city gents, or, as we call them, 'Daily Breaders,' no offense to you, sir, but to delay and throw out of gear this here concentration of troops."

By this time they had reached the platform, Blaythwate marveling at the intelligence of the guard.

"Well, I must be going on with my work now, sir. I don't think they'll let you cross the river without a special permit. I think your best way would be to walk to London bridge and try that way first—it's quite close."

"O, I shall drive, I think," said Blaythwate airily.

"Excuse me. Not for love nor money. You won't see many horses nor taxis about now, they're all commandeered for the army. You'd best go straight down there to London bridge. 'K'you, sir, much obliged. I wish you luck.'

His guide was right; outside the street there were no cabs, no motor busses, no horses, and most of the shops were shut. The town looked extremely desolate. James betook himself in the direction advised, and soon found London bridge.

As he approached them a man in blue, with a rifle and bandolier, stepped out from the shadow into the light. It was an armed police sentry.

"Pass, please."

"I have no pass. I am Mr. Ja——"

"Can't help who you are. You're not going across this bridge without a permit. You will have to stay this side tonight. You can get a pass, if you're all right, from a provvo marshal at one of the South London police stations in the morning." Then, as James still hesitated, "Pass along, please, pass along. No loitering allowed near the bridges."

There was nothing for it. Blaythwate felt like one of those wretched outcasts he had often pitied on the embankment. He turned away and dejectedly started to walk westward. Eventually he arrived at Blackfriars road bridge.

Here he found another arm police guard. The sentry, by strange good fortune, was a constable of the city force who had often been on duty near Blaythwate's office and knew him. Though he recognized him, and was most considerate and polite, he would not allow James to cross. He chatted for a few minutes, however, with the disconsolate wanderer, and explained several points to him—how all the policemen who were reservists had been armed, and a jolly good thing, too; how there had been anti-foreign riots and some lynching before the aliens had been concentrated in camps. James remembered the camp of the aliens by the railway, which had puzzled him not a little.

Alongside was the damaged railway bridge being repaired, a blaze of light and crowded with men and engines of every sort, from locomotives to gigantic steam cranes.

In the gap, a confused mass of piles: but the under side of the bridge, as indeed of all the others, was lit up more brilliantly than the top, and busy little steam launches full of armed men skimmed hither and thither, patrolling the waterway. Tired as he was, James gradually forgot himself and his troubles—his mind turned to weightier matters. How about the front? A vague dread seized him. What if we should not win? He must inquire for news. He really had heard no war news since his talk with Waters—hours ago.

There was none of the usual roar of the city. It seemed comparatively dead. Ten o'clock began to boom out clearly across the river from Big Ben.

At that moment there was a detonation which seemed to split the very earth; the whole of the southern sky, from the tops of the houses, which stood out an inky mass, to the zenith, burst into one dazzling sheet of flame. Blaythwate, with every other soul near him, was hurled down by the concussion. When he collected himself and could sit up he found his friend Police Constable Thompson on all fours close by. All the lights had gone out.

"Yes," muttered the policeman, in a tone of almost personal grievance, "there goes the gasometers. I knoo they'd do it. I said so."

Blaythwate sat on in the darkness.

VOICE of the FAN

Dear Miss Tinee: As an inveterate patron of movie palaces wherein are shown salacious pictures I wish to enter my vigorous if ineffective protest against the fake and fraudulent methods employed to wheedle me out of my dimes.

There was a time—alas! some months agone—when the simple legend "No children admitted" had for me its inestimable valuation. With this admonishment across the portals of the movie theater I knew that I could pay my dime or 15 cents and be the recipient of three-quarters of an hour's entertainment that to me provided the reason for existence of the motion picture enterprise. With the special permit, signed by the chief of police and the mayor's secretary, as a supplement to the painted legend informing the prospective movie patrons that the show within was not conceived and staged for the debutantes and the adolescent, I was sure it was conceived and staged for me and my kind.

But this simple expedient of the censors to prevent the corruption of the morals of the youth of the city has been shamelessly appropriated by the conscienceless managers. It seems that the majority of the movie patrons have my own preference in the matter of pictures, and that the number of children "under 21 years of age" who attend the movies is so insignificant that to cater to them would invite the referee in bankruptcy. Hence the appropriation of the label "No children admitted" for plays which Anthony Comstock himself might find so innocuous as to be adaptable to the Chautauqua circuit.

I represent a big majority of the movie patrons, as is attested by the managers themselves—and we are not going to stand for this thing of being bunkoed by fake "No children admitted" much longer. Only recently I saw a sign of this character, below which were the words, "No fake," meaning, as I took it, that inside was the real goods. But alas and alack! my dime was spent for naught.

If you have any influence with the theater managers and the producers, save us crying thousands. DISAPPOINTED.

Dear Mae Tinee: In the March 28 issue you permitted a foolish person to dare you to print a silly letter. It was a nasty letter and utterly unfit to be printed, but probably the dare contained had less to do with the printing of it than the wish for criticism and to show a spirit of fairness.

Most of the stuff put in for the sake of fairness could have been wastebasketed. You have made something out of your department. Don't let some idiot throw your page lopsided.

Following shortly the publication of your own picture (it might have been a roto, later on—why not now?) some woman wrote she was surprised not to find a more modish person. Then you printed that letter. Well, you printed a compliment to yourself! If all a woman cared for in this life were modish things, God help her!

It isn't what you write in your page that is of interest to me. It is the study of a kind person who likes to give pleasure to others and who would go out of her way to do it that makes me turn first to your page each Sunday. You don't owe it to any boob to print any statements that make you appear foolish.

HUMPTY DUMPTY.

Thank you, Humpty Dumpty! Speaking of folks going out of their way to give pleasure to others—what about you, Mr. H. D.?

Dear Miss Tinee: Please print this—the reason why I fell for Francis X.:

Do you want to know why I like him—
Why I fell for Francis X.?
Girls, it's because he's glorious
And so wonderful to our sex.
It is because of his beautiful eyes
And a wealth of rich brown hair,
And because of tender, rosy mouth
And his forehead high and fair.
Because of his shoulders—O! so broad,
And his heaving, manly chest;
His strong arms with iron muscles
That put the villain to rest.

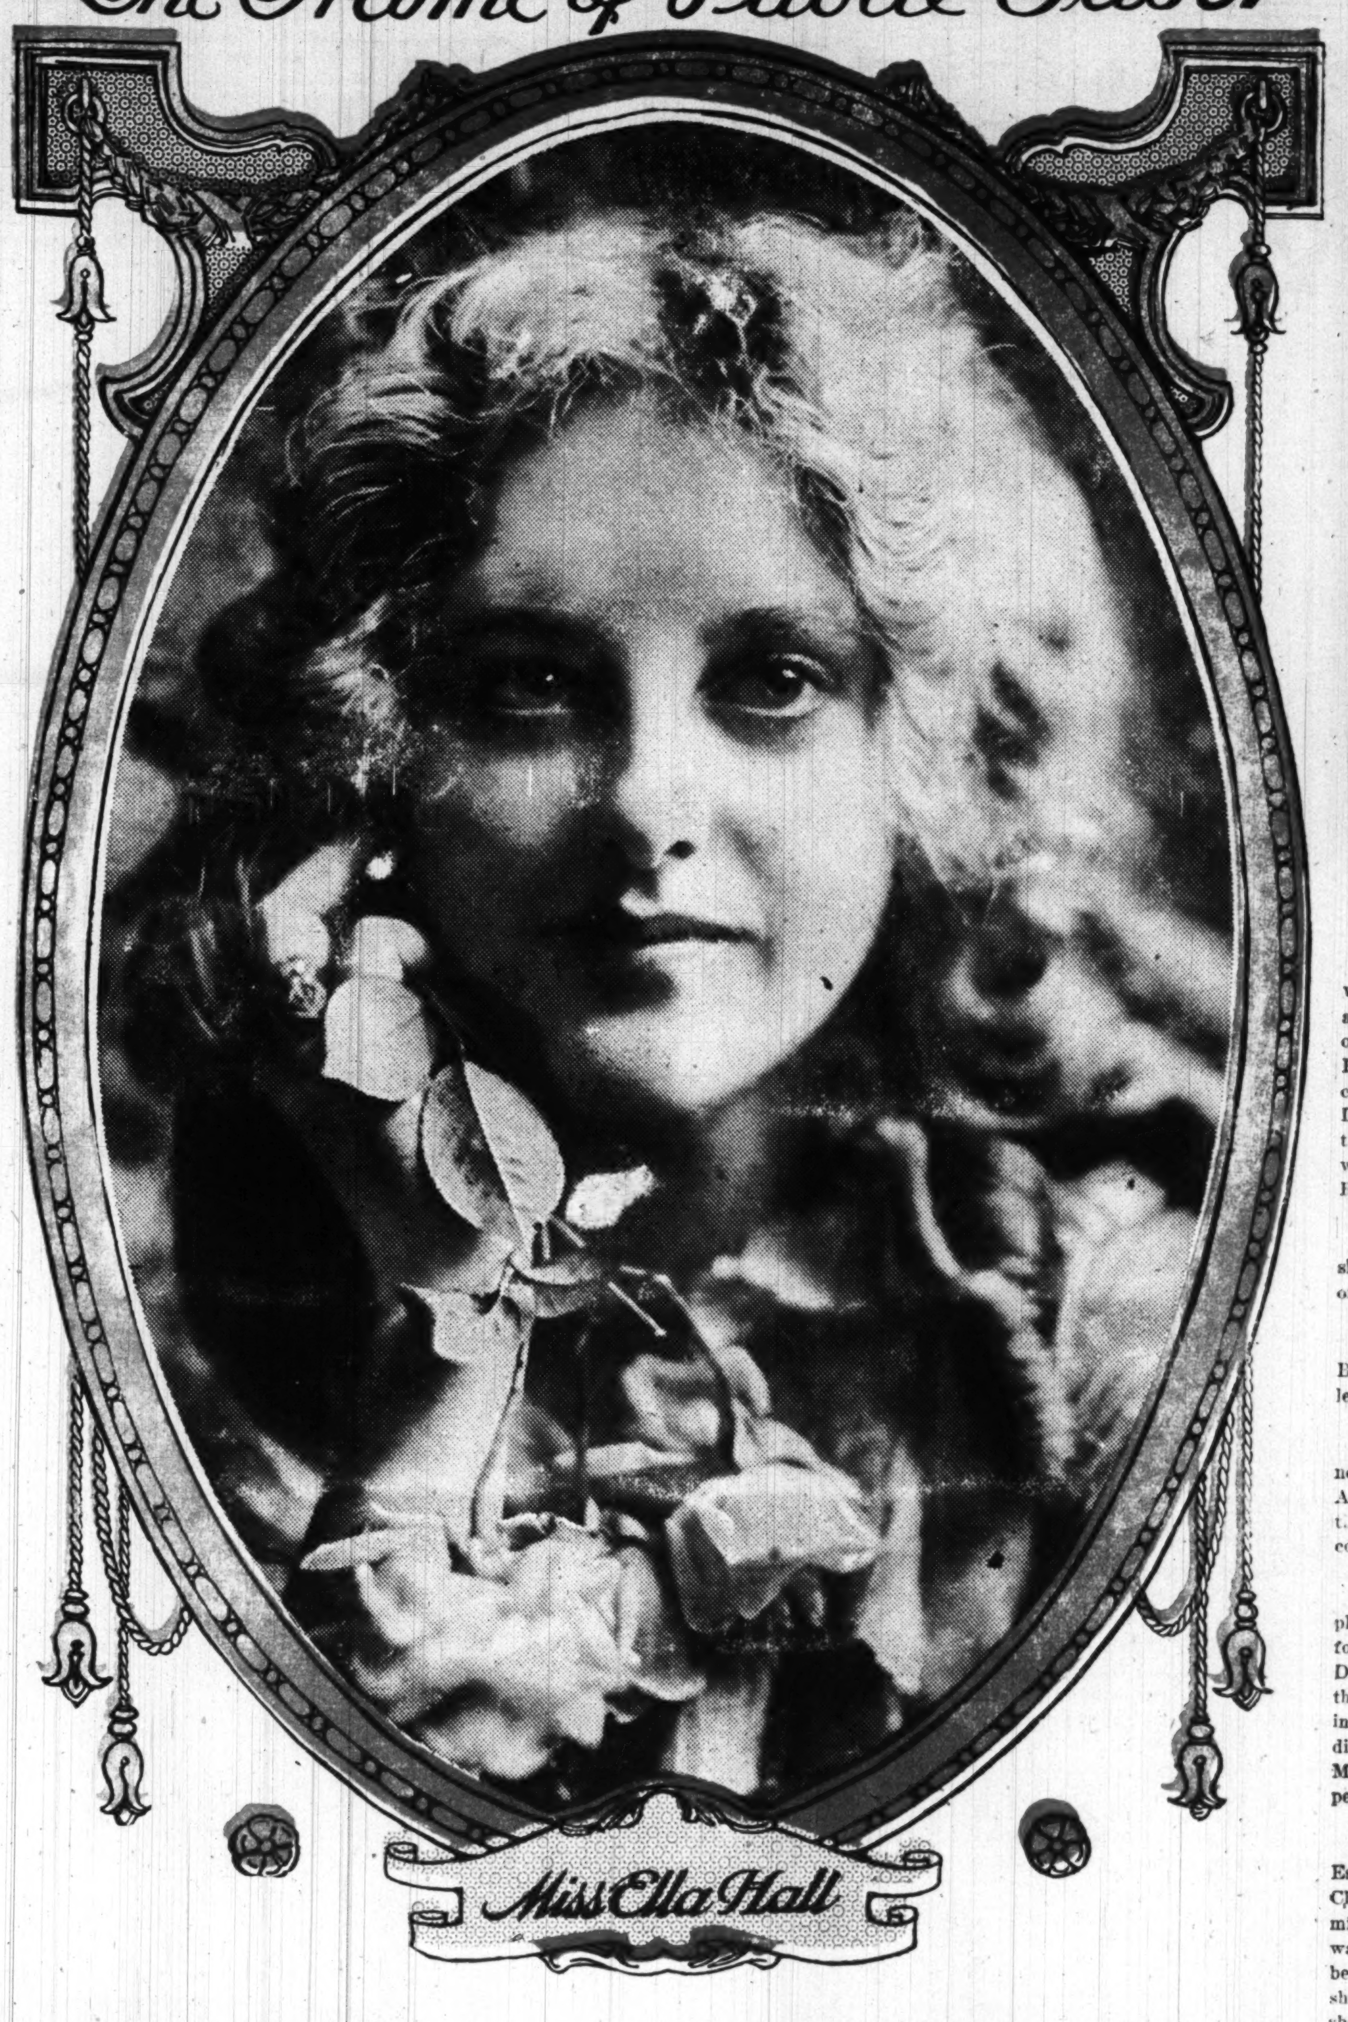
The Frame of Public Favor



THIS is little Ella Hall of the Universal Co., in whom you have shown so much interest of late. She is 17 years of age, was born in New York, and was educated in that city. She is an American by nationality and has been in moving pictures about six years, working during that time for the Biograph, Reliance, Kinemacolor and Universal companies. Previous to entering the motion picture field she was on the stage, where she played "little girl" parts in a number of well known productions. Miss Hall is a blonde. She has blue eyes and golden hair, is five and one-half feet tall, and weighs 105 pounds. Her favorite occupations are riding, rowing, and "I'm learning to swim and drive a real big car," she says. She is not much interested in books, declaring she likes sewing better. The two books, however, she says she likes best are "Ishmael and His Trials" and "Their Yesterdays." The photoplay in which she has made herself best known is "The Master Key." In that she does awfully good work. No, boys, she is not married.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS.

BLACKIE B.: You'd better forget the time your Sunday school teacher told you she was afraid you were going to be an actor. Judging from various things in your letter, I should say, as one having authority, that there is not the least danger of it. Acting is not all dimples, Blackie B.

HELEN L. S.: I should say I do like to get letters from 13 year olds! Why didn't you mention the name of the company that produced that picture in which you were interested, lady? I simply can't—yet, I know there's no such word in the dictionary—answer questions regarding plays and players unless I know the names of companies. Many of the scenes in "The Million Dollar Mystery" were taken in the summer time. Some were taken in winter. No, the reporter was not related to the butler in real life.

BERNICE K.: Beverly Bayne's real name is Pearl Van Name. She plays opposite Mr. Bushman most of the time. Sometimes Ruth Stonehouse works with him, however.

M. GUSSIE G.: You don't mention the name of the producing company. If your favorite receives enough votes his picture will appear in the "Frame." Yes, do write me a personal letter. I'll be delighted to receive and answer it.

B. A. A. O. E.'s: Thank you. There were, I believe about twenty-six episodes in "The Perils of Pauline." No. John Bunny is not dead. He's about to return to motion pictures. Pearl White and Crane Wilbur are neither married nor engaged, so far as I know. She has reddish blonde hair. Mr. Wilbur is in his late twenties. Divorced. Philadelphia now is his home town. He's joined the Lubin company, you know.

J. B. T.: A letter addressed to Miss Rosemary Theby in care of the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York, will reach her. The Victor company is a brand of the Universal. No trouble at all.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Miss Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

JUST SOME ONE: If you will write to Jack Pickford in care of the Mutual company, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, and to Harold Lockwood in care of the American company, Santa Barbara, Cal., inclosing a quarter for each, I am quite sure they will be sent to you.

EECN: So far as I know I give correct information regarding ages and relationship. But again—these are mooted questions.

ROSINA: You're a flattering little person, aren't you? But who doesn't like flattery? I do—so thanks, awfully.

MISS MARIE: Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the information you desire on how to become a photoplayer.

EMMA L.: Yes, Ruth Stonehouse answers letters personally—when stamped and self-addressed envelopes are inclosed. Yale Boss is 15 years old. He is with the Edison company. Mabel Forrest does not play much in pictures. I believe, however, that she has been seen in some with her husband, Bryant Washburn. Your vote received and registered.

WOULDBE: If you will send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope I'll be so glad to mail to you the printed material I have on scenario writing and how to become a photoplayer. Don't bank too much on the promise of that "moving picture school president." Take a little tip from mother and go slo-low-ly!

THOMAS F. S.: For the printed material you request, please send a stamped and self-addressed envelope. I have a vurr' good article which tells just how the "doubling" process is accomplished. I think it would interest you. You're welcome.

WORRIED: No—the awful news is not the truth. Mr. Chaplin is not insane—nor dead, nor married, nor deaf, nor dumb—thank heaven! A letter addressed to G. M. Anderson in care of the Essanay company, Niles, Cal., will reach him.

ALICE S.: Ella Hall is 17 years old. Mary Pickford's eyes are blue. Pauline Bush is about the age you mention. Your votes were received and counted—every one. Yes, I think Marguerite Clark vurr' attractive.

MARY R.: Yes, I think Mr. Kerrigan is lovely.

B. N.: Harold Lockwood is married, but I don't know the name of his wife. He is with the American company. He is in his late twenties.

BACHELOR: Thanks for the "tip," but I disapprove of the tipping system.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you; we are here to make you laugh," is the motto adopted by the Daisy Film company, recently organized by H. W. Wright, Harry Otto, and Richard Manning for the production of high class one reel comedies and photo plays. The Daisy Film company will operate in conjunction with the Active Motion Picture company, with joint offices and studio at 1101 West Randolph street, Chicago.

Fifty thousand rounds of ammunition was shot away by Director Martin in the filming of the Selig special, "The Hideous God, War."

Gene Gauntier, formerly of the Kalem and Biograph companies, has followed Mary Fuller into the Universal fold.

The Headline Fun Films company is announcing the engagement of Will Archie. At one time Mr. Archie was well known as the stable boy in "Wildfire." He's quite a comedian in his own way.

Members of the American studio forces are pleased at what is considered a good omen for the success of the photoplay novel, "The Diamond from the Sky," in that among the thirty-eight Indian players used in the opening scenes two were full blooded Apache Indians, Phillipe Lone Star and Bob Flores. Many are the superstitions of the movie people.

Miss Edna Mayo, leading woman with Essanay, took her first plunge in the lake at Chicago March 15. Miss Mayo is a swimming enthusiast and never cares how cold the water is. She drove down to Clarendon beach, plunged into the icy water, took a short swim, and ran back to her car, where she was covered with blankets.

"Poverty Flat," the Bret Harte mining camp pictured in the California Motion Picture corporation's April feature film release, "The Lily of Poverty Flat," was the motif of a surprise dinner given in San Francisco by Beatriz Michelena, the screen star, to her sister, Vera Michelena, the singing star of Ziegfeld's Follies, then playing at a local theater. Beatriz Michelena, gowned as Lily Folinsbee, the belle of the Sierran town, entertained the assembled guests by dancing her recent terpsichorean invention, the "Poverty Flat trot," her partner being Edwin Willis, a member of her company. One of the most interesting events of the evening was the singing of the two sisters. Beatriz Michelena, before she went into motion pictures, was a musical comedy and light opera prima donna. Vera Michelena has remained on the stage. Since the two sisters separated in the east several years ago they have had no opportunity to hear each other's voices until this novel reunion.

Florence La Badie declares that she keeps herself in good condition by swimming. "I've always been fond of swimming," she told a friend recently, "but it never occurred to me before to swim in the winter. Of course I've always done lots of it in the summer time. But when cold weather came—nix! I always felt badly when I stopped it, however, no matter how many silly exercises I did in my bedroom in the morning. Then it suddenly occurred me. Why not swim all the year round? So I go to the pool daily, and you've no idea how fine I feel in consequence."

Colin Campbell, feature director of the Selig company, bears proudly the reputation that he has not had a "regular" photograph taken in twenty years.

MY ADVENTURES AS A SPY

By SIR ROBERT BADEN-POWELL

Founder of the Boy Scouts

Sir Robert Baden-Powell is a man of particular interest to boys. He is the father of the Boy Scout movement which has gone around the world. There is much of scout craft in this story of Sir Robert's. While there is a distinct difference between the highly military Boy Scouts of England and the unmilitary boy scouts of America there is an element of interest in this work common to both. The story of the spy is a gift of the great war. Only the war made it possible for this story to be written. It will appear serially on this page. Don't miss a chapter.

CHAPTER I.

It has been difficult to write in peace time on the delicate subject of spies and spying, but now that the war is in progress and the methods of those much abused gentry have been disclosed there is no harm in going more fully into the question and to relate some of my own personal experiences.

Spies are like ghosts—people seem to have had a general feeling that there might be such things, but they did not at the same time believe in them—because they never saw them and seldom met any one who had had first hand experience of them. But as regards the spies I can speak with personal knowledge in saying that they do exist, and large numbers, not only in England but in every part of Europe.

As in the case of ghosts, any phenomenon which people don't understand, from a sudden crash on a quiet day to a midnight creak of a cupboard, has an effect of alarm upon nervous minds. So also a spy is spoken of with undue alarm and abhorrence because he is somewhat of a bogey.

As a first step it is well to disabuse one's mind of the idea that every spy is necessarily the base and despicable fellow he is generally held to be. He is often both clever and brave.

The term "spy" is used rather indiscriminately and has by use come to be a term of contempt. As a misapplication of the term "spy" the case of Maj. André always seems to me to have been rather a hard one. He was a Swiss by birth and during the American war of independence in 1780 joined the British army in Canada, where he ultimately became aide de camp to Gen. Sir H. Clinton.

The American commander of a fort near West Point, on the Hudson river, had hinted that he wanted to surrender, and Sir H. Clinton sent André to treat with him. In order to get through the American lines André dressed himself in plain clothes and took the name of John Anderson. He was unfortunately caught by the Americans and tried by court martial and hanged as a spy.

As he was not trying to get information, is seems scarcely right to call him a spy. Many people took this view at the time, and George III. gave his mother a pension, as well as a title to his brother, and his body was ultimately dug up and reinterred in Westminster abbey.

Let us for the moment change the term "spy" to "investigator" or "military agent." For war purposes these agents may be divided into:

1. Strategical and diplomatic agents, who study the political and military conditions in peace time of all other countries which might eventually be in opposition to their own in war. These also create political disaffection and organize outbreaks, such, for instance, as spreading sedition among Egyptians, or in India among the inhabitants, or in South Africa among the Boer population, to bring about an outbreak, if possible, in order to create confusion and draw off troops in time of war.

2. Tactical, military, or naval agents, who look into minor details of armament and terrain in peace time. These also make tactical preparations on the spot, such as material for extra bridges, gun emplacements, interruption of communications, etc.

3. Field spies. Those who act as scouts in disguise to reconnoiter positions and to report moves of the enemy in the field of war. Among these are residential spies and officer agents.

All these duties are again subdivided among agents of every grade, from ambassadors and their attachés downwards. Naval and military officers are sent to carry out special investigations by all countries, and paid detectives are stationed in likely centers to gather information.

There are also traitor spies. For these I allow I have not a good word. They are men who sell their countries' secrets for money. Fortunately we are not much troubled with them in England; but we have had a notorious example in South Africa.

In addition to finding out military details about a country, such as its preparedness in men, supplies, efficiency, and so on, these agents have to study tactical features of hills and plains, roads and railways, rivers and woods, and even the probable battlefields and their artillery positions, and so on.

The Germans in the present war have used huge guns whose shells, owing to their black, smoky explosions, have been nicknamed "black Marias" or "Jack Johnsons." These guns require strong concrete foundations to stand upon before they can be fired. But the Germans foresaw this long before the war and laid their plans accordingly.

They examined all the country over which they were likely to fight, both in Belgium and in France, and wherever they saw good positions for guns they built foundations and emplacements for them. This was done in the time of peace and therefore had to be done secretly. In order to divert suspicion a German would buy or rent a farm on which it was desired to build an emplacement. Then he would put down foundations for a new barn or farm building, or, if near a town, for a factory, and when these were complete he would erect some lightly constructed building upon it.

There was nothing to attract attention or suspicion about this and numbers of these emplacements are said to have been made before the war began. When war broke out and the troops arrived on the ground the buildings were hastily pulled down and there were the emplacements all ready for the guns.

Some years ago a report came to the war office that a foreign power was making gun emplacements in a position which had not before been suspected of being of military value, and they were evidently going to use it for strategical purposes.

I was sent to see whether the report was true. Of course it would not do to go as an officer—suspicions would be aroused, one would be allowed to see nothing and would probably be arrested as a spy. I, therefore went to stay with a friendly farmer in the neighborhood and went out shooting every day among the partridges and snipe which abounded there. The first thing I did was to look at the country generally and try to think which points would be most valuable as positions for artillery.

Then I went to look for partridges (and other things!) on the hills which I had noticed, and I soon found what I wanted.

Officers were there, taking angles and measurements, accompanied by workmen, who were driving pegs in the ground and marking off lines with tapes between them.

As I passed with my gun in my hand, bag on shoulder and dog at heel, they paid no attention to me, and from the neighboring hills I was able to watch their proceedings.

When they went away to their meals or returned to their quarters I went shooting over the ground they had left, and if I did not get a big bag of game, at any rate I made a good collection of drawings and measurements of the plans of the forts and emplacements which they had traced out on the ground.

So that within a few days of their starting to make them we had the plans of them all in our possession. Although they afterwards planted trees all over the sites to conceal the forts within them, and put up buildings in other places to hide them, we knew perfectly well where the emplacements were and what were their shapes and sizes.

This planting of trees to hide such defense works occasionally has the other effect and shows one where they are. This was notably the case at Tsingtau, captured by the Japanese and British forces from the Germans. As there were not any natural woods there, I had little difficulty in finding where the forts were by reason of the plantations of recent growth in the neighborhood of the place.

Residential spies take up their quarters more or less permanently in the country of their operations. A few are men in high places in the social or commercial world and are generally anxious for decorations and rewards. But most of the residential spies are of a more insignificant class, and in regular pay for their work.

Their duty is to act as agents to receive and distribute instructions secretly to other itinerant spies and to return their reports to headquarters. For this reason they are nicknamed in the German intelligence bureau "post boxes." They also themselves pick up what information they can from all available sources and transmit it home.

One, Steinbauer, had for some years past been one of the principal "post boxes" in England. He was attached to the kaiser's staff during his last visit to this country, when he came as the guest of the king to the opening of Queen Victoria's memorial.

Also the case of Dr. Karl Graves may be still in the memory of many. This German was arrested in Scotland for spying and was condemned to eighteen months' imprisonment, and was shortly afterwards released without any reason being officially assigned. He has since written a full account of what he did, and it is of interest to note how his correspondence passed to and from the intelligence headquarters in Germany in envelopes embellished with the name of Burroughs & Wellcome, the chemists. He posed as a doctor and sent his letters through an inkeeper at Brussels or a modiste in Paris, while letters to him came through an obscure tobacconist's shop in London.

One of these letters miscarried through having the wrong initial to his name. It was returned by the postoffice to Burroughs & Wellcome, who opening it found inside a German letter, inclosing banknotes in return for services rendered. This raised suspicion against him. He was watched and finally arrested.

He states that a feeling that he was being followed dawned upon him one day, when he noticed in his lodgings that the clothes which he had folded on a chair had been since refolded in a slightly different way while he was out. With some suspicion he asked his landlady whether any one had entered his room, and she, in evident confusion, denied that any stranger could have been there. Then he suggested that his tailor might have called, and she agreed that it was so. But when an hour or two later he interviewed his tailor, he, on his part, said he had not been near the place. Graves consequently deduced that he was being followed.

The knowledge that you are being watched, and you don't know by whom, gives, I can assure you, a jumpy feeling.

I can speak feelingly from more than one experience of it, since I have myself been employed on this form of scouting in peace time.

It is generally difficult to find ordinary spies who are also sufficiently imbued with technical knowledge to be of use in gaining naval or military details. Consequently officers are often employed to obtain such information in peace time as well as in the theater of action in war.

But with them, and especially with those of Germany, it is not easy to find men who are sufficiently good actors or who can disguise their appearance so well as to evade suspicion. Many of these have visited our shores during the last few years, but they have generally been noticed, watched, and followed, and from the line taken by them in their reconnaissance it has been easy to deduce the kind of operations contemplated in their plans.

I remember the case of a party of these motoring through Kent, nominally looking at old Roman ruins. When they asked a land owner for the exact position of some of these he regretted he had not a map handy on which he could point out their position. One of the "antiquarians" at once produced a large scale map; but it was not an English map; it had, for instance, details on it regarding water supply tanks which, though they existed, were not shown on any of our ordnance maps.

In addition to the various branches of spying which I have mentioned the Germans have also practiced commercial espionage on systematic lines.

The enormous sums paid by Germany for many years past have brought about a sort of international spy exchange, generally formed of American-Germans, with their headquarters in Belgium; and good prices were given for information acquired by them. For instance, if the plans of a new fort, or the dimensions of a new ship, or the power of a new gun were needed, one merely had to apply and state a price to this bureau to receive fairly good information on the subject before much time had elapsed.

At the same time, by pretending to be an American, one was able to get a good deal of minor and useful information without the expenditure of a cent.

On getting into touch with these gentry I was informed of one of the intended plans by which the Germans proposed to invade our country, and incidentally it throws some light on their present methods of dealing with the inhabitants as apart from the actual tactical movements of the troops.

The German idea then—some six years ago—was that they could, by means of mines and submarines, at any time block the traffic in the British channel in the space of a few hours, thus holding our home fleets in their stations at Spithead and Portland.

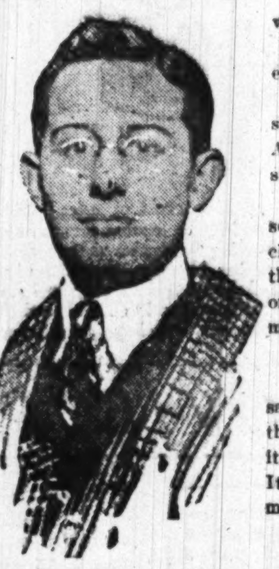
INTERESTING BOYS.



David Wertheimer.

DAVID WERTHEIMER might lay a fair claim to the title of "the world's busiest boy." David's weekly routine calls for the equivalent of about fourteen days' work, and he does more in a day than most young men of his age accomplish in a week.

He is a senior at the Lane Technical High school in Chicago. And taking a technical high school course these days is almost as exacting as a lot of college courses were a few years ago. Then in addition David is a member of five dance orchestras, including one which he organized and manages himself. In addition he is conductor of the high school orchestra and also manager of the school band.

That might be called about enough. However, David finds time to take care of his part of the work in a partnership importing business which he conducts in coöperation with a brother at a downtown office.

"You will be leaving school with a young fortune amassed to begin your career with," was suggested to David.

"Most of my earnings go home," he modestly replied.

"The first thing I will do when I get out of school this spring will be to hunt a good job. As for my career, that has already begun. It started when I started to work."

A day's work for this lad means being at school by 9 o'clock in the morning for his first class and continuing engaged probably far into the night, if it happens to be a night when one of his orchestras is playing an engagement, which happens about six days a week.

"How do you get it all done?"

"Just by doing things one at a time," he said. "I have found out that to get everything done I have to jump on a job and finish it up once and for all the first time I tackle it. It saves going back to it and suffering 'lost motion.'"

"And what is your recreation—your fun?"

"Why, mostly music," replied the member of six orchestras and a band.

The Trail of the Boy Scouts

The One Day Hike.

THE one day hike should be the most popular Saturday diversion of schoolboy scouts these days. It is a good way to get the lay of the land in your vicinity or the regions where you expect to do most of your scout work through the season. The Saturday hike finds hundreds of the scouts of this section laying out their plans for the season. The short hike helps to interest the candidates and tenderfeet and excite interest for the season's work.

There is no troop or patrol of scouts which cannot get somewhere worth hiking to, wherever it may be located. If you don't know where to go the interest is all the more. Make a hike of exploration. For the one day trip you need not give much attention to outfitting and such matters as occupy so much space in the manuals and handbooks. The most important thing of all is a comfortable pair of shoes, no matter how old, and enough clothes to keep you warm. Also the first day out in the season don't try for any records. A gait of about two and a half or three miles an hour will be plenty and take you anywhere you want to go. Sore feet and aching muscles tend to discourage novitiate scouts.

If you can get out into the country where you can build a campfire and try a little simple open fire cookery it will be a lot of fun and perhaps will save a lot of culinary troubles when the more serious matter of the summer encampment comes. I shall refer you to H. W. Gibson's excellent chapter in the scout handbook for recipes, and I refuse to assume responsibility for your first try at camp biscuits unless you follow directions implicitly. Of course when you get experienced you can throw the recipes away and cook "freehand" or "by touch."

Also, if you don't want to get the scout movement "in bad" with your parents, tell them where you are going and when you will be back—and keep your word. That is an important matter in scoutship.

RICHARD F.—You will find the building of a dugout canoe a very trying undertaking unless you are unusually equipped with tools. The old Indian method was to do the "roughing out" work with fire, then finishing down the interior and exterior with a buckhorn adz. You might try the fire method of removing the bulk of the interior wood, but you can expect to spoil a log or two learning how to control it. It would probably be better to use good sharp steel tools. An adz, a handax, a chisel, and a wedge or two will be all you really need. If you just want the fun of building make a dugout. For a serviceable boat build a skiff, lap streak or clinker style.

Popular Science

WHAT do you suppose would be the sensations of a bird flying northward for the nesting season which found itself over a line of belching volcanoes? That is one way of putting the question which European ornithologists are trying to study in the effect of the war and bombardments on the migration of birds.

Some interesting observations in this connection have been made by E. Trouessart, a French naturalist, who holds that the battle lines have seriously affected the movement of the birds and their established routes. For centuries certain species have followed the air lanes from France and Belgium down to the Mediterranean sea and across it into Africa. Storks, he says in an article in La Nature (Paris), have been affected particularly—which, in view of the war death rate and the stork's traditional concern with the birth rate, is a serious matter.

"I do not believe that in any of the previous wars that have covered our land with blood has the earth been so disturbed as in this," he writes. "In all the region from Paris to the northern and eastern frontiers deep trenches have been dug in the cultivated fields; numberless graves fill the spaces between.

"The forests have suffered as well. Trees have been felled mercilessly to make firewood, to form obstacles, or simply to interfere with artillery fire. All this destructive work has necessarily had the most unfavorable effect on animal and bird life. These creatures that have not been killed have fled as chance directed, without much probability of escape.

"Hunting has been forbidden in France during the war, but every one knows that this is a dead letter for soldiers, every man with a good gun in his hand."

The observer relates that he has reports that the storks were thrown far out of their lines of flight and that in November, after the campaigns of 1914 were well in progress, a stork was seen to fall in a street in New Orleans, U. S. A., so far had it been driven out of its course.

It appears probable because of the long distance that sound waves travel on the air and other vibrations which run even on beyond the range of sound as audible to the human ear, that the birds have generally been warned of a disturbance by the rumblings of battle afar. This would give rise to the expectation that most of the strictly migratory birds had been enabled to detour battle lines and to escape immediate peril.

It is likely that the birds most seriously affected are the so-called "erratics" which, rambling without regard to direction from one district to another in search of food, have been the most seriously harmed by the war. There is the suggestion of a sort of symbolism in the fact that large flocks of swallows, numbering probably millions, fled from Belgium into England during the terrific battles on the Yser.

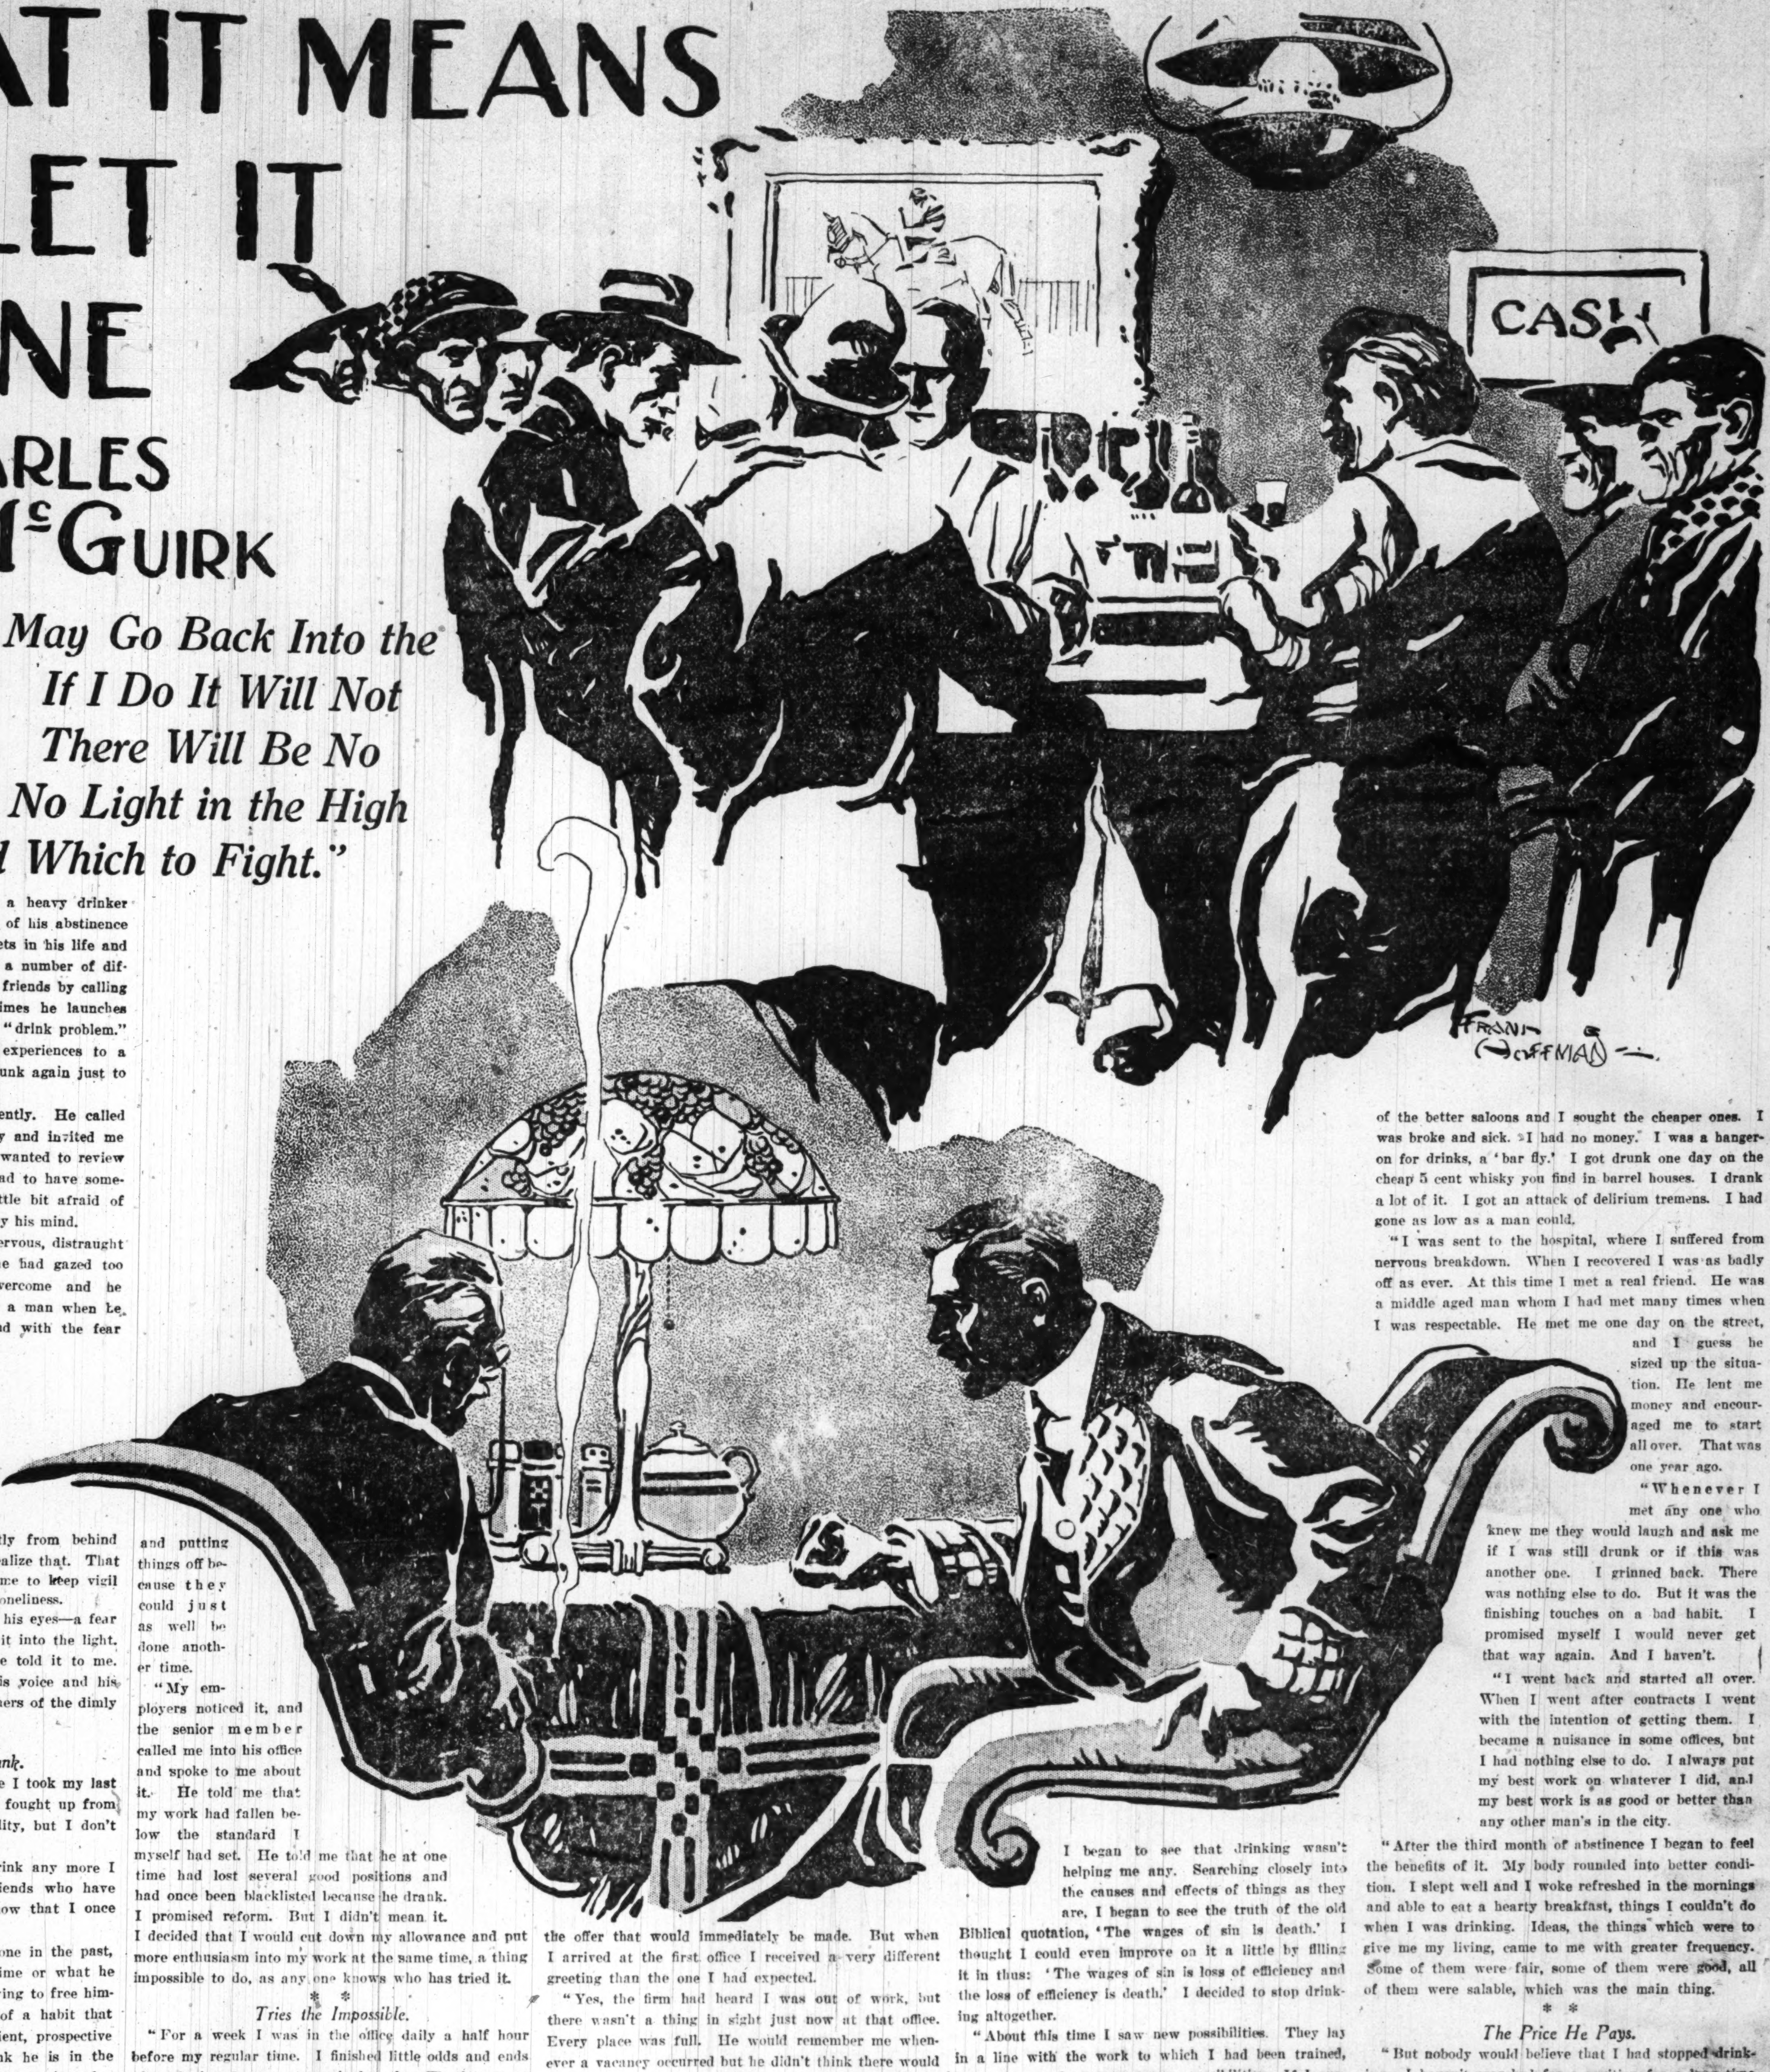
Red lights are chosen for danger signals on railways for the reason that they are visible at a greater distance than those of any other color. Red light has a visible range of nearly three and a half miles in the standard signal light. The next in strength is green light, which can be seen under similar conditions for three miles. Blue, purple, and yellow can be seen only about a mile and are likely to be confused with other colors.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology has found by experimentation that water can be solidified into five kinds of ice. One kind, called "ice-2," requires a low temperature and exceedingly high pressure to keep it from exploding into the form of ordinary ice. Ice in another form is produced at summer heat—fifty degrees above the normal freezing point—by the application of a pressure of about 280,000 pounds.

WHAT IT MEANS TO LET IT ALONE

by CHARLES J. McGUIRK

"Some Day I May Go Back Into the Depths Again. If I Do It Will Not Be Purgatory. There Will Be No Coming Back, No Light in the High Places Toward Which to Fight."



WHEN a man who has been a heavy drinker reaches the first anniversary of his abstinence he is as proud as he ever gets in his life and he celebrates his freedom in a number of different ways. Sometimes he bores his friends by calling attention to his strong will. Sometimes he launches out into a bitter scoring of the whole "drink problem." Sometimes he sends a story of his experiences to a magazine. And sometimes he gets drunk again just to find out what he has escaped.

Just one man I knew acted differently. He called me up on the night of his anniversary and invited me out to listen to his talk. He said he wanted to review the year that has just passed. He had to have somebody to talk to because he was a little bit afraid of himself and wanted something to occupy his mind.

When I reached his home I met a nervous, distraught man. Looking back over the year, he had gazed too deeply on the temptations he had overcome and he felt the seat of fear that is burned in a man when he pits his will against an appetite. And with the fear had come the appetite leering at him and promising to conquer him some time before he died. He was not in any danger that night. When a man fears an appetite he is fighting there is little chance of his being overcome by it. It is when he is filled with pride in himself over his conquest, when he loses respect for his master passion, that the passion rises silently from behind and strikes him down. But he didn't realize that. That was why he sent for me. He wanted me to keep vigil with him lest he be overthrown by the loneliness.

He told me the story with the fear in his eyes—a fear that he slowly beat down by dragging it into the light. I set down the story here much as he told it to me. But I cannot reproduce the fear in his voice and his restless eyes, peering into the many corners of the dimly lighted room.

Up from a Common Drunk.

"It has been a year ago tonight since I took my last drink," he said. "In that time I have fought up from a common drunk to a man with stability, but I don't think anybody believes it.

"When I tell people that I don't drink any more I am looked upon with suspicion by friends who have drunk with me and by others who know that I once drank neither wisely nor too well.

"A man is judged by what he has done in the past, not what he is doing at the present time or what he intends to do in the future. If he is trying to free himself and his reputation from the taint of a habit that once rendered him unreliable and inefficient, prospective customers or employers or friends think he is in the throes of a spasm of virtue, the possible reaction of a guilty conscience, and they keep their weather eye open for the first signs of a fall.

"This isn't such a bad thing either. You can't expect a burnt child to put his hand in the fire. And there are too many reliable people competing in life for a man to waste his time on any one who isn't. But sometimes it is hard to fight against, this attitude. Once it pushed me back for a while. But when I had fought on a little further I saw the justice of it and the reason it should be.

"About a year and a half ago I lost a good position because I drank. It doesn't make any difference what line of business it was in. All lines are a good deal alike in this, that they demand unflagging energy and reliability as the price of success.

"The position from which I was discharged was good, not only because it paid well but because of the future it offered to a man who would make the most of the opportunities it offered. When I first took it I decided to stop drinking. I did stop for a while, and during that time I worked hard. I made a good record for myself, such a record that I was intrusted with work that called for a great deal of responsibility.

"It was at this point I let down a little. I had been drinking for nine years, and after a month, when the novelty of my abstinence had worn off, I began to crave the stimulus and to make little excuses for taking a drink now and then. First, it was because my mind was tired. If I took just one I knew that I would immediately be stimulated to such a point that work would be a pleasure. After I had taken the single drink for the mental strength it gave me I found myself arguing that two or three would increase my strength just that much. In two weeks I was back into the habit again, taking my drink before breakfast and putting things off because they could just as well be done another time.

"My employers noticed it, and the senior member called me into his office and spoke to me about it. He told me that my work had fallen below the standard I myself had set. He told me that he at one time had lost several good positions and had once been blacklisted because he drank. I promised reform. But I didn't mean it. I decided that I would cut down my allowance and put more enthusiasm into my work at the same time, a thing impossible to do, as any one knows who has tried it.

Tries the Impossible.

"For a week I was in the office daily a half hour before my regular time. I finished little odds and ends of work that I was not required to do. The important things that had been taken away from me were given back again.

"I then hit upon the plan of gauging my capacity and keeping two drinks behind it. I figured the exact amount of whisky I could consume in a day which would keep me in tiptop form. This was a good plan in theory, but in practice it did not work out quite right. My need for stimulation increased every three or four days. In two or three weeks I was drinking double the amount I started with, and in a month after that I was drinking harder than ever I had before in my life. I was 'fired.'

"It was a shock, my discharge. I had thought I was secure in my job. The work I had done had been well done in spite of the fact that I drank. I did not protest, but I was full of resentment. Why should I be fired just at the time I was doing good work? Why should I be cast aside as a 'has been' when I was just coming into my own? I would show them. I would have another job as soon as I started to look for one. Right now I was going to have a drink. I would forget it for a while. I had one and then another. I met some friends in a barroom and told them I had lost my job. They drank to my success in finding a new one, each one treating in his turn. While I drank I brooded. My indignity grew from a petty misfortune to a colossal crime that had been committed against me by men for whom I had done much. That night I got drunk. I stayed that way for three days, until my money had given out and I was forced to look for another job.

"On the day I started out I looked carefully over the available firms, picking the best possibility and working down through three others. It wasn't a case of asking for a job, I thought. It was merely a case of announcing that I was out of a job and considering the offer that would immediately be made. But when I arrived at the first office I received a very different greeting than the one I had expected.

"Yes, the firm had heard I was out of work, but there wasn't a thing in sight just now at that office. Every place was full. He would remember me whenever a vacancy occurred but he didn't think there would be anything for quite a while. He wouldn't build up any hopes on it if he were me. This was from a man who had told me that there was a job open in his office whenever I got ready to leave my other position.

"I received the same answer to my question. Everybody was extremely sorry, but they had either just taken on a new man or there wasn't any chance of an opening for a long time. One of the men with whom I had passed many hours standing at a bar suggested that if I called around again in about three months there might be an opening.

Improving on an Old Quotation.

"That night I went home and thought it over. It looked much like a plot to keep me out of employment. Well, there wasn't a chance. I would get a job when something big happened. You see I couldn't get away from the viewpoint that I was indispensable to the business life of the city. Most hard drinkers are subject to the same hallucination.

"I kept on drinking from time to time, picking up enough money at intervals to keep me in the habit. Then friends were in the habit of asking me in to take a drink with them. They had formed the habit when I had money.

"At first, whenever I went into a bar with one of these I would tell the story of my misfortune, placing the blame for it on everybody and everything from the capitalist class to the way the world was made. But the listeners always seemed to lose interest somehow or other. Yes, it was hard. And the employers were about the meanest people in the world. But he guessed he would have to be getting along now. He had an engagement. He always had an engagement.

"It was three months after I lost my position that I began to see that drinking wasn't helping me any. Searching closely into the causes and effects of things as they are, I began to see the truth of the old Biblical quotation, 'The wages of sin is death.' I thought I could even improve on it a little by filling it in thus: 'The wages of sin is loss of efficiency and the loss of efficiency is death.' I decided to stop drinking altogether.

"About this time I saw new possibilities. They lay in a line with the work to which I had been trained, but they opened up even greater possibilities. If I succeeded it would give me a reputation, a good standing for efficiency. I became an independent. I went in business in a small way for myself.

"At first it was hard. My work was poorly paid and I did not get enough contracts to make it worth while. But there was nothing else to do. I had to do something, and there were no positions open, especially for me. I stayed with the proposition and spent most of my time in inventing new selling arguments and in overhauling old ideas. After a while I was rewarded with fair success. Then I had a relapse.

"For a week my business had been poor. I hadn't procured a single contract. Toward the end of the week I became discouraged. I made the rounds of all the offices again and met with the same rebuffs. There never was anything open. I began to be sorry for myself. It was a shame that a man who could do his work like I could should be kept from it by a lot of prejudices that had been formed before he saw the light. What was the use of being decent when nobody believed you were? I went to a bar and bought a quart of whisky. Then I went to my room and brooded and drank.

"Of course I got drunk again. I took $10 I had saved during all the time I was working by putting away a quarter or a dime at a time. With this I went on a spree that lasted three days. After it was over I searched frantically for anybody who would buy me a drink. When my friends began to avoid me I would go into a saloon and sit at a table till somebody came in. I would sidle up to him at the bar and begin to talk about anything that happened to occur to me. Very often he would ask me to have a drink. I always took whisky.

"I drifted from this downward. I was kicked out of the better saloons and I sought the cheaper ones. I was broke and sick. I had no money. I was a hanger-on for drinks, a 'bar fly.' I got drunk one day on the cheap 5 cent whisky you find in barrel houses. I drank a lot of it. I got an attack of delirium tremens. I had gone as low as a man could.

"I was sent to the hospital, where I suffered from nervous breakdown. When I recovered I was as badly off as ever. At this time I met a real friend. He was a middle aged man whom I had met many times when I was respectable. He met me one day on the street, and I guess he sized up the situation. He lent me money and encouraged me to start all over. That was one year ago.

"Whenever I met any one who knew me they would laugh and ask me if I was still drunk or if this was another one. I grinned back. There was nothing else to do. But it was the finishing touches on a bad habit. I promised myself I would never get that way again. And I haven't.

"I went back and started all over. When I went after contracts I went with the intention of getting them. I became a nuisance in some offices, but I had nothing else to do. I always put my best work on whatever I did, and my best work is as good or better than any other man's in the city.

"After the third month of abstinence I began to feel the benefits of it. My body rounded into better condition. I slept well and I woke refreshed in the mornings and able to eat a hearty breakfast, things I couldn't do when I was drinking. Ideas, the things which were to give me my living, came to me with greater frequency. Some of them were fair, some of them were good, all of them were salable, which was the main thing.

The Price He Pays.

"But nobody would believe that I had stopped drinking. I haven't searched for a position for a long time because I am getting on pretty well by myself. But if I did I know I couldn't get it. Prospective employers would not believe that I had stopped, that I wasn't still an irresponsible 'drunk' on whom nobody could depend.

"That is the price I have to pay. But I don't mind it so much. I have built up my will and I have developed moral stamina. I am more self-reliant than I was when I was working for some one else, and more independent. That is the compensation.'

He paused and there was silence for a while. I imagined some of the details he had forgotten or did not care to tell me, the lonely nights and the gnawing, gnawing of the craving for a drink and of the dreams he must have conjured up to fight down the thirst that was driving him wild.

He had broken the silence and was speaking again, leaning forward in his chair and looking at me anxiously. I saw that his hair was turning gray at the temples.

"Do you believe in a hereafter?" he asked. "Well, I don't know about heaven," he continued when I had answered. 'But I know there are such things as hell and purgatory. They're right here in this life. I've discovered purgatory in the last year. I have been in it. And I realized it fully in the night watches when I couldn't sleep, when I heard whisperings and promptings to 'take just one little drink.' Lots of the time I didn't think I could fight any longer. If I did not have hope and if I had not seen myself a strong man in the future years, it would have been hell. Yes, hell I tell you. And I don't know yet. Some day I may go back, back into the depths again. And if I do it will not be purgatory. There will be no coming back, no light in the high places toward which to fight."

And as his eyes widened in the terror of what might be I thought of the inscription on the gates of sorrow: "Abandon hope, all ye who enter in."

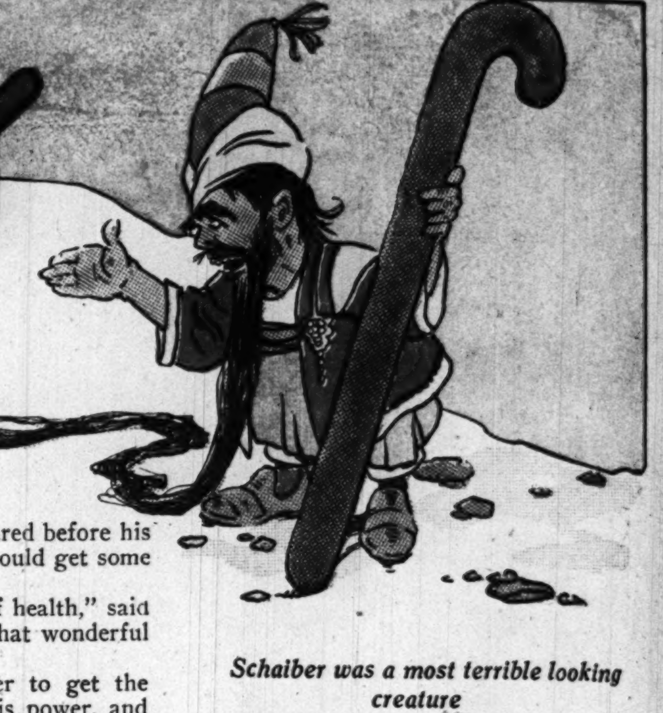
Prince Ahmed and Schaibar

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

BY DONAHEY



Schaiber was a most terrible looking creature

SYNOPSIS OF PRINCE AHMED AND THE FAIRY.

The three sons of the king of India are in love with the same princess, and the father tells them that the one winning a shooting match shall marry her. Prince Ali, the second son, wins, because the arrow of Prince Ahmed, which few doubt really went the farthest, cannot be found. Prince Ahmed determines to find it, and in the search reaches a high mountain, before a door in the foot of which he finds the missing arrow. Entering the magic door he finds a fairy living in a wondrous castle, whom he marries. He returns on visits to his father, who becomes jealous of his beautiful clothes and horses and has his son watched.

WHEN the door closed upon Prince Ahmed a figure slowly rose from behind a great rock and quietly made its way toward the door. The figure was dressed in a long black cloak and a heavy hood covered its face. When the figure came to the spot where the prince had vanished it uttered a low cry of surprise, for there was no door to be found!

Prince Ahmed had been in the habit of paying his visit to his father on the first of every month. So when the time came for his next trip he started out, but had gone only a little way from the mountain when he saw an old woman in a long black gown rolling on the ground as if in great pain.

"What's the matter, my good woman?" cried the prince as he dismounted and ran to her side.

"O, sir," cried the old woman, "I am awfully sick, and I think I shall die; I am so far from medicine or help."

"You are not as far from help as you think," cried the good prince, stooping down and picking the old woman up in his arms. He placed her on his horse, and, passing back through the iron door, they soon came to Parie Banou, who stood on the steps of her palace.

"My dear," said the prince, "I have here an old woman who is very sick. She is in need of help, and I wish you would see that she has proper attention."

The fairy, who had been watching the sick woman very closely, ordered two of her servants to take the old woman and see that she had the best of care.

'My prince," said the fairy, when the old woman had been led away, "unless I am greatly mistaken, this old woman is not what she seems, but has been sent here to make trouble for you. Have no fear. I will save you from all the snares that will be laid for you. Go now and visit the king."

The prince continued his journey and soon came to his father's palace. In the meantime the old woman had been put to bed, and very soon she felt much better, and asked to be allowed to leave, as she had a long journey ahead. At the order of the fairy the old woman was taken about the palace by the attendants and shown all the wonderful richness and beauty of the place.

"Your mistress must be very rich," cried the old woman, as she was led through the dark passage toward the outer door.

"Yes," said one of the attendants, "she is a fairy, and has all the wealth she wants."

"Thank you for your kindness, and good-by," said the old woman as she stepped through the doorway in the side of the mountain.

"Good-by," answered the attendants, slamming the big door. The old woman walked a few steps and then turned to look at the door, so she would be sure to remember just where it was—but it had entirely vanished!

The old woman was an old witch, who had been hired by the king to find out his son's secret, and, knowing where Prince Ahmed had found his arrow, she had waited near the spot until he entered the door, but, being unable to get in, she had pretended to be sick, hoping the prince would find her and carry her through the door in search of aid. Now, the old witch went to the palace and told the king and the grand vizier all she had heard and seen. The grand vizier wished to place the prince in prison at once.

"Don't you see," he cried, "with the help of fairies he could dethrone you at any time he wished."

The old witch told them that if they put the prince in prison, without a good reason for doing so, the fairies would come and destroy the city. "I have a good plan," she cried; "ask the prince to do some impossible task, and if he cannot do it then you will have a reason for putting him in jail."

"What task would you suggest?" asked the king.

"Well, for instance," answered the old witch, "ask him to bring a tent that could be carried in the palm of the hand, yet would be big enough to shelter your whole army."

The next day when Prince Ahmed came in to his father's presence the king said: "My son, I have heard that you are married to a fairy, and as I hear that she is rich and powerful, I would ask you to have her do me a great service." The king then asked for the tent the witch had told him to ask for.

"I can't understand how you have found out my secret, but I can't deny it," said the prince. "It is true. I cannot promise to bring the tent, but I will promise to make your wish known to my wife, and if she can produce the tent I will gladly bring it to you."

Shortly after the prince returned to his fairy wife and made known to her his father's wish.

"That is quite easy," cried the fairy. "When you again return to your father let me know and I will give you the tent."

When Prince Ahmed was ready for his next visit he went to the fairy and reminded her of her promise. She brought the tent from her treasure box and placed it in the palm of her hand.

"Have no fear," said the fairy, as she noticed the look of doubt on the prince's face. "When it has been set up it will cover an army much larger than that of your father's."

When the prince gave the tent to his father the king had it immediately set up, and when he saw the tent was large enough to shelter two armies as large as his own he felt greater jealousy than ever of his son. The king sent for the old witch, showed her the marvelous tent, and asked her to think up another task for his son. The witch told him about a wonderful water which would cure any sickness. She said that it came from a fountain called the Fountain of Lions.

"Send him for some of that water," she cried, "and I doubt very much if his fairy wife can save him from being eaten alive by the fierce lions that guard the place!"

When Prince Ahmed next appeared before his father, the king asked him if he could get some of the precious water for him.

"I have not been in the best of health," said the king, "and I think some of that wonderful water would cure me."

The prince promised his father to get the water for him if it was within his power, and when he made the king's wish known to the fairy she promised to help him. Several days before his next visit the fairy gave him a charm and told him that if he carried it with him it would keep the lions from harming him. The fairy then told him where to find the fountain. He journeyed to the place, passed safely among the lions, and filled a bottle with water. When the prince placed the water at the feet of his royal father, the king thanked him and then said: "You have shown, by bringing the tent and the water to me, that you are an obedient and loving son. But there is one thing more I would like, and if you will do this for me I will ask nothing more of you."

"What is it?" asked the prince in great wonder.

"I should like," said the king, giving tne grand vizier, who stood beside the throne nervously rubbing his hands, a knowing look, "to see a man a foot and a half high, whose beard is thirty feet long, who carries an iron bar of 500 pounds, which he uses as a staff."

After the prince had related to her his father's wish, the fairy told him the request was a very simple one, and when he was ready to make his next visit she would produce the strange little man. Soon Prince Ahmed decided to pay another visit to his father, and, going to the fairy, he reminded her of her promise. The fairy ordered a large brass bowl brought to her and a fire kindled in it, then taking a magical powder from a golden jar threw some of it into the bowl. Instantly there arose a great cloud of smoke and there appeared before them a most peculiar man.

"This is my brotner, Schaibar," cried the fairy. "Although he is a fierce looking little man, he is quite harmless unless provoked, and then he is a most unruly and dangerous person."

'This is my husband," answered the fairy, pointing to Prince Ahmed. "His father, the king of India, is very anxious to see you, and I wish you would accompany the prince to his father's palace."

Schaibar was a most terrible looking creature, and when he rode into the city with the prince the people were filled with fear. When the prince went before his father, Schaibar walked straight up to the throne, and, without waiting to be presented to the king, cried: "You have asked for me. What can I do for you?"

The king was filled with fright at sight of the fierce little fellow, and, leaping from his chair, he started to run away. Provoked at this rudeness, Schaibar ran after him, and before Prince Ahmed could interfere the little fellow struck the king with his iron staff and killed him. Then swinging his mighty bar of iron, he killed the old witch, the grand vizier, and all the people who had helped the king plan against Prince Ahmed.

"Now," cried Schaibar, as he stepped out on the broad steps in front of the palace, where a great crowd of people had gathered, "unless Prince Ahmed is made king in his father's place I will tear the city down about your ears."

With a great noise the people cried out, "Long live King Ahmed!" Soon the prince and his fairy wife were crowned king and queen of India and they ruled very wisely for many years. Schaibar disappeared soon after the coronation, and though he never was seen in that kingdom again, for years afterward his name was used as a bugaboo.

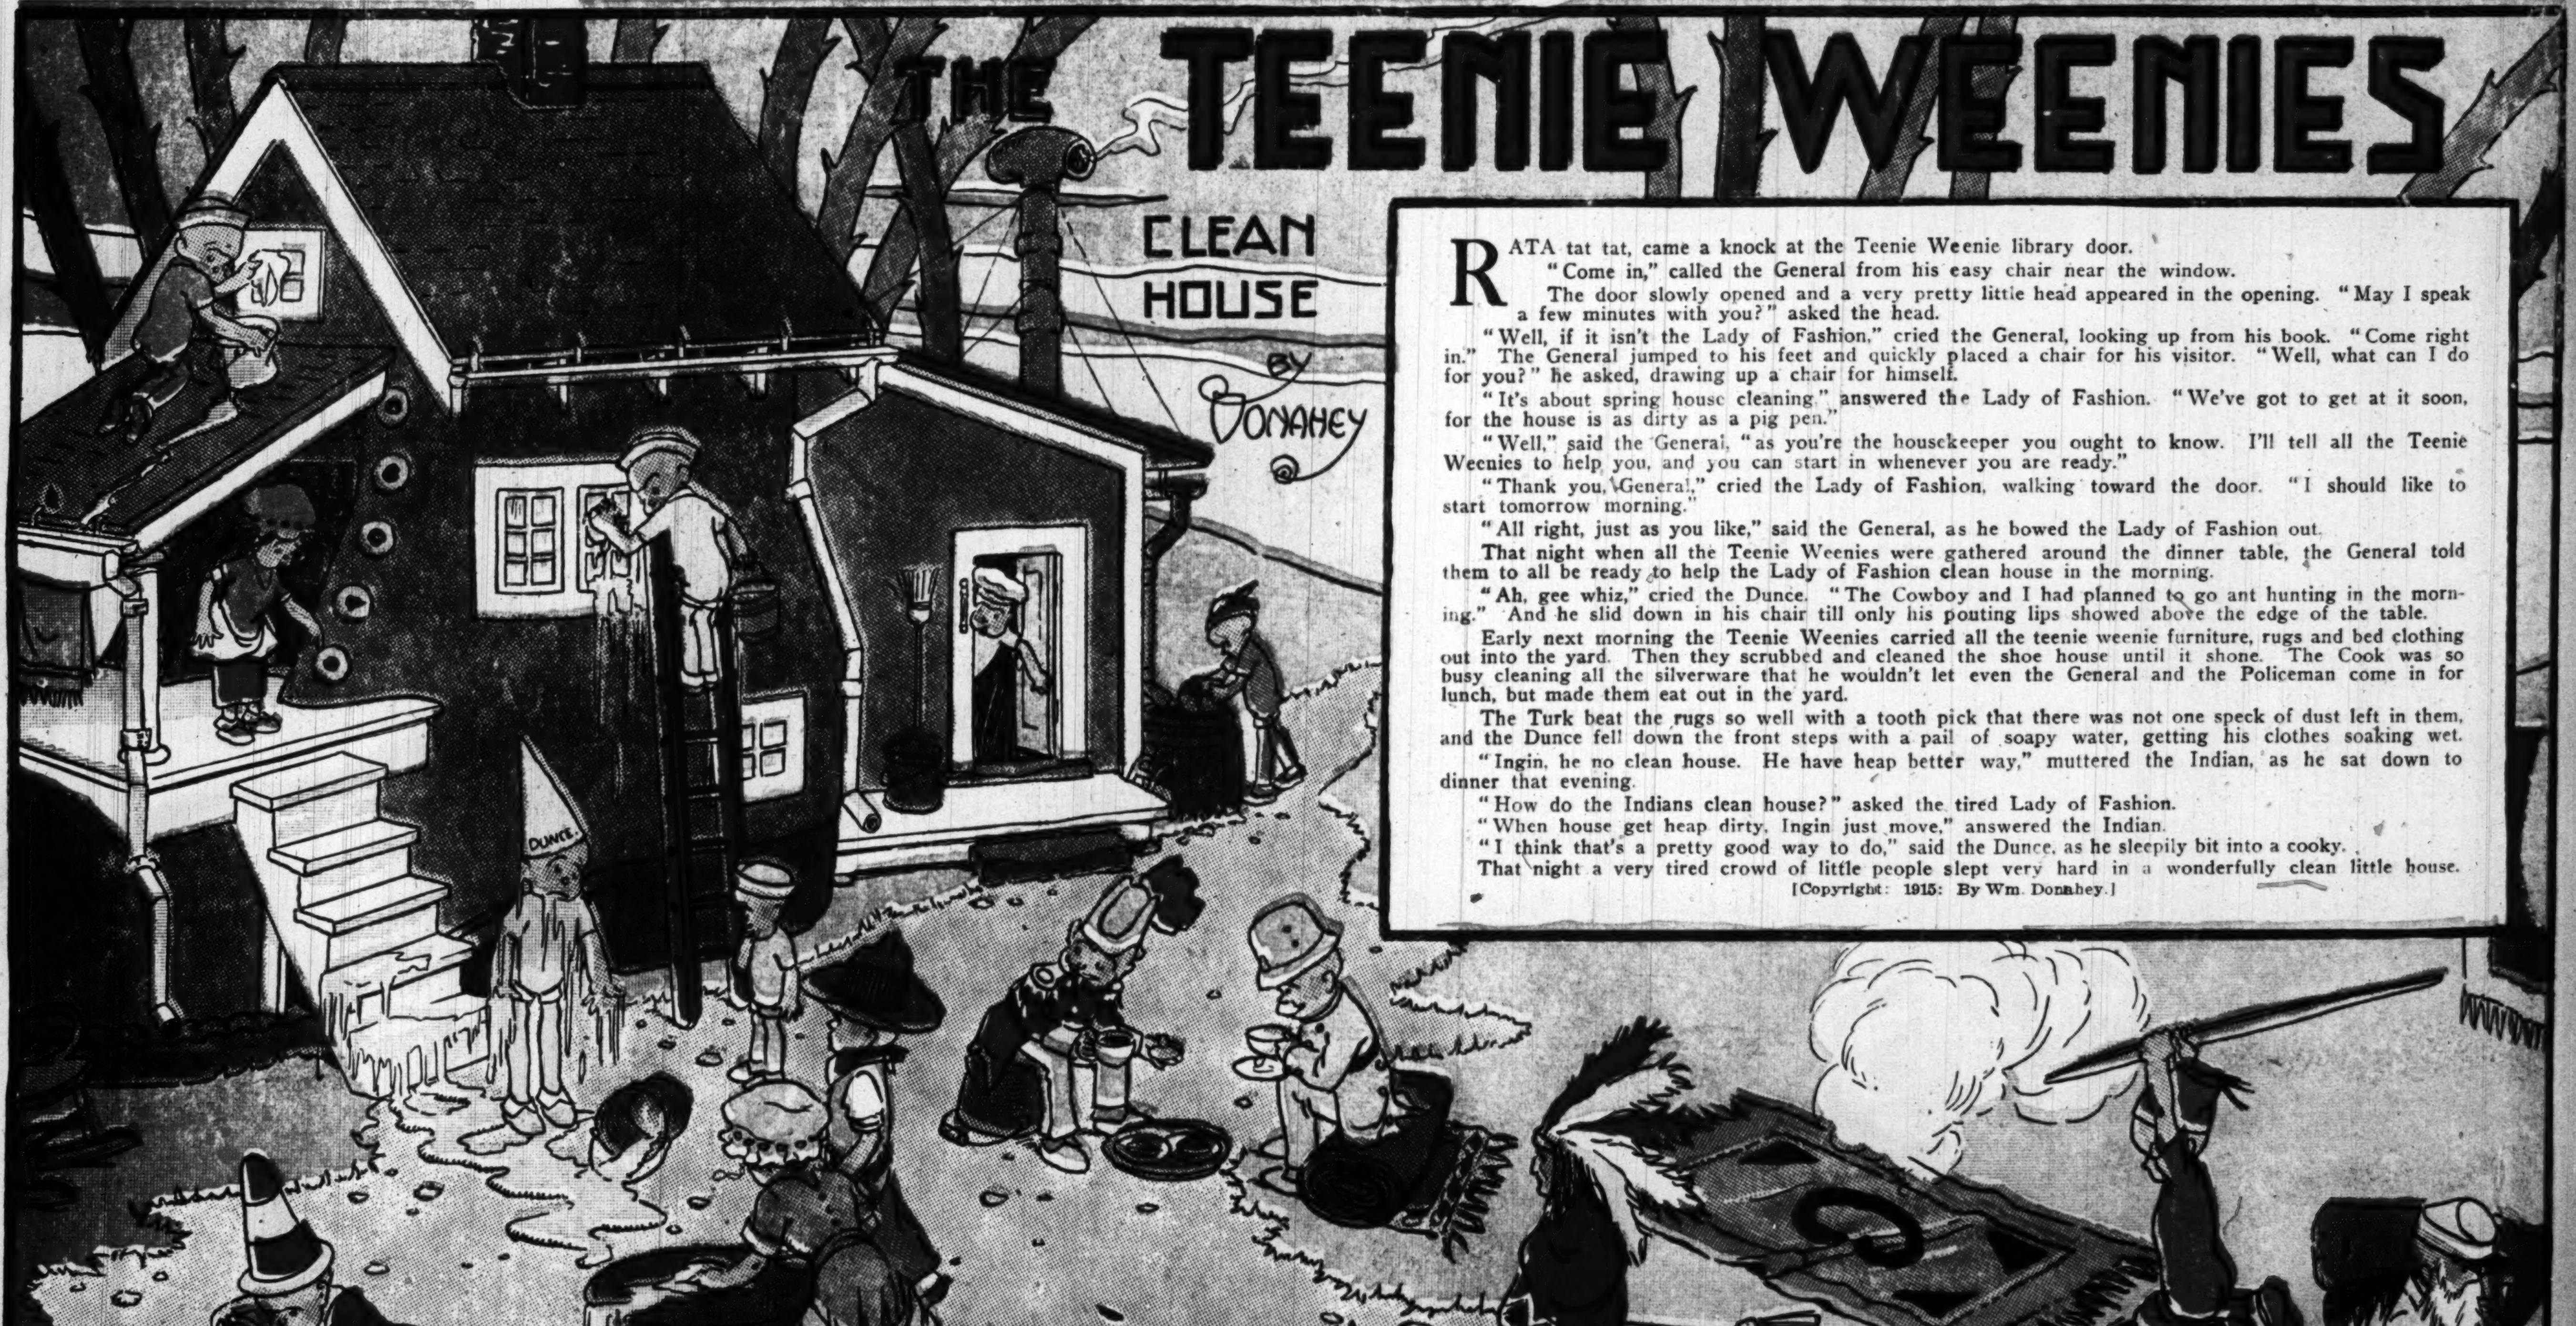
THE TEENIE WEENIES

CLEAN HOUSE

BY DONAHEY



RATA tat tat, came a knock at the Teenie Weenie library door.

"Come in," called the General from his easy chair near the window.

The door slowly opened and a very pretty little head appeared in the opening. "May I speak a few minutes with you?" asked the head.

"Well, if it isn't the Lady of Fashion," cried the General, looking up from his book. "Come right in." The General jumped to his feet and quickly placed a chair for his visitor. "Well, what can I do for you?" he asked, drawing up a chair for himself.

"It's about spring house cleaning," answered the Lady of Fashion. "We've got to get at it soon, for the house is as dirty as a pig pen."

"Well," said the General, "as you're the housekeeper you ought to know. I'll tell all the Teenie Weenies to help you, and you can start in whenever you are ready."

"Thank you, General," cried the Lady of Fashion, walking toward the door. "I should like to start tomorrow morning."

"All right, just as you like," said the General, as he bowed the Lady of Fashion out.

That night when all the Teenie Weenies were gathered around the dinner table, the General told them to all be ready to help the Lady of Fashion clean house in the morning.

"Ah, gee whiz," cried the Dunce. "The Cowboy and I had planned to go ant hunting in the morning." And he slid down in his chair till only his pouting lips showed above the edge of the table.

Early next morning the Teenie Weenies carried all the teenie weenie furniture, rugs and bed clothing out into the yard. Then they scrubbed and cleaned the shoe house until it shone. The Cook was so busy cleaning all the silverware that he wouldn't let even the General and the Policeman come in for lunch, but made them eat out in the yard.

The Turk beat the rugs so well with a tooth pick that there was not one speck of dust left in them, and the Dunce fell down the front steps with a pail of soapy water, getting his clothes soaking wet.

"Ingin, he no clean house. He have heap better way," muttered the Indian, as he sat down to dinner that evening.

"How do the Indians clean house?" asked the tired Lady of Fashion.

"I think that's a pretty good way to do," said the Dunce, as he sleepily bit into a cooky.

That night a very tired crowd of little people slept very hard in a wonderfully clean little house.

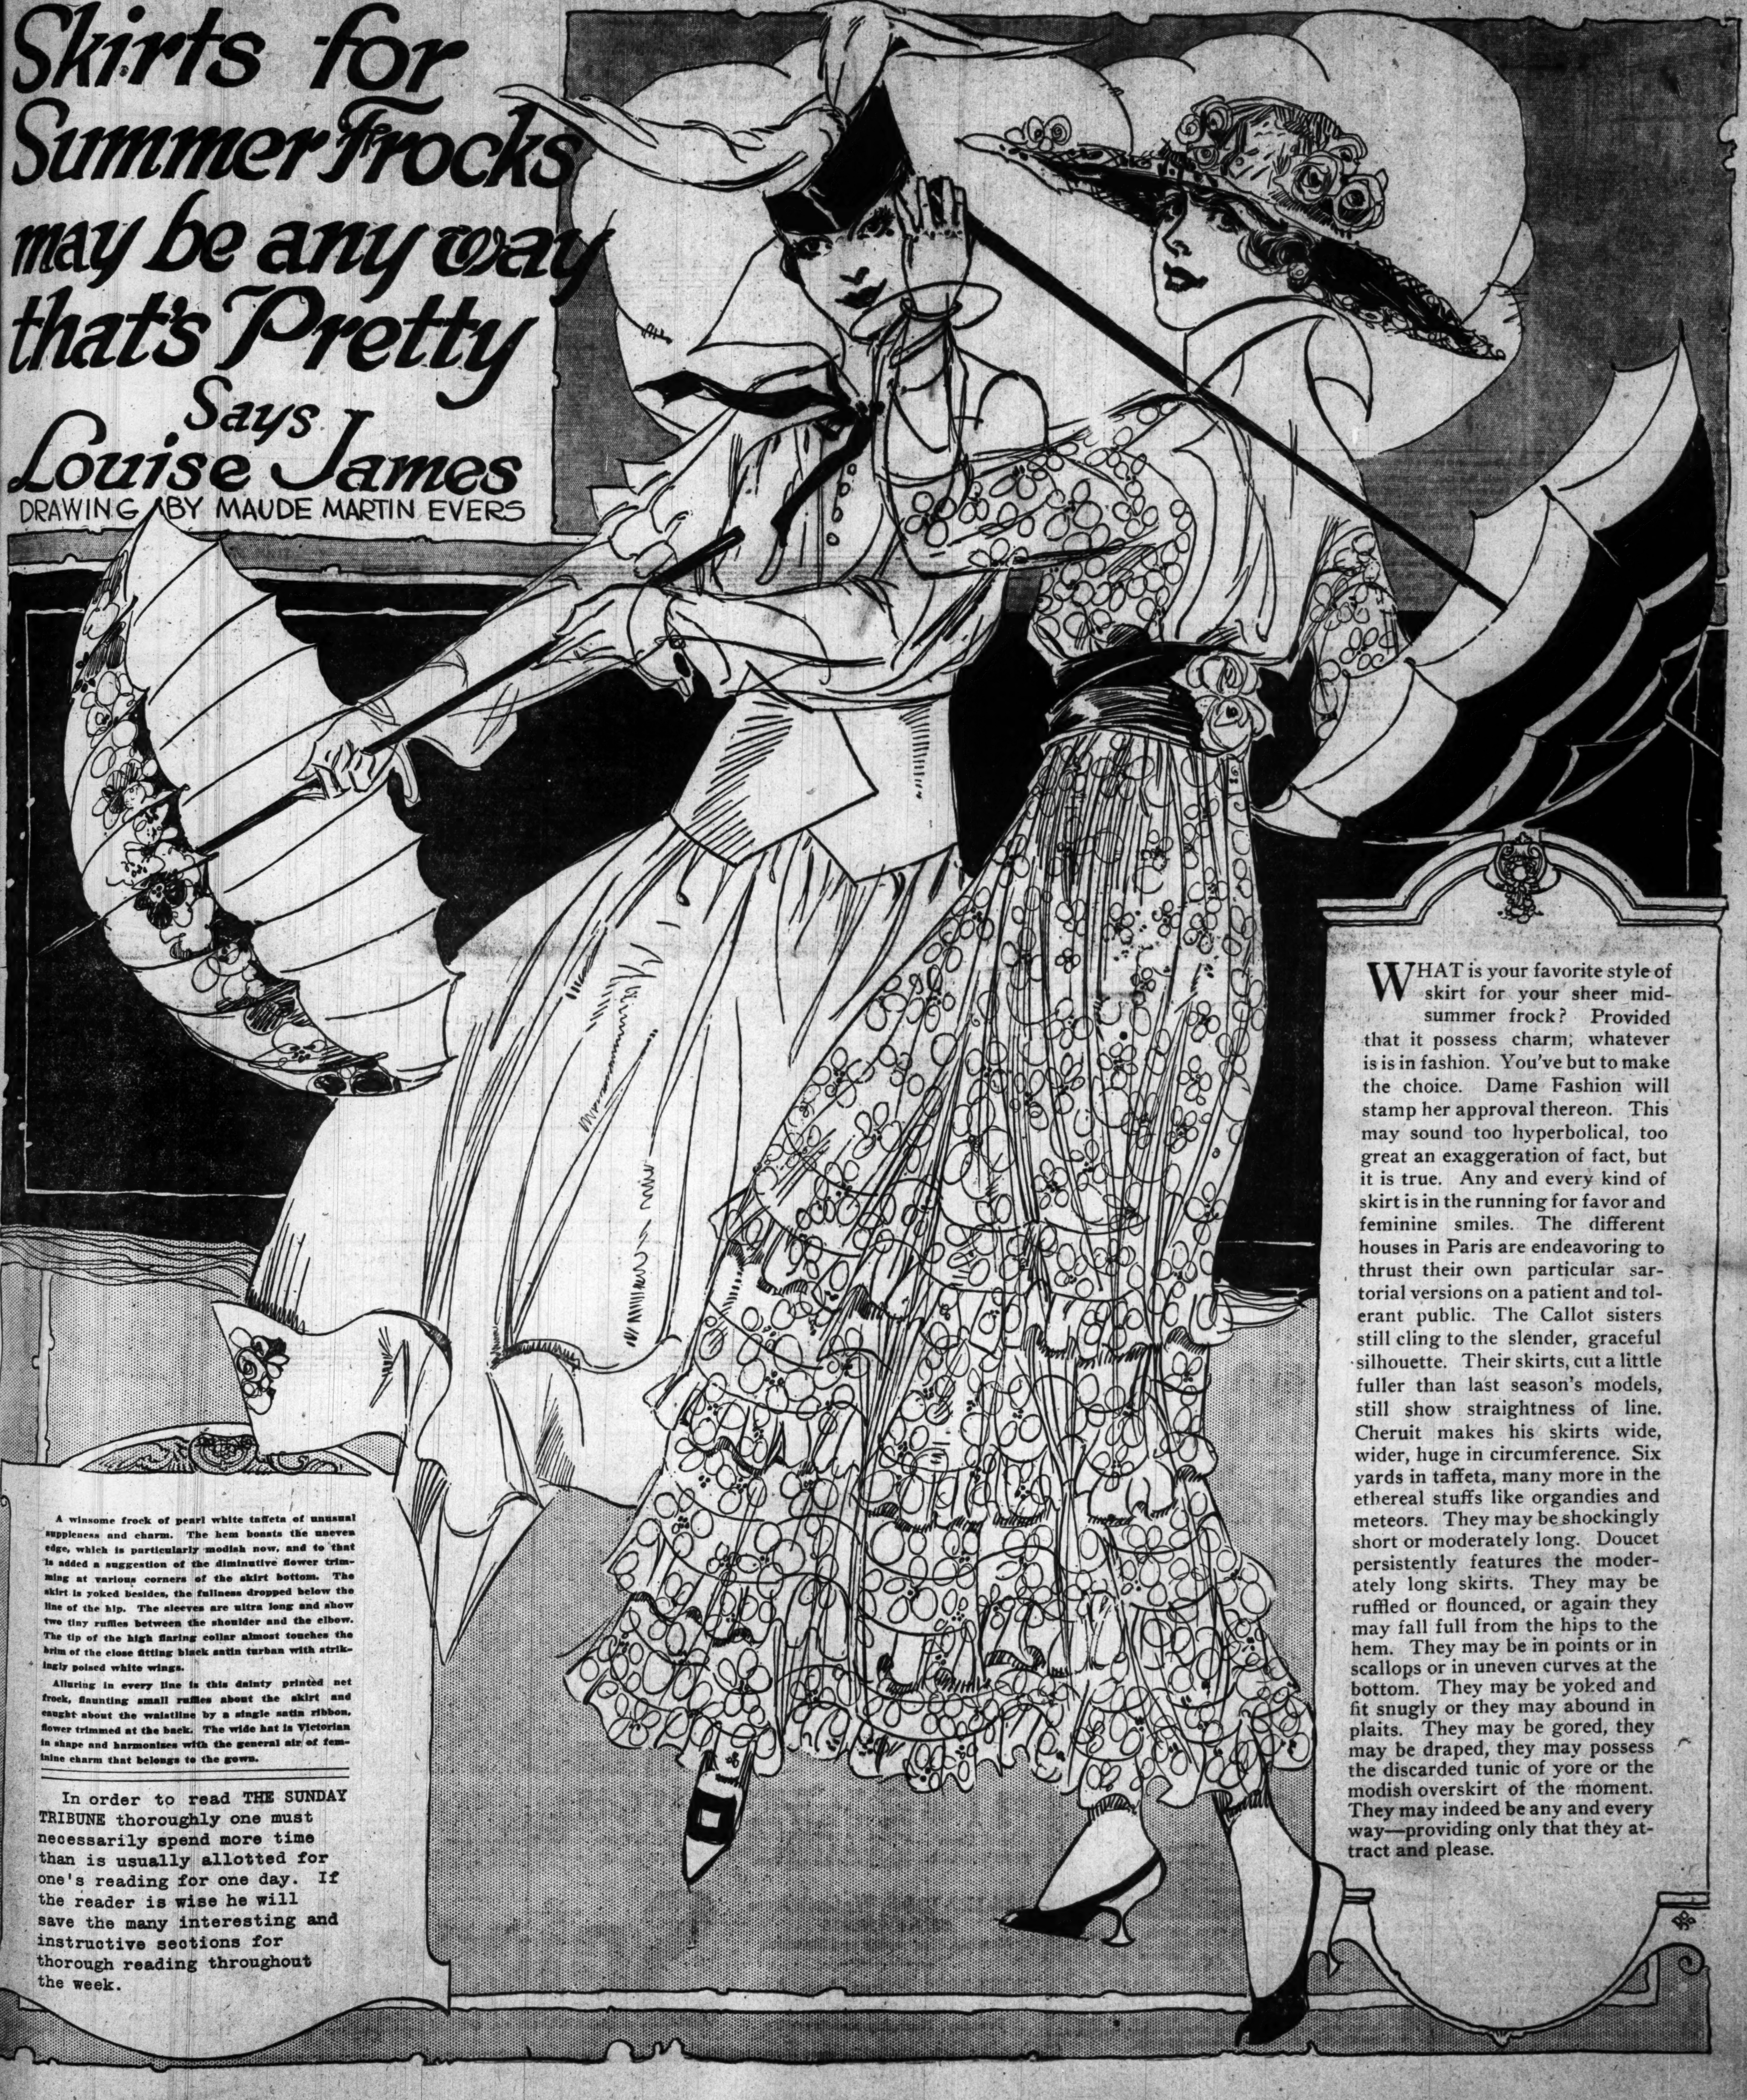
Skirts for Summer Frocks may be any way that's Pretty

Says
Louise James

DRAWING BY MAUDE MARTIN EVERS



A winsome frock of pearl white taffeta of unusual suppleness and charm. The hem boasts the uneven edge, which is particularly modish now, and to that is added a suggestion of the diminutive flower trimming at various corners of the skirt bottom. The skirt is yoked besides, the fullness dropped below the line of the hip. The sleeves are ultra long and show two tiny ruffles between the shoulder and the elbow. The tip of the high flaring collar almost touches the brim of the close fitting black satin turban with strikingly poised white wings.

Alluring in every line is this dainty printed net frock, flaunting small ruffles about the skirt and caught about the waistline by a single satin ribbon, flower trimmed at the back. The wide hat is Victorian in shape and harmonises with the general air of feminine charm that belongs to the gown.

In order to read THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE thoroughly one must necessarily spend more time than is usually allotted for one's reading for one day. If the reader is wise he will save the many interesting and instructive sections for thorough reading throughout the week.

WHAT is your favorite style of skirt for your sheer midsummer frock? Provided that it possess charm; whatever is is in fashion. You've but to make the choice. Dame Fashion will stamp her approval thereon. This may sound too hyperbolical, too great an exaggeration of fact, but it is true. Any and every kind of skirt is in the running for favor and feminine smiles. The different houses in Paris are endeavoring to thrust their own particular sartorial versions on a patient and tolerant public. The Callot sisters still cling to the slender, graceful silhouette. Their skirts, cut a little fuller than last season's models, still show straightness of line. Cheruit makes his skirts wide, wider, huge in circumference. Six yards in taffeta, many more in the ethereal stuffs like organdies and meteors. They may be shockingly short or moderately long. Doucet persistently features the moderately long skirts. They may be ruffled or flounced, or again they may fall full from the hips to the hem. They may be in points or in scallops or in uneven curves at the bottom. They may be yoked and fit snugly or they may abound in plaits. They may be gored, they may be draped, they may possess the discarded tunic of yore or the modish overskirt of the moment. They may indeed be any and every way—providing only that they attract and please.

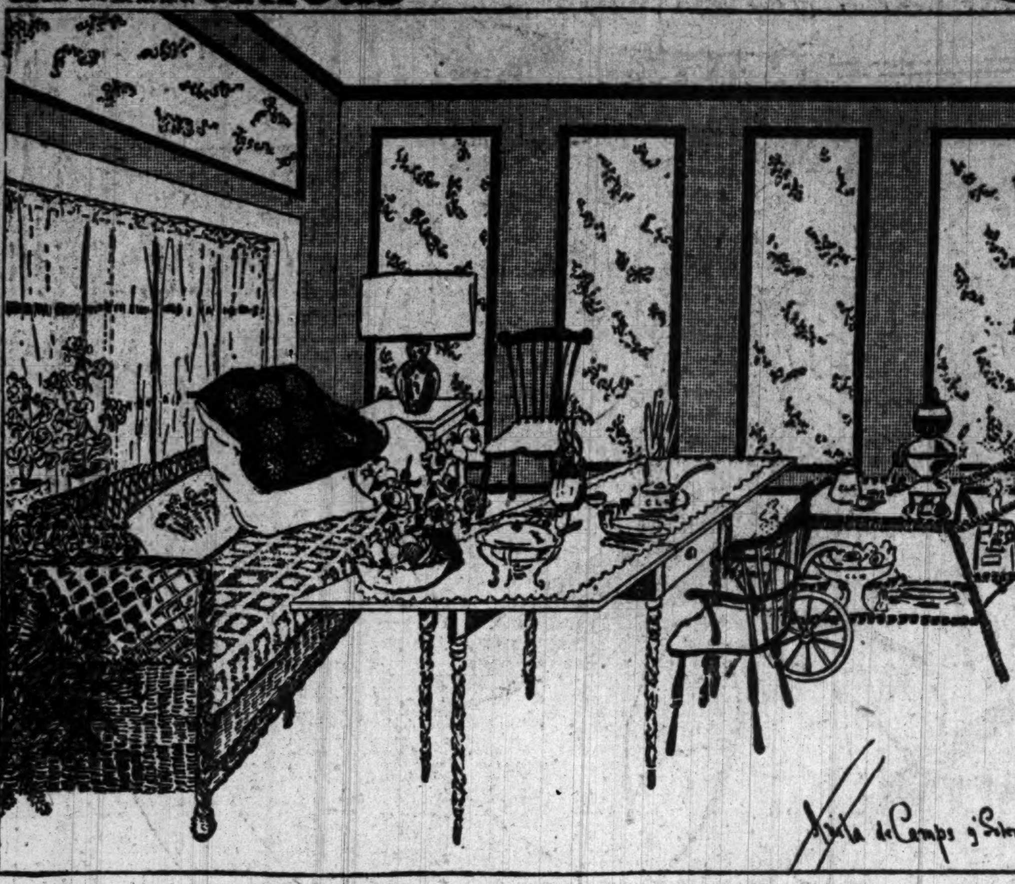
The Home Harmonious

An Informal Dining Room

Anita de Campi



Anita de Camps y Solero

IN regard to the dining room, my advice to the bride is not to have a conventional dining room. In almost all instances in small apartments the dining room opens into the living room. It is much more practical to treat it as a part of the living room. It makes such a nice, comfortable corner if it is furnished informally. Why give up one whole room to the ceremony of dining, and sacrifice such precious space to a large table placed with exactitude under the center chandelier, with six chairs stiffly ranged around it? Your dinners are going to be en tête-a-tête anyway, and what charmingly intimate little affairs they can be made if only you will dispense with formality entirely, and make yourselves really comfortable instead.

Don't get a dining room set then. Have a gate-leg table. That sounds horribly expensive, but it isn't really. I have seen one lately that was a beautiful model—oval when open, measuring five feet, and so well designed underneath that four could sit at it comfortably. It cost $16.50. The two oval end flaps could be let down and the table placed buffet-like against the wall when so desired.

If you raise the objection that you intend on occasions to have much company, there are several ways of getting around that without spoiling the daily companionable atmosphere of the room, and one is to have a twin gate-leg table in your living room. These two tables can then be placed together side by side, or end to end, under one cloth, to seat as many as twelve persons. Should you consider this arrangement, a square end drop leaf must be chosen instead of an oval drop, though the oval ones are really prettier.

Another expedient is to rent a table top. Large wooden table tops to put right on your own table can be rented from any caterer. Caterers also will rent to you china and cutlery at so reasonable a price that it is hardly worth while to burden yourself with a superfluous lot of these things. Telephone to the caterer when you need them. You can rent several hundred dollars' worth for a few dollars.

To go with such a table we might have two Windsor chairs or a Windsor chair and a rush bottom chair. Quaint and colonial in style they harmonize perfectly with the table. They will cost $5 each. Now flat against the wall on the other side of the table we will put a big wicker settee. It will be gaily cushioned and long enough to lie on full length. At one end of it will be a small table with a reading lamp on it. It is often pleasant to sit side by side on so generous a bench, and linger over the tiny cups of after dinner coffee—to fill the little thimble glasses and—light the cigaret perhaps.

Of course a maid would be an utter nuisance—an intrusive creature who would surely break the spell (and much else beside). She would be needless too, for what bride hasn't a little cook book of "catering for two." But some thought must be spent on the convenience of serving.

The one article of furniture that now suggests itself with almost human intelligence for the bride's use is the tea wagon. It must be in wicker to match the sofa. It will cost $6.50. This little table is the most unobtrusive of serving maids. While the meals are being prepared it will stand in the kitchen, and when all is dished up and placed upon it, it will be wheeled into the dining room, where it will stay discreetly at your right hand side; relieve its top of hot dishes, and burden its lower part with the used plates of each simple course.

Let us settle the point of curtains for the whole apartment now. The most satisfactory inexpensive material is a good quality of cheesecloth. It is a yard wide and retails at 8 cents a yard. Place it close to the glass and let it hang to the sill only. Four and one-half yards will make a pair. For the two dining room windows and the four bedroom windows you will need eight pairs, costing $2.88 for all. This allows of two extra pairs, so that the curtains in one of the rooms may be washed every week, without leaving any of the windows bare. They are simply hemmed at top and bottom and done up without starch.

In buying china, be sure to ask if the selection you make is from "open stock." Several accepted patterns are always available and fifty pieces will be found to be quite enough instead of the regulation 100 piece set. Buy from open stock in sets of six to begin with and add from time to time to replace breakage, etc. It is seldom that more than nine pieces of a sort are needed. You know the old rule as to numbers in "entertaining"—never more than the muses, nor less than the graces. Indeed, there is no reason not to begin with only three of a kind—one for the chance guest.

One hundred piece dinner sets sell at $18 or $20. Less than half that number will do, and can be had for $10, including six of everything essential, platters, dishes, tea service, etc. The most acceptable standard types are, for the blonde, willow ware. (Do you know the romantic story pictured on the willow plates?) Either that or a delicate Dresden. The pheasant and flower pattern for the brunette and the plain white with coin gold handles for the auburn haired bride.

The small table for the reading lamp is made simple in construction and painted. It is to be found among the breakfast room and porch furnishings, and costs $2.50.

The lamp shade may be home made. The frame costs 75 cents; silk, $1; holder to adjust it to vase, 75 cents; and vase for about 75 cents. Good vases in pottery may be had at this price.

Since there will be no pictures in the dining room, some leeway is allowed in the wall decoration. An attractive new fashion is suggested here. The wall is papered in solid colored paper matching the neutral paper in the living room. Chintz patterned paper or something of the futurist type is then added, in panels, to measured off spaces, and each panel is framed in with a narrow band of darker paper.

The brunette's living room and dining room will be a warm ecru, the panels of flowers and birds being on a lighter tan ground, with dull green strips framing them in. Her Windsor chairs will be brown, and her big settee and tea wagon fumed wicker. Her table will be mahogany. Her lamp shade will be amber and the vases yellow. The chintz in her cushions will show an ecru ground and no white.

The blonde will have side walls of pale gray. The panels will be of pure white, with sprigs of colored old fashioned flowers, a pattern known as "Chippendale chintz." The narrow border will be of black. Her wicker will be silver gray finish, and her chairs will be painted gray, with posies on them. Her table will be of silver ash. Her sofa cushions will be on a gray ground and show a great deal of delicate mauve, gray, and dull green in the patterns. Her lamp shade will be a soft old rose. The little table will be gray, bordered with a hair line of mauve.

For auburn haired beauties it is the fad of the moment to keep to the no color scheme—that is, to use black, white, and gray only. The side walls will be a light gray decorated with figures like snow crystals, done in fine dotted lines of black. The panels will reverse this decoration—that is, they will be of black, decorated with dotted crystal figures of white. The effect of this reversal is indescribably lacy. The chintz for her cushions will be in the impressionist style, squares and queer flowers, all in grays, black, and white. Her lamp will be white porcelain. The shade will be white silk, drawn tight on the frame, and bordered top and bottom with black velvet ribbon, and ornamented with an applied silhouette decoration cut of black velvet. Her Windsor chairs will be white, with black trimming. Her table will be enameled white, with straight black legs. Wicker, black.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

Replies to Queries.

MRS. E. S. R.: Rep is an excellent material in which to upholster colonial furniture. If the furniture is carved, satin damask is often used. Yes, I am afraid you would tire of so much red. However, change it again when you get tired of it.

* *

MRS. A. G. Y.: If your pink room looks cold and cheerless it certainly would not be improved by being tinted blue-gray. When you have the room equipped with the cretonne hangings you will find that it will be lovely. I should not change anything in it. The sample you inclose is attractive.

* *

MRS. J. F. P.: The only thing to do with your floors is to paint them alike throughout. With the floors painted and the woodwork enameled, the whole place will be quite refreshed. Since you are going to be in the house so short a time before it is torn down, the most artistic and least expensive manner of redecorating will be to calcimine directly over the wall paper that is there. Use soft, neutral tones on the living room floor. Have the walls all alike. An iron bed can be reënameled, but the expense is about the same as of buying a new one. I do not advise imitation wood borders on your floors. Cheese cloth at 8 cents a yard would do for the twenty-four windows.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

THOUGH supported by sound physiological reasoning, the new truth that acid and starchy food combinations, such as sour things and bread, are hard to digest, and so in the long run injurious to health, has not yet been widely accepted. But any one will acknowledge that too hard work causes breakdowns, and it does not take much investigation to discover that nearly all of the diseases with which people suffer today are the results of digestive breakdowns. The body makes colossal efforts to right itself, and this wears it out the faster, as well as the evil it fights. Too many people yet believe that disease comes from unknowable causes.

If we cannot accept as fact that pickles with bread and butter, or lemon, or marmalade, or sour salad dressings are not good things to put in our Sunday evening or picnic sandwich, we can at least test the idea that other combinations are better by trying them for a season. The troubles that come from wrong eating are slow in developing, and building up by right eating is not rapid. Insidious is the best word to use for these effects, something that cannot be readily seen, but is just as certain as death.

Sun and wind and rain are among the most delightful and necessary things in nature's economy, yet in certain combinations and in certain excesses they work great harm. At all times their effects on buildings is to "weather" them. Food weathers our body, but just as buildings by proper care may be well preserved for years, while by neglect they soon go to rack and ruin, so can the body be kept in health by right treatment. The raw material for all human repair and growth and energy is food. In excess it makes us quite as uncomfortable as an excess of sun. Apoplexy is a food stroke, instead of a sun stroke, and heart failure may be not so indictly the same thing. Why will not people eat right?

The original sandwich was of meat and bread. This combination is perfectly justifiable, according to the best knowledge of today, except to those who do not believe in eating meat but may be eating mixtures that are far more powerful for harm in the long run; only harmful instantaneously when the meat is spoiled. It is said that Americans eat 73,000,000 sandwiches a day, and it is probably fortunate that by far the larger half of these are of meat and bread, but the cheese sandwich has more to recommend it. The sandwich was the invention of the people who are the greatest meat eaters in the world, but it has been refined into a dainty thing that alone gives it a place in culinary efforts.

Egg Fillings.

Eggs can always be depended upon for a sandwich filling when everything else is lacking, and for a hearty and nourishing filling if the eggs are cooked right. Boiled eggs, chopped and buttered and seasoned while still hot, are perhaps the most acceptable. Cheese grated and mixed with melted butter and mashed boiled egg yolk is one of the variations.

The important thing is to cook the egg right and to this end every woman should read Farmers' Bulletin No. 128, on "Eggs and Their Uses as Food," in order to learn to cook eggs at the right temperature. The white of egg begins to cook at 134 degrees Fahrenheit, which is seventy-eight degrees short of the boiling point of water. You can cook eggs below this boiling temperature whether soft, medium, or hard boiled (time of cooking determines which), and you should do so if you wish to get all the nutriment there is out of the egg, and not to give your digestive organs extra and useless work on a leathery texture. Please read the bulletin and learn about this matter so as neither to waste the food nor your digestive energy.

Some one writing on school luncheons says: "Do not give a child fried egg sandwiches because they are leathery and indigestible. But an egg can be fried so as to be neither leathery nor indigestible, and a fried egg sandwich is good for hearty out of door luncheons. Since the boiling temperature of butter is the lowest of all the fats an egg fried in butter is less likely to be overcooked. The least possible fire will do the work. An egg can be fried on paper on a hot rock in the summer.

Nut Fillings.

Almost any of the nuts, chopped and salted and mixed to a paste with butter, make a good sandwich filling without any additions, but figs and raisins or dates may be combined with the nuts, and also chopped celery, the nut mixture becoming a sort of dressing for the celery. For tea sandwiches almonds blanched and pounded with sugar, then mixed to a paste with rich cream (a little salt may be needed) are dainty. A lettuce leaf with nut fillings gives character of a sort that may be acceptabe.

Sweet Fillings.

Creamy fudges of any sort make pleasant tasting mouthfuls when spread between dainty slices of bread. Mashed chocolate creams have their sweetness extended by the bread or thinned so as not to attack the digestive forces quite so harshly as they do sometimes when eaten straight. The maple fillings put up in cans are more expensive than those home made, considering their consistency, and a creamy maple or caramel fudge may take their place. A little candied ginger in with these or as garnish on the outside of the sandwich gives acceptable piquancy. Raisins are chopped and mixed with the fudges often, or chopped and mixed with butter, etc., they make good fillings.

Green Fillings.

A nice crisp leaf of lettuce with salt alone makes an acceptable sandwich filling, and watercress used in the same way is fine. Young nasturtium leaves from superfluous plants will soon be abundant, and these compare with the cress for sandwich fillings, and with mayonnaise are probably rather digestible, but are more so without.

Cheese Fillings.

Full cream or American cheese in slices and Swiss cheese the same way are combined so often in a coarse way with bread that we forget that these cheeses can be cut wafer thin, and when pressed between the thinnest buttered slices of bread that can be cut are much more wholesome than some of the mixtures to which we have lately been subjected at the dancing teas and so forth. Cream cheese lends itself to all sorts of mixtures, the leading one of which has been with pimento. Sandwiches with this mixture lend themselves to all sorts of fancy work in the pimento. Little bits of it may be scattered rather thickly over the top of the saandwich, or strips of pimento may be crossed on the top or yet thinner ones arranged in a lattice.

Paste Fillings.

These pastes may be made at home by chopping and pounding any meat and mixing it with butter at the softest stage before actual melting. The pastes in pots and tubes, if good, are expensive, but a tube of anchovy paste is considered indispensable in some families. The sardine was made for the sandwich. It may be used in little strips, or after it has been carefully prepared it may be mashed, put through a sieve to make it as smooth as possible, then mixed with equal quantities of butter to form a paste. Ham pastes can be made in the same way with other seasonings to taste. Bacon does not need to be made into a paste, but carefully fried and drained, kept from curling by constant turning, it makes an excellent sandwich filling alone with a lettuce leaf slightly salted or with the chicken and lettuce in the club sandwich.

Leftover Sandwiches.

Leftover sandwiches of meat and egg may be dipped in egg and fried to make them seem like a fresh and special thing. In general, sandwiches should be served as soon as made or wrapped in waxed paper or a damp napkin. About the nicest of all are those of the best bread and butter alone, or brown bread, or of alternate slices of brown or pumpernickel bread and butter, three thin slices of bread in all united with the butter.

Styles in Clothes.

Today "The Tribune" starts a new fashion department for its readers. It will be called the Styles in Clothes department. Any question about styles in clothes, whether for babies, girls, boys, women, or men, will be gladly answered through the columns of "The Tribune" or by mail. Address Miss Louise James, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

THE GARDENER AT WORK

The Garden Editor will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. Address The Garden Editor, "The Tribune."

Phlox Annual and Hardy.

THE phlox drummondii are the showiest and most easily raised of all the annuals. A paper of special mixture is a surprise package. Every seed is likely to give a different color of the round petaled flowers. Some will be fringed, some stars, some white eyed or white edged in every pure color imaginable.

The phlox drummondi grandiflora grows one foot in height, with named flowers of scarlet, pink, blue, dark rose, or pink. The semi-plena or double species is better for cut flowers than the single sorts.

The Nana compacta grows in neat, symmetrical little bushes, covered with flowers until late in the fall. Last summer one packet of mixed seed sown in a poorly prepared window box had not less than twenty-five different phlox blossoms.

The perennial, the hardy phlox, once established in a garden, becomes a joy for all time. A small stand of a few white or purple or pink produces showy trusses of bloom. The suburban garden starting phlox now should select a choice variety.

The W. C. Egan, a vigorous plant, a rosy mauve, is popular. The tapis blanc is pure white, the Widar is violet blue with a white eye. Blue, lavender, and orange colored varieties are planted in the semi-shade, where the color appears finely. The sun fades them. The phlox are very hardy.

Roses should be pruned back to get good bloom. The hybrid rose should be cut back to a couple of eyes of last season's wood. Tea roses only require thinning. Climbers should be pruned, the old wood cut away, the young shoots tied up.

Flowers in the Parks.

THE Japanee barberries and the lilacs have been running a race of rivoiry to see which could get into bud and leaf first. With true Jap enterprise the barberries are ahead. They were the first to throw veils of green over the lingering berries of last season still on the branches and are first to hang out their flowers. The lilacs budded gloriously in luxuriant leaves, but the blossoms, being slower to mature, must come later.

All the parks have shows of blossoming shrubbery. A greater variety of flowering shrubs has been added to the local collections in recent years. The effects on some of the recently planted lands are marvelous. Out on the acres of Lincoln park at the foot of Diversey parkway the rose gardens will make a wilderness of pink and white in a few weeks. On the larger area nearer the lake the tamarix and different shrubs planted in the rich black soil brought from southern Illinois are growing as if they had always been there.

Washington park makes a special feature of a shrub collection near its western edge. The bloom began with the forsythia and will keep up without intermission through the lilacs, deutzias, dogwoods, snowberries, bush honeysuckles, highbush cranberries, bridal wreath, calycanthus, althea, and hardy hydrangeas. The weigelias and Japanese quince are handsome in color. The flowered almonds have sprays of fine pink. A new shrub can be looked for every day from now on.

The wooded island in Jackson park begins to unfold the flowery combinations which it holds in surprise from early spring until fall. The iris must be kept under surveillance. The roses bud and unfold rapidly under warm sunshine.

Following the shrubs which waved the golden bells of the forsythia from their clumps a week ago an interesting trail of blossoms, some new and strange, extends along the entire chain of boulevards and through the rich areas of the great west park system.

A few short descriptions can only point out what every Chicagoan will go to see. If one has known the lilac, the mock orange or syringa, the snow ball, the red bud or Judas tree, scented flowering currant, the white elder of July, and the flowering crabs, remember that the park gardeners have installed many new ones worth knowing and May is the month of blossoming shrubs.

Tulips were ahead of time this year. Their stems are not so long because they hurried into bloom, and one must make the circle tour to see what Humboldt, Garfield, and Douglas parks and some of the small parks are offering in tulip designs, red, white, yellow, and variegated.

At Lincoln park the great lawn before the conservatories is spread with oriental rugs in tulips. The sunken gardens of the west parks are gay and a ribbon of color runs in and out the shrubbery from the famous parterre in Washington park. The lilies of the valley, early florets, and some johnny jumpups are in the borders of the old fashioned garden at Lincoln park. May is the month of flowers.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. M. ENDERS: Effective boxes for windows can be grown of [1] calendulas or yellow marigolds and giant candytuft, [2] summer cypress or kochia alone, [3] nasturtiums alone, [4] petunias alone or with candytuft or alyssum, [5] verbenas, nasturtiums, lobelia, feverfew.

* *

Mrs. M. Lynch: A north piece of clay ground in a wet location does not promise much unless it is drained and the soil worked lightly. Pansies like rich soil. Try hardy flowers, some pansies, violas, forget-me-nots, begonias, or impatiens. In the front yard try asters, zinnias, cosmos, petunias, and nasturtiums. Verbenas do well in a window box.

* *

Paul Fister: Sulphate of iron is a remedy for weeds on lawns. It is said that it will kill dandelions without injuring the grass. It is not a fertilizer. It is sprayed on. Repot your plants. When leaves turn yellow the earth is unhealthy.

* *

Violet Pritzker: The seedsmen sell a nonpoisonous powder for an ant exterminator. Try it. Cultivate your garden well, as working among the plants disturbs the insects.

* *

E. A. Berger: Dahlia tubers are planted three feet apart, singly, laid on the side, the eyes up. Cover four inches deep. The aster bed must be changed every year. Replanting seedlings must take place after May 10. The roots grow near the surface and a mulch of some kind spread over them improves the plants. Replanting is difficult unless plants are handled carefully. Asters are grateful for care.

THE sports clothes of the season are simple. The plainer they are the more stylish they are, and the more appropriate they are and the more comfortable they are. Never before were they more suited to the two masters, style and comfort.

Bright colors may be used, but in the accessories more than in the substantials. For instance, a hat may be vividly alive, a coat or a belt may suggest the most startling shades, a button may be the brightest of hues. But the waist or the skirt is either white or some of the neutral shades.

As for the skirts, they should ordinarily have between two and five gores and should be wide enough to allow ample freedom without being too wide to encumber. The waists should have few frills and furbelows, with collars that are low and sleeves that might be unbuttoned to the elbows.

Any girl or woman who is really smart does not use any makeshift clothing in her sports attire. That is probably why she is called smart. When she goes in for bathing, golfing, cross country walking, and tennis, she is absolutely and correctly dressed.

Sweaters are an essential for long walks and for boat trips, too. We have of course all the familiar wool sweaters and many variations thereof, but it is the sweater of silk that is the garment of this especial summer. It is to be found in glove silk and in a woven silk that closely resembles knitting, but in its most exclusive form it is hand knitted and the silk thread for the purposes is rich and handsome, not over heavy, yet durable in the extreme. Bright colors that make a picturesque effect with a white gown are the preferred ones—American beauty, peach, pale green, lovely blues, and the like.

It is expected that the knitting of sweaters will take an important place in the piazza work of the summer, and when one remembers that the cost of the silk required for the making is exactly half that of the completed garment, the fad on a practical feature. As a matter of fact, the work is not difficult, for directions for preferred shapings are supplied with the silk and any one who can handle a knitting needle successfully is competent to undertake the work.

Laundry is too considerable of an item for a woman to consider anything but a cloth skirt for all water purposes.

A SURE WAY TO REMOVE COARSE HAIRY GROWTH

Stubborn growths of coarse hair which have been caused by the unwise use of pastes and rub-on preparations, can be devitalized with DeMiracle, the original liquid hair remover, because it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Le Bon Ton says DeMiracle is "the best method in the world today." Only genuine publications of the highest character are quoted by us. Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from so-called magazines which do not exist. DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including The Public Drug Company and Buck & Rayner's five stores.

EVERY active boy wants some good way to "go fast"; without too much work. Boys and girls everywhere are enthusiastic about the Skudder Car. It goes fast; as fast as they want it to go; and so easy the 4-year-old can run it.

Only 100 of These Cars for Monday's Sale

The boy stands on the tilting board with both feet, working it up and down like a seesaw; that's what makes the car go. All he needs to do is throw his weight from one foot to the other—easiest possible motion—ideal for gradual, normal muscular development; no strain or tiresome work.

The Skudder Car has an unbreakable steel frame; wire wheels, rubber tires, ball bearings. It is built on the highest bicycle standards, and being low-swung, close to the ground, is safe against accidents.

You're interested in the health of your children; you buy them good food and good clothes; don't forget that the right kind of exercise is equally important. The Skudder Car means to the child what the automobile means to you.

The Fair offers, while they last, 100 of these famous Skudder cars at ☛ 3.29

DAGMAR RASMUSSEN

Never were the new modes in miniature more charming than those being shown now for the summer season. The styles for small boys are essentially sturdy and manly, with a wide variety allowed for each mother to suit the individuality of her sons. The fashions for little girls are no less diverse and graceful. A return to Empire lines is seen and the cut of the Empire dress is one which is particularly becoming to the youthful figure. Brilliant colors are much worn, smocking and embroidery are important trimming features, the contrasting of materials is a fashion whim much indulged in, and braiding and scallops are both frequently used.

Doris Blake Says

WERE you born in the lovely month of May? If you came into the world before the 21st you were born under the sign of Taurus. You live in the realm of your sensations and your emotions. You are stubborn and liable to extremes of judgment. Your temper is variable, but you are loyal and magnanimous to friends, sometimes too much so. You are strong physically, though you don't always look it. You have literary taste, and if you put yourself to work you can accomplish a great deal in the realm of knowledge. Your first impression of how things will turn out can usually be relied upon.

If you were born after the 21st you come under the sign of Gemini. You are restless and changeable, with a vivacious, nervous nature. You are foresighted, aspiring, and energetic, but you are a little inclined to be pessimistic. You are a great lover of education. You have a philosophical and a practical view of all subjects. You probably have an intellectual forehead and a cold but restless expression in your eyes. You take up new fads readily.

If you were born before the 21st, you will be happiest if you marry some one born between Dec. 23 and Jan. 20, or between Aug. 24 and Sept. 23. The best mate for you if you were born after the 21st will be some one born between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19, or between Sept. 24 and Oct. 23.

May's birthstone is the emerald. It signifies immortality. For the May maiden there is a happy little verse:

> Who first beholds the light of day
> In spring's sweet flowery month of May,
> And wears an emerald all her life,
> Shall be a loved and happy wife.

The flower of May is the hawthorne, which means hope. The month of May is not a favorite month for marriage. It is probable that the well known prophecies regarding May marriages may have something to do with the common superstition regarding it. According to the oracles—

> Married in the month of May
> You will surely rue the day.

And—

> Married when bees o'er May blossoms flit,
> Strangers round your board will sit.

Still another says:

> Married in May and kirked in green,

In choosing a May wedding day it would be well to avoid the 2d, 4th, 7th, 12th, 15th, 20th, and 23d, as these are said to be unlucky days for matrimony. The 7th, 15th, and 20th especially so.

Should He Feel Insulted?

"Dear Miss Blake: I like a young girl of my own age very much. She says she likes me. But before I came here she had been going with another young fellow. We have been having some race over her. She has gone places with me, but tonight I asked her to go to a show, but she has not responded. Should I take this as an insult and a slam or how should I take it? Would it be best for me to not have much to do with her? X. Y. J."

I should take it as a sign of extreme rudeness on the part of the girl not to acknowledge your invitation. Of course it might be that she misunderstood you. If you think there might have been a misunderstanding, call her up and let her explain. But if you are sure she understood you perfectly, then I would advise you not to give her another chance to ignore your invitation.

Love Tabooed Till She's 20.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl nearly 20, knowing a fellow for about ten months, a traveling salesman. I see him almost every day, unless he is traveling out of town. He works for a firm right across the street from where I am. I know many fellows, but he is the only one I care for.

"He only met me a few times and asked to call on me. I had to refuse, telling him I had work at home. Then he said he keep my company home. I didn't say anything, and he never ask me again. The real reason is because my folks don't want me to go out before my twentieth birthday.

"He was always friendly to me, and waved at me very often, until lately. Now he doesn't wave as much as he used to. He used to send me niec cards whenever he was out of town. Now I don t receive any. He told some one he lost my address.

"Can a fellow forget a girl's address if he wrote for almost five months? I met him one night going home from work. He was with a gentleman friend, and was very nice to me, but did not say anything about losing my address.

"I got acquainted with him through a girl friend's beau. He wanted my address so he could write me while he was on his vacation.

"I refused to give it. He gave the fellow his card to give to me so I could write. I never wrote. When he came back he asked me to meet him. When I saw him he was real glad and said: 'Finally I meet you!'

"Would like to have your advice concerning this. I think he has bad thoughts about me because I refuse to have him call on me. ANXIOUS."

Why didn't you tell the young man the truth—that you had promised your parents that you wouldn't have anything to do with young men until your twentieth birthday? You might ask your mother about it and if she's willing to let you have a caller before you're twenty, why not invite the young man to your home? He will recover from his pique as soon as he sees that he has any chance of getting better acquainted with you.

* *

Street Car Etiquette.

"Dear Miss Blake: Some time ago I was returning home on the train with my little niece. A young man, with whom I am very well acquainted got on at one of the stations. He came down to where we were and stopped to talk for a few minutes. The seat in front of us was vacant, and so were several other seats in the car. Now, was it my place to ask him to sit down with us, or was it his place to ask if he might? Is it proper for a girl to have her things on and go out to the buggy when her friend calls for her, or should she let him tie his horse and come in until she gets her things on? PUZZLED."

The young man should have asked permission to sit near you if he wished to. It isn't a very serious matter either way, though. If they are going to leave immediately, I see no reason why a girl shouldn't have her wraps on, so that the young man would not need to tie his horse when he would only have to untie it immediately. If there isn't any hurry, though, it's a little nicer for him to go into the house and say good evening to her mother. Don't you think so?

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Wants Comedy Sketch.

"Dear Miss Blake: Kindly advise whether I can get a small one act play, calling for a cast of four or five persons, to be used in a parlor entertainment. I would prefer a comedy. D. W."

I would suggest that you ask the librarian at the library nearest to you for a list of plays such as you want. Or write to any good, reliable book store in the country and they will furnish you with such a list.

Loves Her Dearly.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 20 years of age. While going to school here I met a young lady residing in the country. I have been in her company a great deal, but have been just like a friend. I am deeply in love with this girl and hate to think that I have to leave in two weeks. I have not asked her to correspond with me after I leave here. I love her dearly. Please tell me what you would do. "BILL."

Ask her if you cannot write to her after you leave, Bill. Don't be fainthearted about it. In all probability she would be very much disappointed if you didn't speak about keeping up your friendship by correspondence.

Love Letters

"The Tribune" will pay $5 for every original love letter published. No letters copied from a book or magazine will be considered. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." Letters must be written on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

In a Rose Garden.

The original of this letter was found in an old desk, where it probably had lain for over forty years, when found by the owner's grandmother. It was written by Sir Herbert ——, who died a bachelor and a cripple some fifteen years after writing the letter. Submitted by Miss P. B., Oak Park, Ill.

"Lass o' Dreams: When the waiting for you becomes unendurable, as it has today, I obey my impulse to write to you. Though you may never see the letter, it is some comfort to me, and it makes you seem real.

"Dearest, the trees are full of blossoms, even as my heart is full of love. In the rose garden I planned for you the trees nod their heads and whisper of you, and the lavender sends out a sweet breath of longing. Here in the garden, which is all my world since I was crippled, everything is springing into new life, and only in my heart is there pain—well-night intolerable when I think of you.

"I dream that you are here beside me; that your hair, for all its powder, gleams ruddy brown; that your eyes match the harebells which I set near the dell for you. Yet you may not be any of these things, whatever you are, dear, or whoever you may be, I shall know you when I meet you, and I pray that it may be in my garden, which is really yours, since it 'lives and breathes, I swear, not of itself, but thee.'

"Does it seem to you that I might have searched more eagerly for you before I became a useless hulk? Then, dear, believe I looked everywhere, but of all the lovely ladies I met, none of them was you! Once, at the regent's ball, there was one whose beauty dazzled me, but even as my lips brushed her hand, I knew that she meant less to me than one of my roses.

"Life holds for me only my roses and you. Come to me, heart o' mine. O, come while I yet live, I have not very long, and life at best is all too short; but, dearest, if you are waiting in the Shadow land I shall know you—but that is just a 'cripple's fancy.' You will come to my garden some day, and I shall know you, and when you have read my letters you will understand. I will put this in the drawer with the others, amongst the rose petals and lavender, till you come! Ah, then!"

What She's Glad About.

"Dear Engaged to Me Man: When I woke up this morning I lay still the longest time trying to think what I was so glad about. And then I knew! And I just laughed out loud and ran into mother's room to tell her. But, man dear, what do you think, she wasn't surprised at all. She just smiled the funniest kind of a smile and hugged me so it hurt. But she did say the dearest things about you. Perhaps I'll tell you some of them some day. And dad said he knew some one would steal his little girl before long. But it won't be much like stealing, 'cause he's got to go to the altar with me and give me to you, all himself!

"When I told that big college brother of mine he just looked at me over a huge bowl of bread and milk—it was at breakfast—and remarked that he knew I'd do it pretty soon, but you were a jolly good sort.

"Now what do you think of that? Nobody was a bit surprised but just me. I was. I haven't got over wondering how it all happened yet. That you care for me like that. Are you very, very sure, man dear, because I love you so much, you know, and I'm not very old or very wise either, and—O, I feel very humble today.

"Come soon as ever you can. I love you. YOUR GIRL."

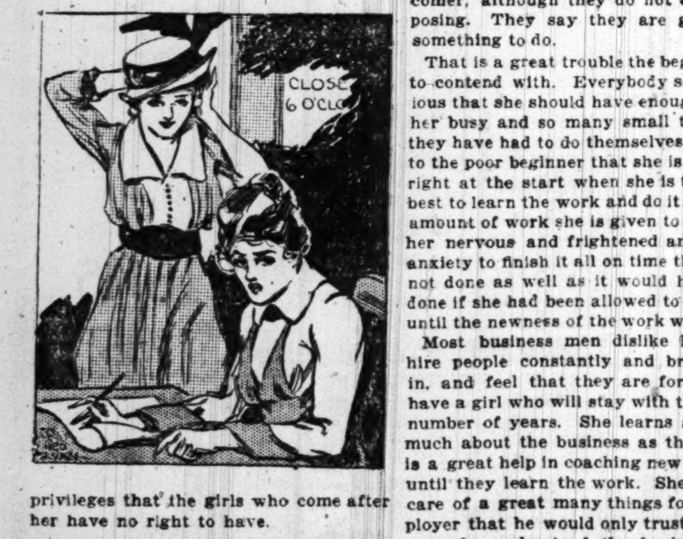
For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Imposing on the Newcomer.

IT happens once in a while that when a girl has been with one firm for a number of years and is the oldest in length of service in her department she assumes an air of superiority which is annoying to the other girls. She also seems to think she has a right to enjoy privileges that the girls who come after her have no right to have.



Length of service does carry with it some privileges. The girl who has been with a firm longest usually receives a higher salary than the newer girls, she has the best desk in the office, and has first choice when the vacation list is made up. As far as the other girls are concerned this is perfectly fair, but when she assumes privileges which are not hers by right they do resent it. For example, when the other girls take only an hour for lunch they cannot see why the "old girl" should take from an hour and a quarter to an hour and a half every day, nor why she should leave five or ten minutes before any one else at night. It causes dissatisfaction among the girls and tends to make the atmosphere of the office anything but harmonious.

As a matter of fact, a great deal more is expected of the girl who has been with the firm longest. She is supposed to know more about the work than any one else and it is expected that she will turn out the best work. Length of service is not considered an excuse to take things a bit easy and to turn part of one's duties over to others.

It is this inclination on the part of the older girls that often makes it hard for the beginner. They think it is all right for them to impose a little on the newcomer, although they do not call it imposing. They say they are giving her something to do.

That is a great trouble the beginner has to contend with. Everybody seems anxious that she should have enough to keep her busy and so many small tasks that they have had to do themselves are given to the poor beginner that she is swamped right at the start when she is trying her best to learn the work and do it well. The amount of work she is given to do makes her nervous and frightened and in her anxiety to finish it all on time the work is not done as well as it would have been done if she had been allowed to go slowly until the newness of the work wore off.

Most business men dislike having to hire people constantly and break them in, and feel that they are fortunate to have a girl who will stay with them for a number of years. She learns almost as much about the business as they do and is a great help in coaching new employés until they learn the work. She can take care of a great many things for her employer that he would only trust to a person who understood the business thoroughly. But no matterhow valuable an employé may be, her employer is quick to resent any assumption of authority or privileges that he has not granted.

He may be inclined to let the older girls have privileges that he would not give to the others, but he realizes that it is bad for the discipline of the office to have one person enjoying privileges that no one else has. Department rules that do not apply to all of the department are not held in great respect by any one. The fact that one person ignores them seems to the others to be a good reason for their not paying any attention to them.

It is extremely foolish for a girl to feel that because she does her work well and has been doing it for years she is indispensable. There are any number who could step right into her place if she were to leave and do her work as well as she did it.

He Does All the Work.

My wife is no Lady Chesterfield either. Before we were married she kept house for her brother and young sister, making the sister's and her own clothes and doing all kinds of fancy work. She kept everything spick and span.

I was working on a good salary, and had no doubts about marrying and setting up a home. We started with a nicely furnished flat, and all went well for a little while. Then I had to go home and wash the dishes and get supper. At first I helped with the washing, getting up early, but now I have to do it all. When we moved she went to a friend's and stayed until all was over and I had every thing settled. She never gets my breakfast, and I go without lunch, for I know if I go home I will be late getting back.

She gives parties quite often and invites the young people of our crowd. I like company, but have to work so hard getting ready and am never dressed when they come. It is a by-word with them all the work I have to do, and the last time the boys all came up to my room and helped me dress, all the time having much sport at my expense.

I loved my wife when we were married, and I love her still, but just thought I would tell you it is not always the husband that falls from the high pedestal. SAP HEAD.

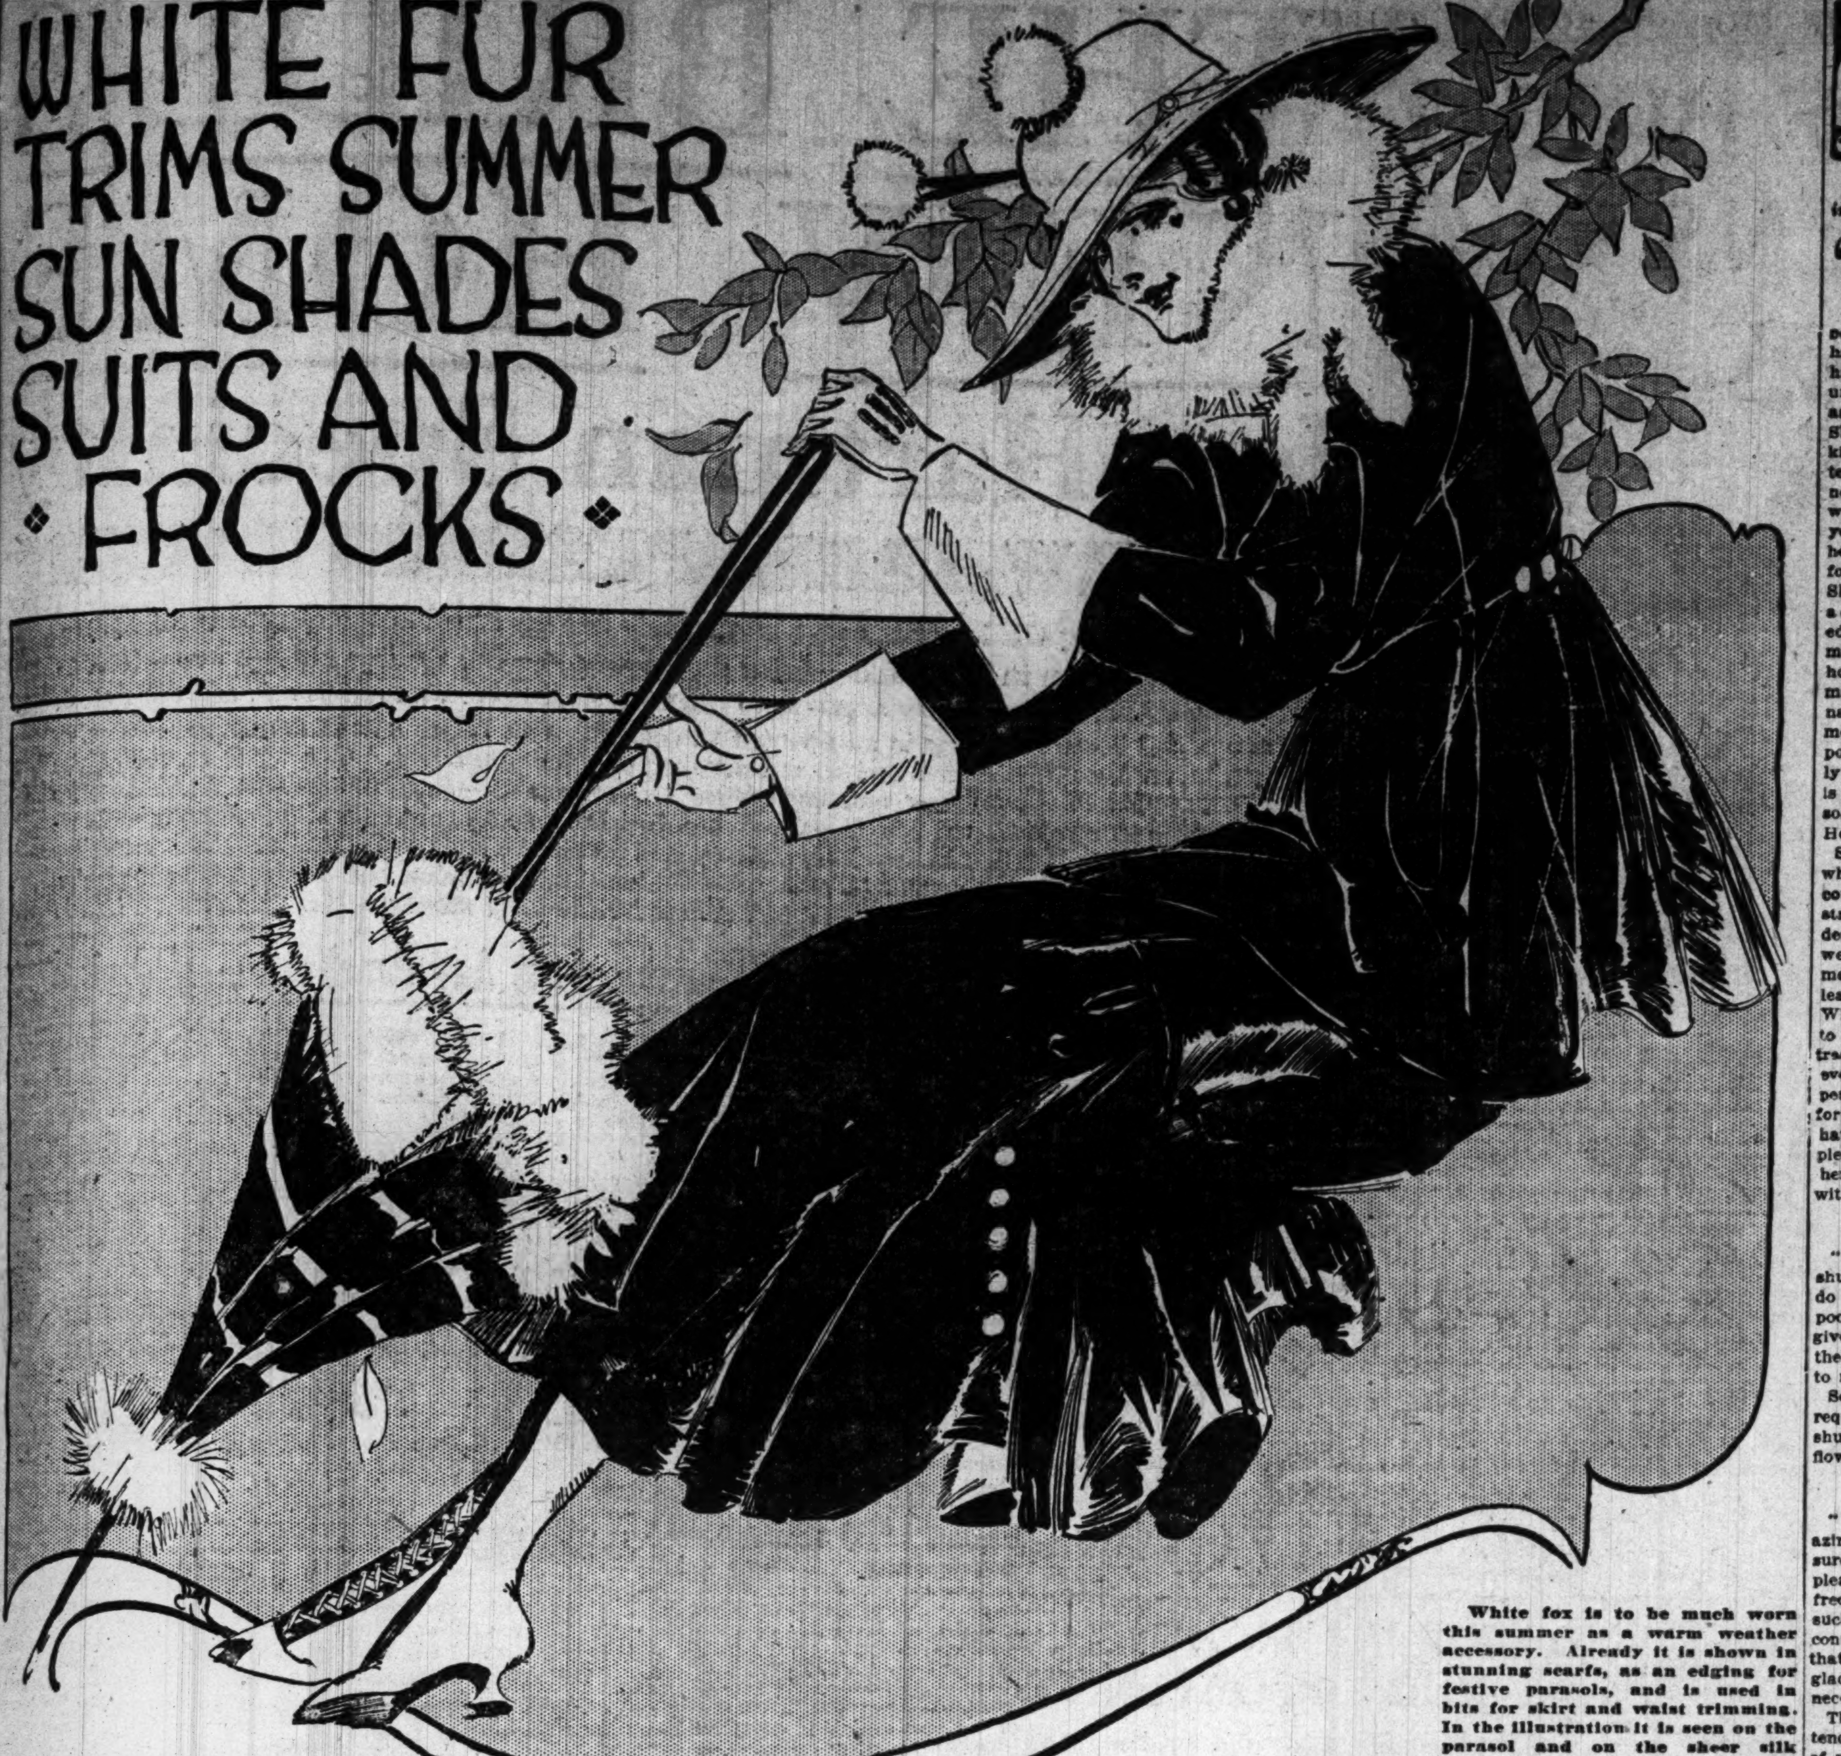
WHITE FUR TRIMS SUMMER SUN SHADES SUITS AND FROCKS



White fox is to be much worn this summer as a warm weather accessory. Already it is shown in stunning scarfs, as an edging for festive parasols, and is used in bits for skirt and waist trimming. In the illustration it is seen on the parasol and on the sheer silk frock.

IT is interesting to note that fur scarfs and fur trimmings of fox are to be one of the most interesting sartorial accessories for summer wear. The scarfs are stunningly handsome and are to be worn in various colors of that popular fur. More conservative women will have them in gray, in blue, and in brown fox but the white fox is really the most appropriate for summer wear and is generally becoming, especially as it has a tendency to lend youth to the wearer. Then, too, small bits of this same white fox are to be incorporated on evening frocks—not to any great extent as in some seasons past, but moderately.

A fur edged parasol of white tulle and satin is being included in the trousseau of one fashionable woman in the city and she also has a gown of black Brussels net which is softly shirred over a thin silk foundation and has a narrow finish of white fox, hardly more than half an inch wide.

A rather amusing example of feminine inconsistency lies in the fashion in which women appeared on the streets in cold weather with their necks exposed to the wintry blasts and their fur pieces draped about their shoulders and the manner in which they are now burying themselves in neck ruches of one sort or another.

What are known as the butterfly ruches are found in various colors of tulle, fine and fluffy and worn close about the neck. These high, upstanding ruches and ruffles serve as frames for the face and are generally becoming. Black ruffles are being worn with every color of suit, but the ruches may be had to match the suit exactly if preferred.

Some of these ruches are exaggeratedly high, giving a Pierrot impression, but the woman who is wise is likely to choose one of moderate proportions.

For wear inside the house there are all kinds of fascinating little collars and chemisettes which can be trusted to transform any frock or suit. There are pretty ones made of sheer white batiste or handkerchief lawn; then there are others of fine muslin, much embroidered. All of these rise high, sometimes even above the ears.

Girdles and sashes are to be important, too, in the summer wardrobe. Really wonderful ribbons are being offered for their making and metal brocaded effects in all colors are much affected. There is one new ribbon which is called a vegetable satin, which gives a rich and lustrous effect that is not unlike a lightweight velour and yet is supple enough for belting purposes. I have seen handsome sashes of this variety wound about the figure and then the ends knotted and finished with tiny fringe balls.

Gloves are always interesting. Just now we are met with a rather interesting condition, for while handsome shoes are constantly growing in numbers the best gloves are pastel in tone and are of good quality, mocha in color, and stitched with black. Pongee color and sand color, also with black stitching and black finish, are the newest things for occasions of greater dress, butu still the suede is preferred to the glace kid. Pongee color is found to harmonize with almost every color and is fast taking precedence of white, although the latter is correct; sand takes an intermediate place, because, by virtue of being so neutral in tone, it can be worn with almost any costume.

There are some extreme novelties, however, such as champaign colored kid gloves with stitching and buttons of king's blue. These are too striking to be suitable for ordinary occasions.

There are many fancy handkerchiefs and especially bright colored ones are in favor now.

Glove handkerchiefs of the new sort are made of chiffon and of crepe de chine, sometimes all in a bright color, sometimes in white with colored borders and there are some distinctly novel ones shown in striped silk and in striped linen, but perhaps among all the showing, there is nothing more unusual than the colored linen with the tiny black edge and with a black initial inclosed in an outlined frame. White handkerchiefs with quaint little animals in one corner of each, are shown, too, but they would seem a little too bizarre for general usage. The colored linen with the black edge and the black initial is really effective when judiciously used.

Chiffon and crepe de chine having been discovered to be perfectly washable, make really more practical handkerchiefs than at first thought appears, and they are essentially dainty in weight and in texture.

Do You Know a Great Spender?

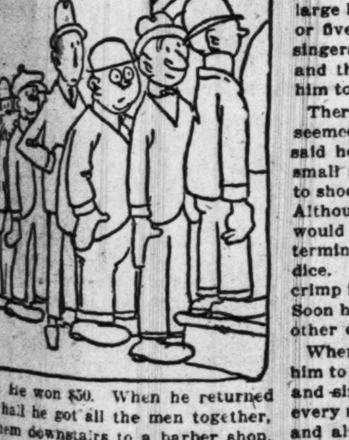
Did you ever know a great spender—one whose idea was that the cost meant nothing so long as he was having a good time? Write on one side of the paper, and if your letter is published you will get $1. Address the Spenders' Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. No manuscripts returned.

Bought Round of Shampoos.

He lived in the same house we lived in for five years. He used to buy everything in a wholesale manner that was ever recommended by friends.

One day he sent home a dozen smoked hams. His family being small, his wife had to dispose of them among friends.

On one occasion he went to a dance.



cards. He won $50. When he returned to the hall he got all the men together, took them downstairs to a barber shop, and had every one get a shampoo, haircut, and shave. He paid the bill.

He wound up by treating all with cigars. Having no more money left, he said good night. He earned only $20 a week.

Gave Away His Store.

The biggest spender I know is a fellow who had a candy and ice cream store. To every girl that came in he gave a five pound box of candy. He would make a date with a different girl every night, taking her to the best show in town and to the best chop suey house. He would also have an auto to take them all around the city. And in six months' time he was broke. But he told his friends he had a good time.

$500 in a Night.

I had been braking on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad out of Danville into Chicago. Our pay days came once a month and being a pretty good spender myself I usually found myself "broke" a few days after we had been handed our envelope. One morning at 5 o'clock in a cafe I was awakened by a tap on the shoulder. I saw before me a prosperous looking chap who invited me to take a drink.

He began by buying drinks and shortly pulled a check book out of his pocket and showed me the stubs, and remarked that he could cash a check for a pretty large amount. After drinking for a while he telephoned for a conveyance, which was a large barouche. He then sent out for four or five musicians and a couple of negro singers. He bought several more rounds and then he instructed the driver to take him to a gambling house.

There was but one man there and he seemed to be the faro dealer. The dealer said he would not open the game for any small amount, but if the prospect wished to shoot the dice he would give him a play. Although I warned him that the game would probably be crooked he was determined to play, and took a whirl at the dice. The dice man soon put a huge crimp in his roll, which was a "whopper." Soon he had to go back up town to get another check cashed.

When he got the check cashed I induced him to go the rounds with these musicians and singers and he made them perform every minute. He certainly spent money and always handed me enough to buy a round when he thought it looked as though I should. Of course, I kept the change out of the rounds and never offered at any time anything less than a $10 bill. That man must have spend $500 that day, including his loss at the game.

Bought Hair Oil.

The greatest spendthrift I ever knew came into the store in the Kentucky mountains where I worked, with his winter's catch of furs and sold them to us—we bought everything.

Then with his money he started buying refreshments for the fast gathering admirers. He bought thirteen cans of oysters, two dozen cans of cling peaches, fourteen cans of sardines, nine pounds of cheese and five pounds of crackers, a liberal supply of deviled ham, dried beef, and such other tinned goods as we had on hand at the time. The whole pile of edibles was spread out on a tarpaulin on the store porch and the village hangers-on had such an orgy as had never been known in that neck of the woods. Following the feed the spendthrift bought twenty-four pounds of stick candy as an after dinner treat, and gave each member of the company a bottle of hair oil as a souvenir of the glad occasion.

It was a Saturnalia of canned goods and profligacy, the like of which I've never seen since.

The Confession I Wish I Had Not Made.

Did you ever make a confession to a friend, husband, wife, or the one you promised to marry that you lived to regret bitterly having made? Or have you suffered because of a confession you should have made and didn't? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

She Smokes Cigarets.

Years ago, while attending a normal school, I was persuaded while larking with a bunch of students to smoke cigarets, and frequentl repeated it while there, but not afterwards. Later I met a young man, well educated, Christian, strict in good habits. He asked me to marry him and I gladly consented. Wishing to be as honest as he, I told him of my school escapade. He grew angry with me and said he did not think such a girl was worthy of being a wife or mother. I simply handed him his ring and, believe me, I'll never make another confession.

Roused Husband's Jealousy.

In my girlhood I was much in love with a rather dashing young man who happened to be at the seashore at the same time I was. I never got over that love affair, but later married a man of different type, whom I respected and loved as one loves a good, kind man. Two years ago I told my husband of this man (who is now a widower) and my love for him. Two weeks later the widower appeared in town and rather rashly called on me during my husband's absence. My husband, returning, found us talking like old friends, but he, instantly jealous, ordered the man from the house. The man, never having cared for me, was dumfounded, but courteously withdrew. My husband has now left me. Had I not made that unhappy confession he would never have thought anything of that visit with an old friend and we should still be happy.

Indeed, I have lived to regret a confession I made to my husband directly after our marriage. Before my engagement to him I had been going with another young man. Evidently he wanted to learn just how far my love affair with the other fellow had gone. So he began telling me of his doings with other girls purposely to draw me out; and, wanting to match my escapades with his, I related things, innocent enough in themselves, but told in a way to measure up to his own doings. They fired his jealously, and never since has he ceased to twit me of undue familiarity with another, such as allowing myself to be kissed by a man I was not engaged to, etc. Though he had told of doing worse things in order to get my confession, he cannot forget that he has married a woman who was kissed before he married her. If I had it to do over again I should tell him nothing.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

By MARION HARLAND

"SOME time ago I wrote to you concerning a most unfortunate shut-in with whom I had been corresponding for a long time. You promised to print the appeal at your earliest opportunity, but I have not yet seen it and I fear that it must have been overlooked. This poor woman undergoes great physical suffering as well as lack of the bare necessaries of life. She longs for correspondence with some kind friends, also she craves reading matter, and any trifles which would seem nothing to more happily placed persons would be a great deal to her. I beg of you to try to interest some of your kind hearted correspondents in this poor unfortunate sufferer and her many needs. She is an educated woman, having been a school teacher before she became afflicted with a most severe form of rheumatism which has confined her to the house for the last fifteen years. As a matter of course, she does not wish her name published. I am sure some of the members of the Corner will do all in their power to brighten the life of this tragically afflicted shut-in. All that is in my power is little and seems as nothing in comparison with her sufferings and her needs. Her initials are Miss B. L."

Sometimes when I think of the shut-ins who are scattered so thickly over the country I wonder if we who are well and strong have the least idea of all they undergo. We can move about as we choose; we can select our occupations and amusements; even if we have to work hard it at least keeps our hands and thoughts filled. What must it be for those who are chained to what the poet Heine called his "mattrass grave" or are bound to a chair or even confined to one room, suffering and perhaps dependent? Is anything too much for us to do for them? I shall hope to have early and generous response to the plea for Miss B. L. and will gladly send her address to any one who asks for it with a view to cheering her life.

Wants Invalids to Write.

"I would like to hear from some of the shut-ins, as I am a shut-in myself. I can do some fancy work, but my eyes are poor. I have some flowers I would gladly give away if any one were willing to pay the postage on them and would send this to me. MRS. S. E. C."

Some one will be sure to respond to this request for correspondence with other shut-ins. I take it for granted that the flowers offered are growing plants.

For a Reading Room.

"We should be glad to have some magazines for our reading room and can assure you they would give a great deal of pleasure to our Indian pupils. We also frequently save suitable pictures from such magazines for illustrating talks in connection with our mirrorscope. I see that magazines are offered and would be glad to send postage for them if this is necessary. F. A. T."

This appeal comes from the superintendent of an Indian school. The offer of magazines to which the writer refers had already been accepted and the periodicals given elsewhere. Are there not some other friends who have magazines to give away to these Indian pupils? It will be noticed that the books with pictures are especially welcome, and that postage will be paid if the senders do not feel they can supply this themselves.

Would Adopt a Baby.

"I am writing to you for advice and help from the Cornerites. I have advertised, but without success. I want to adopt a baby 3 months old or younger. Possibly some unfortunate mother would be willing to part with her babe and to let me have it. We are in a position to give an infant the best of care and an education and all that can be desired in the way of a good Christian home. I have often wished that I might find a baby on my doorstep and I would have been grateful for such a discovery. I have read often of your help to others and I am sure that you can assist me. "CHILDLESS."

As I have said before through this department, in many states there are charitable associations from which babies can be secured with an account of their pedigree and some idea of their family proclivities. Even without turning to such organizations as these, however, it ought to be easy to find such an infant as is desired by "Childless." She does not state if she desires a boy or a girl, but apparently she would be willing to take either one, and the offer of a good Christian home, where a child would be well cared for any suitably educated, seems to offer a place to which a poor mother would be glad to commit the infant she could not care for herself. I hope this notice may bring a response and that those offering the baby will be ready to offer references, as would, of course, be done by the parents undertaking to adopt the child.

Religious Books Offered.

"If you will give me the name of some one who wants good religious reading, I will gladly send some books. I have quite a number to give away to any one who wishes them. MRS S. C."

Some one is sure to wish the books so kindly offered. I am sorry that the rules of the Corner do not permit us to print the request for clothing that accompanies the proffer of the books. We find it impossible to do this except in rare instances.

* *

Box of Magazines.

"If you will send me the address of some one who would like a box of magazines, I should be glad to give them. In fact, I have enough for two or three families. MRS. D. H. M."

Such offers as these always sound alluring, and I have no doubt there will be demands for the magazines.

* *

Collects Relics of All Kinds.

"I hope you will include me in your Corner, for I have enjoyed it so much. For my entrance fee I give the hint that young housekeepers or busy mothers might set the alarm clock at the time the cake or other food is supposed to be done, and thus save burnt food and worry, also unnecessary opening of the oven door. I also come to ask help for a poor old man who is an invalid and has not been able to walk for twenty-five years. His only enjoyment is found in collecting Indian relics of all kinds, cigar bands, cigar and cigaret coupons, and the little rugs, flags, and ribbons that you get with such coupons. Stamps of all kinds, except the common 1 and 2 cent varieties that are in use now, are welcome, especially if the name of the city is printed across them. He also likes confederate money and postmarks. If the latter are sent, please cut them two inches wide and four inches long. He can use two postmarks of a kind, also the permits that come on the wrappers inclosing circulars, and please don't cut them, but send them whole. Now I hope so many of the Cornerites will send him objects of this sort that he will have a big collection which will keep him happy in its arrangement for a long time. His initials are J. F. T. If any one wants some magazines give them my address, please. I thank you beforehand for the kindness you will, I am sure, show to my friend, J. F. T. MISS E. L."

The "fee" which is paid by the sensible suggestion as to the alarm clock is gladly received, although the writer would have been welcome without it. As to the appeal for the old gentleman who makes the collection, I am safe in promising a response to this. I only wish that Miss E. L. had given us his address as well as her own, so that we would not have had to trouble her by applications for directions as to how to write to him. I will give her address, however, both for the old friend and for the magazines she is good enough to offer.

Directions for Making Rugs.

"If Mrs. E. P. W., who asked for an air cushion, is not yet supplied I will send her mine. I accept her offer to pay postage, which will be about 10 cents. Perhaps some of the correspondents who need rugs can make them by the following directions: Make a rough frame by nailing together four sticks of wood of any size desired; then tack on a piece of clean gunny sacking. Gather all the small scraps together and pull the loops of materials you have on hand through the spaces in the sacking with a stout crochet hook. If the rug is made of woolen scraps it will be warm and comfortable, and different designs can be followed, such as a star or a cross, by using different colors of materials. Here is a way to make another kind: Rip up and wash all old coats and trousers or skirts that have outlived their usefulness as garments and cannot be made over to advantage. Cut the stuff into pieces about two inches wide. Sew them together to make three long strips, turn the edges under neatly and braid. Then lay the braid so as to form a round, a square, an oval, or a triangle, and whip the edges together on the wrong side. You can make the rug any size you please and use any sort of woolen goods you have on hand. Can any one tell me how to keep a hair brush clean? I wash it once a week with hot soap and water, and I also wash my hair, and I protect my hair when sweeping and keep my brush in a box, but it always seems to be full of lint. Some one asked where she could get Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney's books. They are in the public library, and have been there ever since I can remember. Perhaps they are in other libraries also, and it might be worth while for the correspondent who wants them to look there for them and see if she can't get them in that way. "MRS. W. S."

Thanks for the offer of the air cushion. Mrs. E. P. W. had been already supplied with one when this letter was received, but I am sure there will be some other invalid who will be glad to accept this friendly offer and to pay the 10 cents postage for the sake of obtaining the cushion. The address of the correspondent desiring a layette was sent and no doubt she will be delighted to have an addition to the little outfit. The suggestions for the rugs are worth having. I have known warm and attractive rugs made by these directions, and those with the foundation of sacking are especially attractive, although truth compels me to say that I have not found them to wear so well as the braided rugs. As to keeping the hair brush clean, I always use ammonia and hot water for washing mine and do not add soap to the water. If after the brush is dry a comb is run through it several times this will remove fluff which has accumulated there from the hair. If any one has better methods of cleaning a brush we would be happy to use them.

Cheap Way to Make Beads.

"I am sending a nice, inexpensive way to make beads and other things which can be used; for instance: An old plaque, or even a pie plate or tray, may be utilized. Paint the background black and make the compound into the shape of any fruit or flowers and fasten them to the background with glue. A tray placed on the sideboard or center table, while the plaques are hung on the wall, adds much to the appearance of the room. To prepare the mixture, make one cup of well sifted flour into a batter with water, as though you were going to mix hot cakes. Use a tin plate or the top of a lard bucket, put into it a little clean grease or lard, and set the plate on top of the tea kettle or anywhere that you can cook a cake with steam. Put enough batter into it to make a small cake. You will know when it is done by its being dry and a marble white. Lay the cake out on the end of a board and sprinkle over it, as if you were salting a cake, a little oxide of zinc, and then with a knife 'butter' or spread it with any color paint you desire. When I am working with this I have a long plank and make two cakes of each color—pink for rose, green for leaves, and so on. This dough gets as hard as stone, and one may shape anything from it. I forgot to say that after putting on the zinc oxide and paint you should work it to a dough. You can work with one batch for a week, but it is more easily handled while fresh. If any one wishes to write for further information and will write to me, inclosing a stamp for reply, I will try to answer any questions. I will give stamped linen, silk, or cotton thread for embroidery or crochet in return for violet roots, geranium cuttings, or bulbs of any kind. Will you publish the following?—If any woman will organize a class of ten I will come and give free lessons in all kinds of fancy work. My work is of great help to shut-ins and to mothers wishing to earn extra money and to beautify the home. I still have the squares of thread I offered some time ago. MARIE B."

Although I cried a halt some time ago on recipes for making beads, I do not consider I am breaking my decision in giving the above, since the paste or bisque can be put to so many uses besides the beads. Such work as is described by the correspondent may be either pretty and artistic or cheap and meretricious, depending upon the ability and the care that are bestowed upon it. In all events, I give the directions for the benefit of those who care to follow it, and I am also glad to print the offer of fancy work materials in return for plants of various sorts, as well as the suggestions for the class.

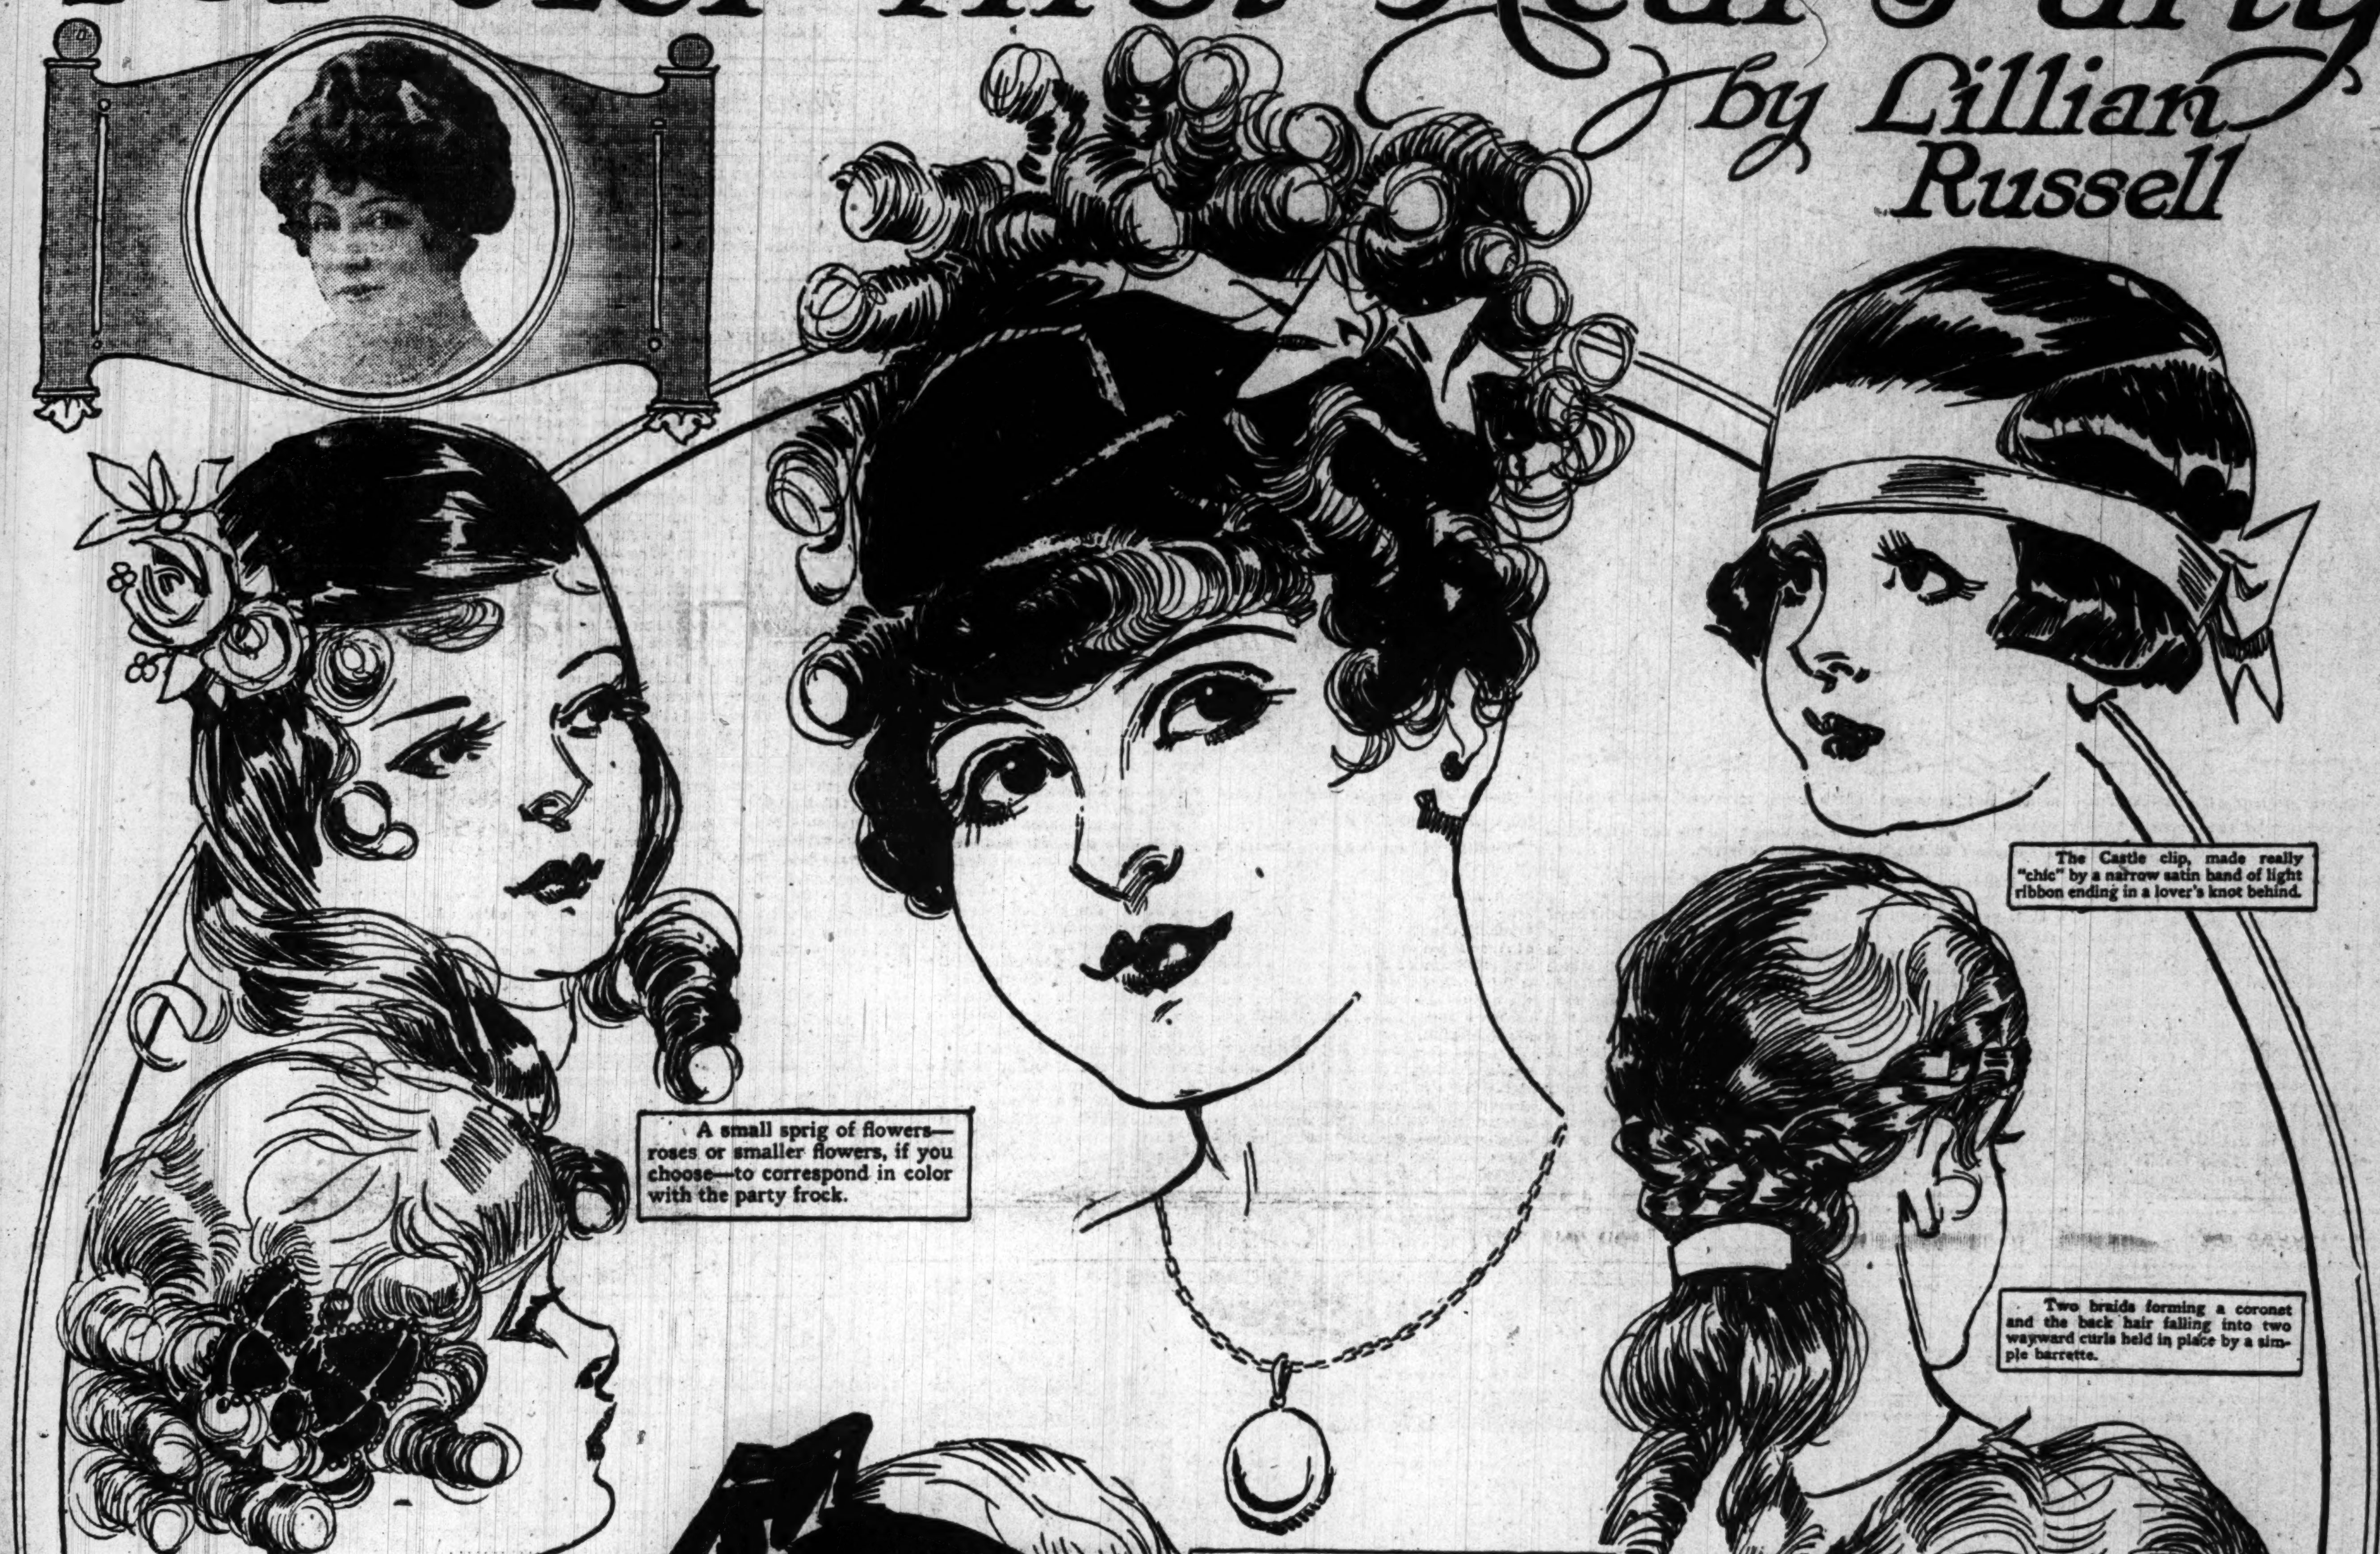
Household Hints

MAY 2, 1915.

For Her First Real Party

by Lillian Russell



A small sprig of flowers—roses or smaller flowers, if you choose—to correspond in color with the party frock.

Two braids forming a coronet and the back hair falling into two wayward curls held in place by a simple barrette.

A fountain of fluffy blonde curls, supported by a band of satin or velvet ribbon two inches wide.

Simplicity and charm, both coming and going, portrayed in this youthful band ending in a large double bow.

Ribbons, Flowers & Feathers, Equally Smart on Mid-Summer Hats

5—A chic straw turban piled high with delicate flowers.

THE summer hat is a fascinating affair. It may be large, picturesque and old fashioned, or it may be tiny and chic, and smart. Again, it may be medium size, if medium size be preferred. But this latter is not so popular a size. It is merely a permissible one.

The flower trimmings are stunning this year. There are all varieties of them, from the gayly colored garden bloom effects to the hot house roses of rarest hue. All the old fashioned border flowers are worn, as well as the vivid colored fruits, such as the raspberry, the strawberry and the blackberry.

The large hat this season is not heavily trimmed, but it is trimmed in many ways. Its line is quite as important as its trimming. While many of these large hats are trimmed with clusters of small flowers used in striking combination with velvet ribbon, there is a growing tendency toward the use of a single huge flower which covers, perhaps, the whole crown of the hat.

One handsome French model which I saw lately and which laid particular stress on this tendency was of fine black Milan straw. Across its crown was one single dead white flower which extended clear to the brim of the hat on one side and considerably beyond the crown on the other. The front and back both drooped, eminently in harmony with the spirit of the frocks of the moment.

There is a good deal of difference of opinion as to which is the most generally becoming, the wide hat with the brim which rolls at the side or the brim which drops low both front and back. While the latter variety is vastly becoming to a pretty, piquant face, it is not as much so to a less regularly featured one. It is an exacting shape and not easy to wear, while the brim that softly rolls up at one side is likely to be quite generally becoming.

Leghorns are to be much in the running from now on and handsome models are to be had. One leghorn model which would be exquisite worn with a Victorian frock—for it was on the Victorian order of a hat—had an extravagantly wide brim which drooped recklessly all around. Around its crown nestled a ruche of rose red net and then in the back loops and streamers of the same shade velvet fell far below the crown. And quite at the edge of the brim at the left front was caught a single rosebud of a still deeper shade of pink.

The use of ribbons, and especially of velvet ribbons, threatens to be excessive. Since in millinery as well as in dress there has been a decided reaction against the military, this vogue of the very feminine floating ribbons harmonizes with the very feminine styles in frocks and suits.

Nor are all of the large hats of the drooping brim variety. Their brim may be stiff and straight, on the sailor order, and most aggressively trimmed with an upstanding aureole of wired tulle. There are stunning huge hats of all lace and all tulle, too, and others made of the finest lingerie stuffs. Again there are large picture shapes which are covered with printed linens or with silks which are both striped and plaided.

Feathers, too, of bright shades and of pastel shades are to be seen on the newest hats. Indeed it is a quaint and a gay array that hats present just now, an array that has charm in every touch and every line and which is destined to delight the most fastidious women.

$25 for a Name and Address

Did you ever know a poor girl who married a rich man? Tell "The Sunday Tribune" about them. You don't have to write the story—we'll do that. All you have to do is to take two minutes of your time, mail us the names and addresses of some rich man you have known who married a poor girl. We'll do the rest. AND IF WE PRINT THE STORY YOU WILL GET $25 FOR THE TIP.

Since time began the most popular theme in the world is the romance of rich youth and lowly girl. Everybody loves such a story. Haven't you known a romantic affair of this sort among some of your friends? We want real life stories, real facts. For life is stranger than fiction every time. A trained nurse waited on Stephen Codman Jr., a Boston millionaire. He married her. Two poor American girls, Alice and Grace Carr, went to England. Alice married the Hon. Cecil Bingham; Grace married Baron Newborough. William Wanamaker, brother of the great merchant, married the German music teacher who taught his children. Jan Moorhead, millionaire of Pittsburgh, eloped with his mother's French maid. These are only a few of the modern Cinderellas. They are all around us all the time. Do you know of one? If you do, write and tell us about it. Give us their correct names and addresses. If we print the story you will get $25 for the tip. Address Romance Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

What Beauty Tricks Transformed You?

Did you transform yourself from an ugly duckling by a beauty trick? Write and tell me what that beauty trick was. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Lillian Russell, Chicago Tribune.

Plastered the Wrinkles.

Deep lines between the eyes caused from frowning and other useless facial expressions certainly go to make up the ugly duckling. I stopped the bad habit by keeping the disadvantages of it in mind by the use of a small piece of adhesive plaster placed over the spot and removed all trace of previous folly by massaging with cold cream. J. B. W.

* *

Stopped Facial Contortions.

One day as I passed a mirror unexpectedly I discovered that I went about habitually with a tense expression on my face. I found that the harsh lines were greatly softened and that my eyes became really pretty when my face was in complete repose. A habit of using much emphasis in my speech was largely responsible for the facial contortions I had been employing. I cultivated moderateness in my selection of words and ceased the use of emphatic tones. The result not only made me much pleasanter to look upon but rid me of a disagreeable habit of conversation. MRS. R. A.

* *

Called the "Bearded Lady."

I had a heavy growth of thick black hair between my eyes and down the side of my face. One day I heard the bookkeeper refer to me as the bearded lady. I was so nervous from hearing the remark I decided at once to consult a beauty specialist. After two months' treatment I was no longer referred to as the bearded lady. C. J.

* *

Milk Worked Wonders.

At one time I was a great coffee drinker, sometimes drinking as many as eight cups a day. Finally I got up courage enough to replace it with milk. Now I drink a quart of milk a day and my health is excellent, my skin is soft and white, and my complexion clear. I also wash my face in a solution of warm water and milk every night before retiring. This insistent habit has worked wonders for me. D. R. M.

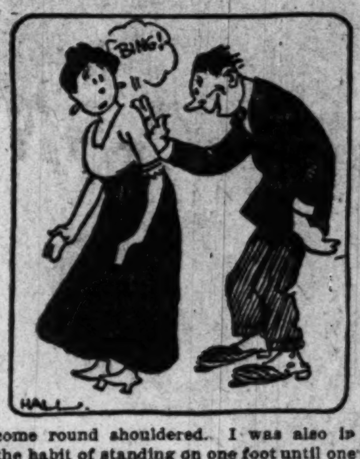
A Slap on the Back.

I asked my family and friends to help me overcome a bad habit by slapping me on the back and telling me to stand straight whenever I assumed the awkward stooping position that was the result of years of carelessness. I used to stoop over my work, and even walked stooped until in time I might have become round shouldered. I was also in the habit of standing on one foot until one shoulder was higher and one hip larger than the other. A few vigorous thumps a day gradually succeeded in making me straight and giving me an easy, graceful carriage. I am thankful now that I asked others to help me and that they took the trouble to do so, for now I am considered a truly attractive girl. O. Z.



GIRLS! LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Removes all dandruff, stops itching scalp and falling hair.

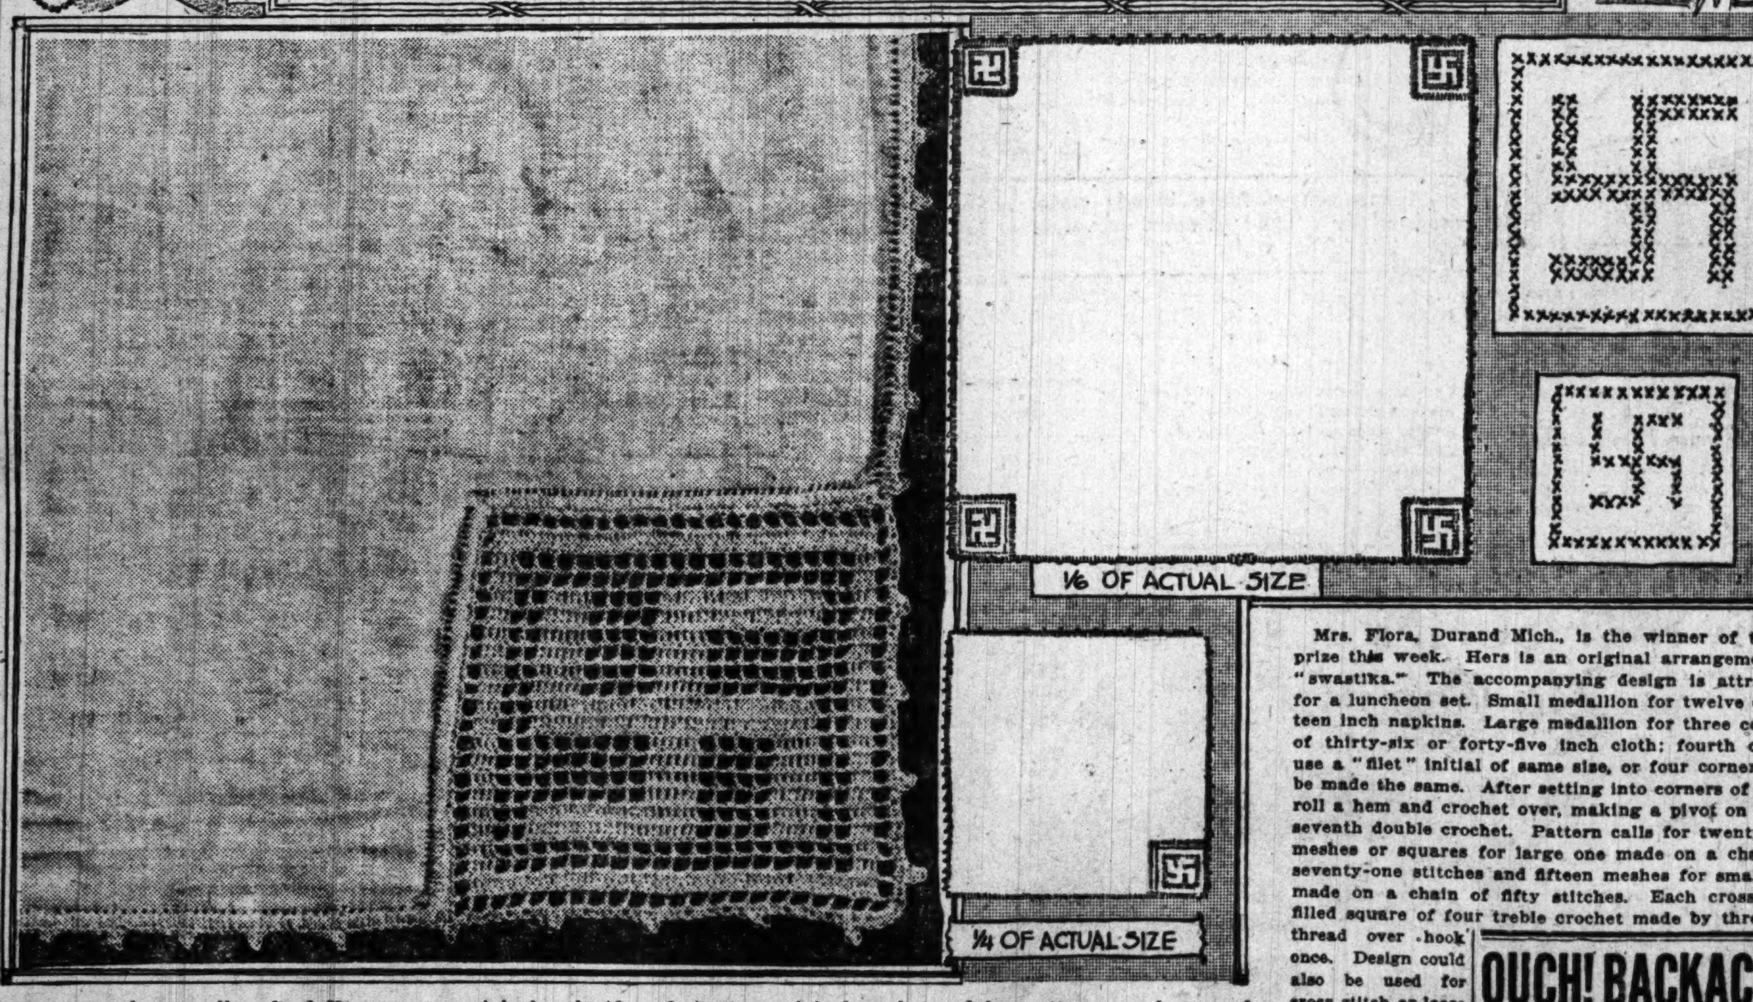
To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair, soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy, and free from dandruff, is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

A Prize Winner in the Embroidery Contest.

ORIGINAL ARRANGEMENT of SWASTIKA CROCHET PATTERN for LUNCHEON SET



Mrs. Flora, Durand Mich., is the winner of the $5 prize this week. Hers is an original arrangement of "swastika." The accompanying design is attractive for a luncheon set. Small medallion for twelve or fifteen inch napkins. Large medallion for three corners of thirty-six or forty-five inch cloth; fourth corner use a "filet" initial of same size, or four corners can be made the same. After setting into corners of cloth, roll a hem and crochet over, making a pivot on every seventh double crochet. Pattern calls for twenty-two meshes or squares for large one made on a chain of seventy-one stitches and fifteen meshes for small one made on a chain of fifty stitches. Each cross is a filled square of four treble crochet made by throwing thread over hook once. Design could also be used for cross stitch on loose woven linen.

Are you a clever needlecrafter? Have you any original embroidery designs or original crochet and lace patterns you have used yourself and which you have found attractive and satisfactory? "The Tribune" will pay $5 for each design published.

Lillian Russell's Answers to Beauty Seekers.

[Copyright: 1915: By Lillian Russell.]

DISTRESSED: It is not only bad for the health to breathe through the mouth but it makes thick lips. When practicing deep breathing always inhale through the nostrils with the mouth closed. If one gets into the habit of breathing through the mouth the brain suffers from insufficient nourishment, so do the organs of the digestion, the heart and lungs, and the muscles. Try to form the habit of breathing through the nostrils and I am sure it will not be long before you will have overcome the habit of breathing through the mouth. You will be much better in health. I shall be glad to send you instructions for deep breathing if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

V. McC.: I am sure the red scar from the pimple will go away in time. Rub a good skin food into the face at night and apply peroxide of hydrogen to the mark. Superfluous hair can be removed by the use of peroxide and ammonia, but not with one application. I shall be glad to send you the formula if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

RUTH: Annoying facial eruptions have often been observed to follow the eating of excessive amounts of candy or other sweets, buckwheat cakes, oatmeal, doughnuts, sausage, cheese, rich pastry, fried meats, and other foods. After excluding sugar and starch from the diet for a short time severe acne and billiousness have been found to disappear in many cases. Why don't you try eliminating from your diet the things which seem to distress you most? A pinch of soda in hot water will often relieve the distress caused from indigestion.

* *

EDNA: Dimples are a facial defect, and while they are bewitching on a young girl, they nearly always turn into wrinkles or deep holes as one grows older. You can be just as charming by cultivating the art of smiling and filling your heart and mind with good thoughts. All beauty is from within. So fill your heart with love and you will have all the dimples necessary to make a beautiful face.

* *

ANXIOUS: The roughness of your limbs is probably caused from poor circulation. Be careful of your diet and get all the exercise you can in the open air. Walk as much as possible. When bathing sprinkle salt liberally in the water. Rub vigorously with a Turkish towel.

* *

MADGE: Yes, there is a way of applying the hair tonic so as not to soak the hair. Use a medicine dropper and in this way you can put it all over the scalp without any disagreeable effects.

* *

ALMA: Blackheads are usually caused from clogged pores. This accumulation gradually hardens and distends the tiny openings or pores. The cause is usually carelessness in bathing the face. The only way to rid one's face of them is to bathe it in as hot water as can be borne. Use a complexion brush. Rub the soap on the face until a free lather is secured. Rinse in hot water and then apply more soap with the complexion brush. Then rinse in clear, quite warm water and then cold, and then apply benzine (not benzoin) to the face with a piece of absorbent cotton. Let it remain on the skin for amout five minutes. Then rinse with cold water and apply a good cleansing cream. In the morning rinse your face in cold water. The cold water will contract the pores of the skin.

* *

ANNA: Camphor water is good for removing the red veins about the nose. Bathe with the camphor water, which you can procure at any drug store. Also massage the face with a good skin food. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to send you formulas for a good skin food and bleach for the neck.

OUCH! BACKACHE! RUB LUMBAGO OR STIFFNESS AWAY

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacob's Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your aching back, and by the time you count fifty the soreness and lameness are gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica, backache or rheumatism so promptly. It never disappoints!—Advertisement

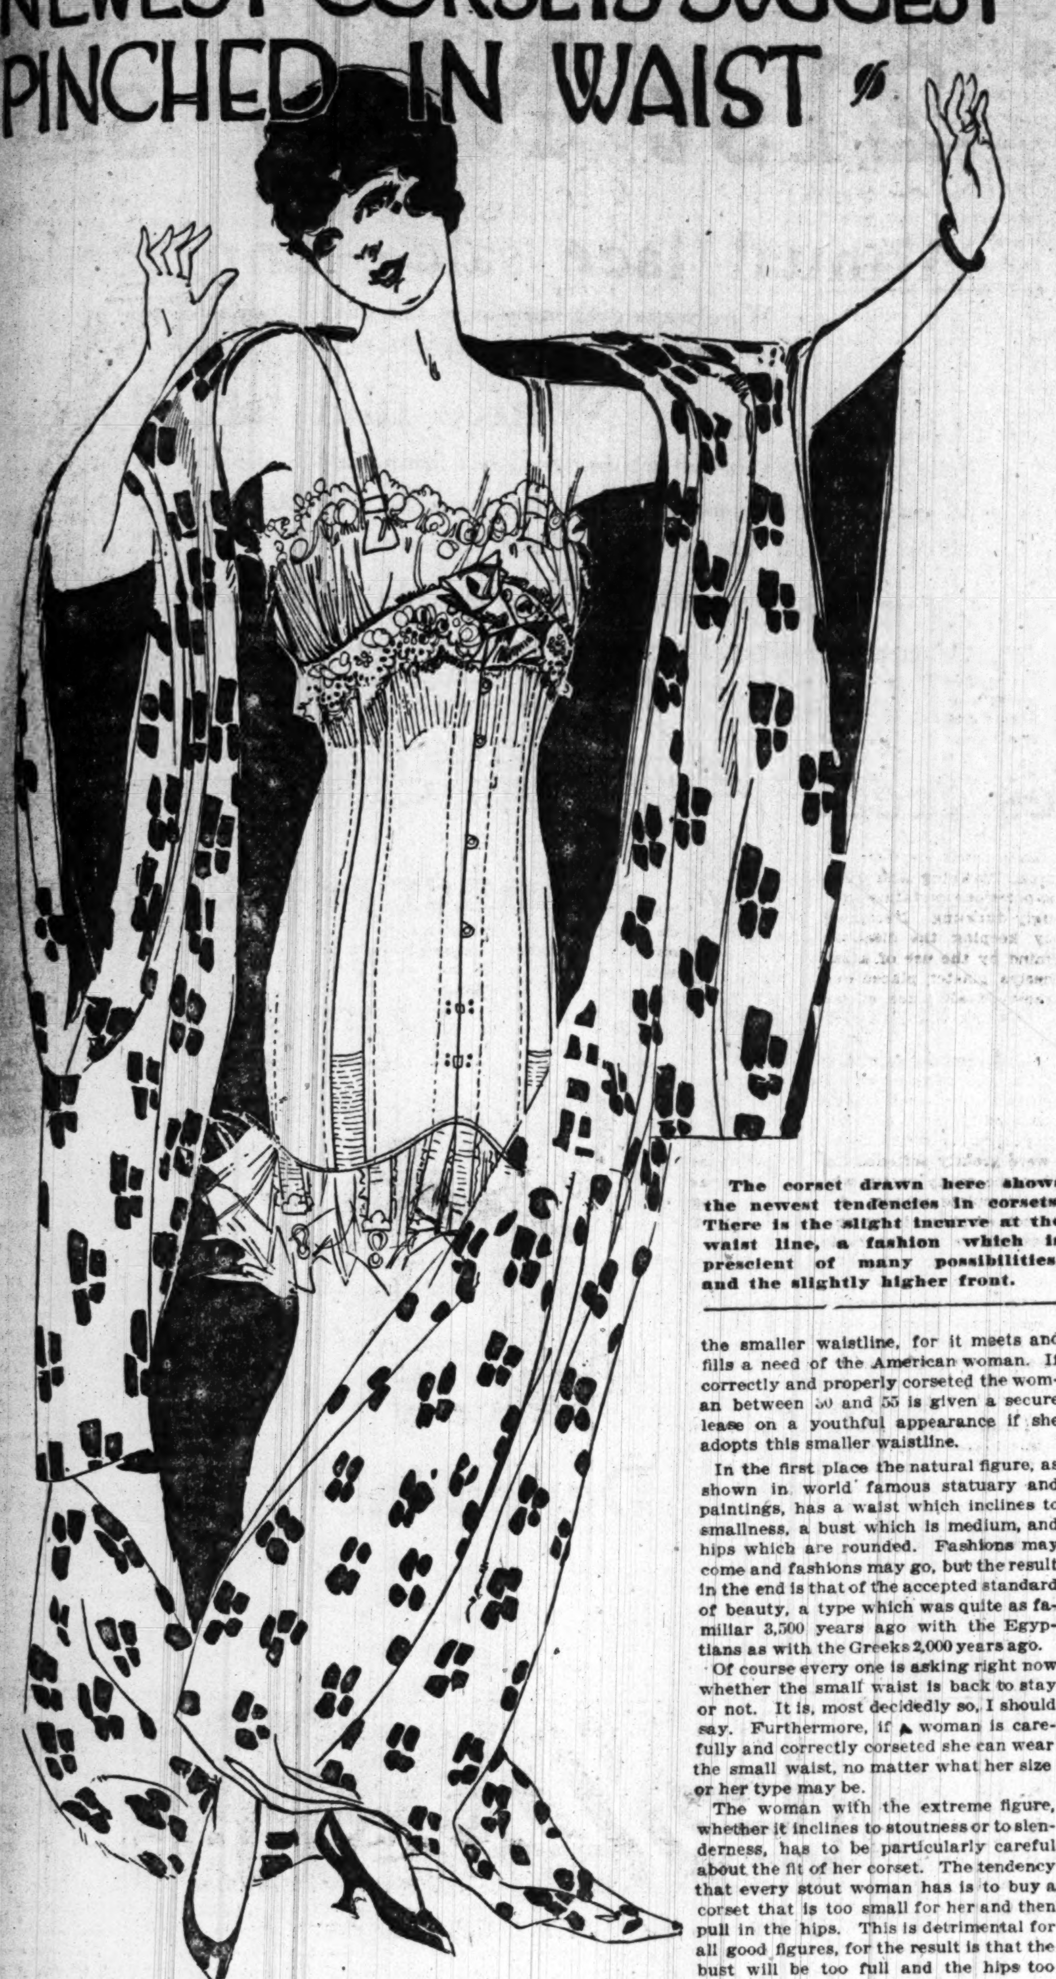
NEWEST CORSETS SUGGEST PINCHED IN WAIST



The corset drawn here shows the newest tendencies in corsets. There is the slight incurve at the waist line, a fashion which is prescient of many possibilities, and the slightly higher front.

THE new corset is the corset at its best. It is a corset which brings back curves to the human figure. It allows woman to follow her natural lines. The waistline which woman loved and lost several seasons ago has returned.

Nor is this swinging of the pendulum back from the extremes of a corsetless figure to the waistline of other days a matter of alarm. It is in no way a dire forerunner of the doll-like, wasplike figure of our grandmother's time, or even the ultra-small waist of 1900.

Women like variety these days and they want to be stylish, but they have progressed a little with the years and they want to be comfortable, too. Then, too, the science of corset making has improved wonderfully in the last two generations, and the fact that fashion has announced that the smaller sized waist is to be stylish again does not mean that women are to be painfully or even uncomfortably compressed. They are merely going to be given increased possibilities for charm.

There is attraction in curves. No gown looks its best and no woman in it looks her best when the general effect is that of a garment hung on a straight box. The new corsets are just as feminine and full of charm as the new spring frocks. It is only natural that they should bow for favor together.

There are many definite advantages in the smaller waistline, for it meets and fills a need of the American woman. If correctly and properly corseted the woman between 50 and 55 is given a secure lease on a youthful appearance if she adopts this smaller waistline.

In the first place the natural figure, as shown in world famous statuary and paintings, has a waist which inclines to smallness, a bust which is medium, and hips which are rounded. Fashions may come and fashions may go, but the result in the end is that of the accepted standard of beauty, a type which was quite as familiar 3,500 years ago with the Egyptians as with the Greeks 2,000 years ago.

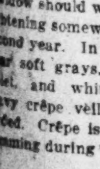
Of course every one is asking right now whether the small waist is back to stay or not. It is, most decidedly so, I should say. Furthermore, if a woman is carefully and correctly corseted she can wear the small waist, no matter what her size or her type may be.

The woman with the extreme figure, whether it inclines to stoutness or to slenderness, has to be particularly careful about the fit of her corset. The tendency that every stout woman has is to buy a corset that is too small for her and then pull in the hips. This is detrimental for all good figures, for the result is that the bust will be too full and the hips too large.

Then, again, the thin woman is of the deep rooted opinion that she can wear any size and any kind of corset that she wants to. And now that the corset is higher she may be of the opinion that she can dispense with the brassiere. This, however, is far from the case. The brassiere does away with the broken line between the top of the corset and the bust. She can no more dispense with the brassiere than she can do without due care and precision in the choosing of her corset. We have all seen the slender woman whose corset showed in places where it should not or so loosely fitted that it never stays where it should.

Every clever dresser will admit that one of the prime requisites of a stylish woman is an excellently fitted corset—a corset that is correct in size, that is properly laced, and this lacing, by the way, should be done every day, and a corset that is furthermore not put on in a hurry. Any woman whose figure is properly corseted is always considered, and rightly so, as stylish. This fact makes the purchasing of a corset an important matter and the purchasing of a good corset an essential in good dressing.

Furthermore, this season there is a big demand for washable corsets. Coutil is a good material for this variety and corsets of this material with high bust, a more snugly fitted waistline, and a fine flexible boning may be had for general summer wear.



ETIQUETTE
by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the page only.

THE question of wearing mourning is emerging more and more from the formal and conventional and becoming a matter of individual expression. Some people do not approve of expressing grief in this way. Others cling to the custom because of the shelter black attire affords—shelter from tactless questions and intrusive hilarity. Also, in many minds there lingers the idea that to wear mourning shows respect to the dead.

For those who like an outward expression of inward feelings, to whom also it is a comfort to conform to well established custom, mourning is a great satisfaction. The rules as to the kind of black to wear for different bereavements and the length of time are also far from being fixed or universal.

One fairly well established rule is that a widow should wear black for two years, lightening somewhat her mourning in the second year. In the third year she may wear soft grays, shades of purple and violet, and white. The old fashioned heavy crêpe veil is almost entirely discarded. Crêpe is introduced merely as a trimming during the first year of mourning.

For a parent or a child one is not supposed to wear black quite so long. For a sister or brother a year of mourning is supposed to suffice as an expression of affliction. But, as I said in the beginning, this all depends on the individual. The tendency nowadays is to diminish both the trappings of woe and the time of wearing them—a wise tendency.

MRS. J. B.—The hostess can quite suitably take a hand in playing cards if she has so arranged it that all her guests are seated and playing. The only possible objection to it would be in case she had to look after the players and scores of the various tables, with a view to awarding a prize. In that case it might interfere with the pleasure of those playing with her when she had to leave them to supervise other groups of card players.

H. K. F.—A hat is not quite suitable for an evening church wedding—especially if the ceremony is followed by a wedding reception at some house. If, however, the wedding consists merely in the church ceremony, with no social feature afterwards, a hat is permissible. A wedding gift may properly be sent at any time after the invitations to the wedding are out. Merely inclose your card without writing anything on it. The ushers offer their arms to every woman whom they escort to a seat. It is not customary to leave your visiting cards at a wedding reception. As to the proper congratulations and remarks to be made to a bride and groom, think what you would like to hear under the same circumstances. Say, how pretty the wedding was, how attractive the church looked, how lovely the bride appeared, how charming the house seems, if you really thought these pleasant things. Otherwise confine your remarks to such phrases as, "We all hope that you will be very happy," etc. Above all things be natural, sincere, and kindly and you cannot go wrong in anything you say. It is more polite to say good-by to the host and hostess and to express your appreciation of the event, but if there is a great crowd of guests, it is quite allowable to slip away without saying good-by. A party call within a week or so after a wedding reception is the height of courtesy.

MRS. R.: You are quite right to object to your husband's making a practice of spitting in the streets when walking with you. It is a disgusting and insanitary habit. Ask him if he would like you to spit in the same way—but ask him gently and in a friendly spirit.

* *

PAUL R.: Perhaps the woman you were escorting was a little abrupt in asking you not to help her in crossing the street, but many a woman objects to the custom of having her escort take hold of her elbow to pilot her across the street. It is an ineffectual bit of kindness.

CHILDREN HATE PILLS, CALOMEL AND CASTOR OIL

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of CHILDREN

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

John had always been greatly impressed with the pathos in the fairy story of "The Babes in the Woods." While on an automobile trip with his parents through northern Wisconsin last summer they drove for miles and miles on narrow roads leading through those dense and beautiful forests. John's mother said to him, "When we return home, dear, you will have to tell grandma about this wonderful ride through the woods." John looked at her big eyed and answered slowly and soberly, "O, no, mother, dear; it's too sad." E. W.

Dorothy called upon her father at the office the other day, and while there one of the clerks said to her father, "There is a gentleman wishing to see you." He replied, "Tell him to leave his card and I will call him up." Dorothy and her playmate had a little spat and she told him she would never talk to him again. He came into the house a short time after, and her mother called her, saying, "Dorothy, Bobbie is here." She called back, "Tell him to leave his ticket and I will call him up." MRS. Gladys was attending a party to which grown people and children alike had been invited. She was sitting in a great chair with a serious, bored look on her face, when a young woman noticed her and going to her said sweetly:

"Why are you so quiet?"

No answer.

"Has the cat run away with your tongue, little one?"

Gladys regarded her for a minute and then, in a voice filled with childish disgust, she said, "I came here for t' eat, not for t' talk." G. V. S.

A little 3 year old girl spent a day with her grandma. When bedtime came and her parents had not yet come after her, grandma said, "Well, Gracie, you will not be lonesome if mamma and papa don't come for you tonight?" Gracie shook her hands, saying, "O, grandma, don't mention their names. It will make me cry." L. McD.

One afternoon when returning from work with my sister I met a little friend. She inquired if the woman with me was my mother. I told her no, that she was my sister. "My," she exclaimed, "she doesn't look a bit like you. I'd never think she was your sister. She looks just like your neighbor." H. L.

The 5 year old son of a friend of mine was enjoying considerable popularity among a number of women who had gathered at his mother's home for the afternoon. Looking up at one charming brunette, he said: "You have such beautiful eyes, all black like coal and white like—like un'erwear," he finished in glee at having completed so apt a simile.

My little niece came to visit us one day and told me she had a new dress. I said: "What kind is it, Maud?" She thought for a moment, then said, "Well, I cannot tell you exactly what kind it is, but it is dark complected."

The regular teacher was called away hurriedly and so had no time to make out a schedule. The substitute searched vainly for one, but finally came to the conclusion that the first bright looking little boy to enter should be asked the first thing on the morning program.

A small lad with large eyes soon made his appearance. The teacher put on her most inviting smile and asked, "Bobby, what do you have first thing in the morning?"

"My name ain't Bobby, but we has pancakes."

Boomed Like Howitzers.

It happened in a street car. A bundle containing electric light bulbs slipped from my overcrowded arms. It fell to the floor with a bang that rivaled the fiercest howitzer. An extremely clever fellow passenger made a remark about preserving neutrality. All the people in the world seemed to be laughing at once. It was some eight or nine blocks from my destination, but there are times when walking is attractive. MISS W. M. M.

No Wonder They Laughed!

I had spent the evening with my girl friend. Returning on a crowded car I happened to stand next to two young ladies of my acquaintance and removed my hat. The ladies gave one look and burst out laughing. And they were perfectly justified, for when, with all eyes upon me, I passed my hand over my hair I found there three hair pins which my lover had playfully put there to make my hair curl. B. N.

Bit the Baby.

One Sunday morning I got into a street car and sat down next to a gentleman holding a lovely baby. I talked to the little fellow and he cooed back to me. He reached for my face and while I was talking he stuck his finger right in my mouth. Just then the car hit a curve and my teeth came down hard on the tiny finger. Thereupon arose a wail that would rouse the dead. The car was crowded and everybody saw the joke excepting the proud daddy, who acted as if I had bitten his young hopeful on purpose. MIRIAM.

Poured the Gravy.

I was called on to help serve for an elaborate wedding supper. Everything went lovely, when some one asked me a question, and, forgetting what I was doing, I discovered to my horror that I was pouring the hot gravy down the bridegroom's neck and spoiling the appearance of his wedding suit. The Tribune's Secret Society for Mothers.

Today "The Tribune" organizes a secret society of mothers. And every mother-reader of "The Tribune" is invited to membership in this organization. The secret society of mothers is born of our theory that an exchange of practical and tried experiences of many mothers necessarily must be more helpful in the training and welfare of children than the advice of one person of more or less limited practical experience.

So we are going to let you mothers conduct a department for child welfare yourselves. And it shall be called the "Society of Mothers." You become a member by either contributing to the department the experiences that you have found most profitable in the upbringing of your own children, or by reading the suggestions contributed by others and profiting thereby. The experiences sent in will be judged as to value and practicability by two experts and for every letter published in "The Tribune" $1 will be paid.

So if you have had a valuable experience in the matter of child discipline, child diet, the physical or mental development of your child, in the correction of bad habits, both mental and physical, in the care of the baby's skin, hair, teeth, or any other part of the child's anatomy, nursery furnishings, baby's bath, teething difficulties, effective emergency remedies, children's clothing, games and friendships, manners and punishments, write them in to Mothers' society, care of "The Chicago Tribune."

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeing young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address, Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

What Booze Did to Him.

I was quite friendly with the family of the man who is now my husband, but had only known him for about two weeks when I was invited to the wedding of one of his brothers. During the evening of the wedding he consumed quite a lot of champagne, and after I had danced with him he ushered me over to his mother, sisters, and some of his friends and said,

"Allow me to present the future Mrs. B." Of course this was quite a shock to me, but, thinking to humor him, I said nothing. The next morning he called me up and I jokingly said, "I could make you marry me after what you said last night." He answered, 'Let's," and we did. He advocates drinking for bashful men now.

Tampering with the Mails.

I had been boarding for more than a year at the home of a woman who was an excellent housekeeper and we were really good friends. When once I had to leave the city for ten days I requested that my mail be kept until my return. I was somewhat surprised when I saw on three of the letters the word "Mrs." preceding my name in a writing different from the proper address, and when I asked how it had been placed there the landlady said: "I just wanted to see how it would look." And now that's the way her mail is addressed.

His Courage Would Ooze Away.

I know a woman who proposed to her husband, and she confided the fact to me some time ago. He was a bashful young man, he kept company with no one else, and always was attentive to her. Three years passed by, and still he did not propose, although she knew that he loved her. She also returned the affection. One evening he came to call on her, and she resolved to settle the matter one way or another. She sat down beside him on the couch and said, "John, do you want to marry me, or don't you?" "I do," he cried, "but could never bolster up courage enough to ask you." He clasped her in his arms and said, "Bless you for helping me. I have been on the verge of proposing many times, but my courage would ooze away every time I thought of it."

Juggled While He Talked.

I once worked for a man who could not dictate an intelligent letter unless he juggled things while he talked. He would keep a pencil, eraser, pad of paper, and tightly corked ink bottle spinning in the air until his correspondence was answered. Every day I expected the cork to come out of that bottle, but it never did.

He Loved the Suds.

He was the principal of a school in which I taught. He received a good salary and was generous with his whole family, but he insisted upon doing the family washing every week, because he loved to wash. He arose every Monday morning at 5 o'clock, rain or shine, and always had the clothes on the line, the floor cleaned, and the tubs put away before he appeared at the school. When he did arrive he was always in high glee, insisting to every one whom he met that the "suds looked good to him."

* *

No Place for a Man Anyway.

The queerest boss I ever worked for was an old maid living in the country. I did the housework while she cultivated four acres and built two houses complete. She wore overalls to do this and made "old time" fireplaces of clay and sticks and would slide down through the hole when there was a man in sight.

She Sampled the Dope.

The queerest boss I ever worked for was excessively fat and was constantly trying new anti-fat medicines. Whenever he found a new one, he insisted upon my tasting it. Now, since I was as thin as he was fat, this tasting proved to be disastrous to my carefully cherished pounds, and I sought another position.

One of the Wonders of the World

It is a market place beside which famous and historic marks become petty and insignificant.

Each day in the year men and women throughout the nation use it to proclaim to the world their "wants." Each day other men and women read and heed these appeals, and the gulf between the Lake Shore drive and Blue Island avenue, the gulf between Oregon and Florida, is bridged by agate type. The mechanic buys the used auto of the millionaire. The stranger finds a comfortable home in the great city. The factory superintendent gets a better position. The Chicago grocer and the Iowa farmer trade properties.

Let your imagination play on the astounding volume of human hopes and desires represented in the "want ad" columns of today's Tribune.

The Sunday Tribune often contains more than 175 columns of classified ads. At 300 lines to the column this is 52,500 lines. At six words to the line it is 315,000 words. Allowing 20% off for leads and display type, there are left 250,000 words, or the equivalent of about five average novels.

But in all this mass there is none of the extravagant wastage of words so common in the novel. Each word has been weighed and selected, for it must be paid for, and it must inspire some reader to definite action.

Turn to the classified ad section right now and begin to study it. You will be astonished to find it so interesting.

And reading it has made many people rich.

Did You Ever Know a Poor Girl Who Married a Rich Man?

Give Us a Tip and Get $25

Here is an easy way for you to earn $25. You don't have to do any work—all you have to do is to tell us something, which will take only two minutes of your time. This is it:

Since the beginning of man and woman, the most popular theme of young and old is the romance of the rich youth and the lowly maid. Ever have the pages of history glowed with the old, old story. Everybody likes it. It has been the Pegasus of payable poets, the inspiration of solvent novelists, the fundamental, sure fire, bullet proof, box office success of dramatists and composers.

Poetry and drama and music are but the reflection of life itself. So it is natural to believe that what poets and authors and musicians write and sing of, happens right along in every day life. Romance is here among us—romance covered up by the rush of events.

For this reason it will pay $25 for every tip on every story of this kind that it can print.

Do you know a Cinderella and a Prince Charming?

If so, write and give us their names and addresses, and we'll do the rest.

You don't have to write the story—we'll do that! All you have to do is to give us the tip.

Have you known among your friends a romantic love affair such as is typified in these great stage successes: "Peg o' My Heart," "Bought and Paid For," "Sweethearts," "Daddy Longlegs," "Top o' the Morning," "Help Wanted"—where the beautiful, but moneyless, girl weds the wealthy, but otherwise irresistible youth?

If you know of such a case write and tell us about it. If we print the story we will pay you

$25 FOR THE TIP

Do you know of a romance similar to that of Rose Pastor, the tobacco factory girl who wed the millionaire philanthropist, J. G. Phelps-Stokes, and lived happy ever after?

If you do, write and tell us about it. If we print the story you will get

$25 FOR THE TIP

Two poor American girls, Alice and Grace Carr, went to England. Alice married the Hon. Cecil Bingham; Grace wed Baron Newborough.

These are only a few of the modern Cinderellas. They are all around us all the time.

Do you know of one?

If you do, write and tell us about it. If we print the story you will get

$25 FOR THE TIP

"My Adventures as a Spy"

By BADEN-POWELL
Founder of the Boy Scouts

Begins in

Today's Sunday Tribune

This Is the Greatest Spy Story Ever Written

On the "Young Americans" page in the Color Section of TODAY'S SUNDAY TRIBUNE there appears the first installment of "My Adventures as a Spy." This narrative is the personal experiences of Sir Robert Stephenson Smyth Baden-Powell, Kt., K. C. B., C. B., C. V. O., K. C. V. O., LL. D., F. R. G. S. Sir Robert, founder of the Boy Scouts, has been in the soldier business for forty years. He has taken a leading part in Great Britain's colonial wars. Battle has been his bride, strife his life. In times of war he has been at the front—in both times of war and times of peace he has served as "military agent" or "investigator"—diplomatic terms for spy.

This is the first time he has ever told about his career as a spy. It's thrill and adventure, from beginning to end!

"It has been difficult to write in peace time on the delicate subject of spies and spying, but now that the war is in progress and the methods of those much abused gentry have been disclosed there is no harm in going more fully into the question and relating some of my own personal experiences.

"Spies are like ghosts—people seem to have had a general feeling that there might be such things, but they did not at the same time believe in them, because they never saw them and seldom met any one who had had first hand experience of them. But as regards the spies, I can speak with personal knowledge in saying that they do exist, and in large numbers, not only in England, but in every part of Europe.

"As in the case of ghosts, any phenomenon which people don't understand, from a sudden crash on a quiet day to a midnight creak of a cupboard, has an effect of alarm upon nervous minds. So also a spy is spoken of with undue alarm and abhorrence because he is somewhat of a bogy.

"As a first step it is well to disabuse one's mind of the idea that every spy is necessarily the base and despicable fellow he is generally held to be. He is often both clever and brave."

Thus begins the story of one of the greatest spies the world has known—the story of a life of danger and daring that began in 1876 and ran through campaigns in India, Afghanistan, South Africa—a military career of advancement from adjutant, by successive stages, on up to lieutenant general—every upward milestone marked by peril and romance!

It is the frankest and most revealing exposition of the spying profession ever set forth, and it is set forth by a man who has gone through it all, and knows it all.

You MUST READ IT.

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—13, 14, 15, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

1112—Pretty, soft materials, made full and shirred, make a feature of the little girls' dresses as they do of their elders'. Here is one that is exceedingly charming for garden fetes, summer parties, and for all occasions of a similar sort. It is made from rose colored silk voile, with black velvet outlining the neck edge to give just a bit of contrast and character. The little rosebuds are of chiffon. Crepe de chine makes a pretty dress and a great many of the finer cotton materials are in every way suitable. There is a body lining that holds all the fullness and the shirrings perfectly in place, and beneath a silk material this lining preferably would be of silk or cotton mousseline, or of thin net, or some similar material, or the fabric known as lining chiffon. The skirt is a straight one, the upper edge turning under to form its own heading, and the lining is extended under the shirrings. The pattern 1112 is cut in sizes for girls from 8 to 14 years of age.

1113 and 1114—The bolero costume is one of the most fashionable of the season as well as one of the most attractive. The gown shown here is an attractive one that can be utilised for many occasions throughout the summer. It is made with an accordion plaited skirt of crepe de chine, scalloped and bound with charmeuse satin and with bolero and girdle of the satin, edged with little plaitings of the silk. There is a sleeveless blouse to which the flaring collar is attached, and this underblouse is made of organdie, which is the latest and most fashionable material for such use. The collar consists of only one thickness of the material, with picot edge, and the transparent effect is exceedingly smart. White voile or white crepe, either with or without a border, would be charming worn with an Eton of bright colored taffeta, for picturesque little coats of the sort are the smartest of all things in combination with white costumes. The pattern of the Eton with underblouse, 1113, is cut in sizes from 34 to 40 inch bust measure, and that of the skirt, No. 1114, consists of a foundation, and the lower flounce is joined to its lower edge, while the upper flounce is arranged over it. The pattern 1114 is cut in sizes from 24 to 30 inch waist measure.

"BUY your pattern first." This should be an unswervable slogan for the woman who would be a successful user of patterns. This is especially true these days, when the making of a dress or a coat or a waist in the latest style is more or less a matter of thought and precision. The pattern must be bought first in order that the correct materials and colors for the style may be secured.

Going about anything in life haphazardly doesn't pay, and least of all in the world of clothes, where every one should and does want to look the best she possibly can. A woman picks up at a bargain some material which looks pretty and which is pretty, too. But she gets it before she knows just what she wants. Then she gets her pattern, and her troubles begin. She finds that her goods is too narrow or she hasn't quite enough. Or perhaps she bought a pattern with a gored skirt and discovers that her material is altogether too sheer to be gored, or, vice versa, too wiry to be gathered. Or she may have a plaid on her hands and decide that stripes would look much better from the viewpoint of the pattern cut.

I knew a woman once who bought a big supply of 10 cent records because they were so cheap. She had no machine to play them on, but they were a bargain and she went without some things she really needed to purchase them. A woman who shops promiscuously at bargain sales always reminds me of her. Haphazard shopping of this sort isn't profitable. Buy your pattern first and then decide just what kind of material you want, how much you want, and what color you want. Then after that it's perfectly sensible to go bargain hunting in all possible places.

Clotilde, designing for many of the most prominent women in the country, is in a position to know first hand the newest and best in styles and in materials. She strikes the newest notes and yet she consistently avoids the bizarre and the ultra extreme. For 10 cents each she gives her original and smart designs, with perfect fit and line assured.

Today she offers some most desirable designs for mid-summer wear. One is a fascinating little Eton jacket of brightly colored taffeta worn conjunctively with a separate skirt of soft white material. This combination is essentially 1915 and full of charm. There is nothing smarter than a chic coatee of taffeta in some pretty shade of silk. These coatees take different forms, but rarely do they extend below the waist line, and the coatee to be had in pattern form is one of the prettiest and the most practical of its many manifestations.

The separate skirt to be worn with it is a double tiered model and shows the evolution of the tunic. Originally there was the tunic moderately full and over a narrow underskirt. When the underskirt grew full the tunic lost its identity and became known as the overskirt. And while many women are protesting against the too full skirt, they cannot help but be thankful that they are at last emancipated from the "hobble" skirt. In the light weight goods especially the moderately full skirt is quite as attractive as it is comfortable, and its general popularity is a spontaneous thing and by no means forced.

The dress for the young girl shown in the same illustration is marked by all the frills and flare of mid-summer 1915 styles. Considerable contrast between the fashions this summer and last! But this season's styles are welcome and the young girl can indulge to the full her love of delightful novelties.

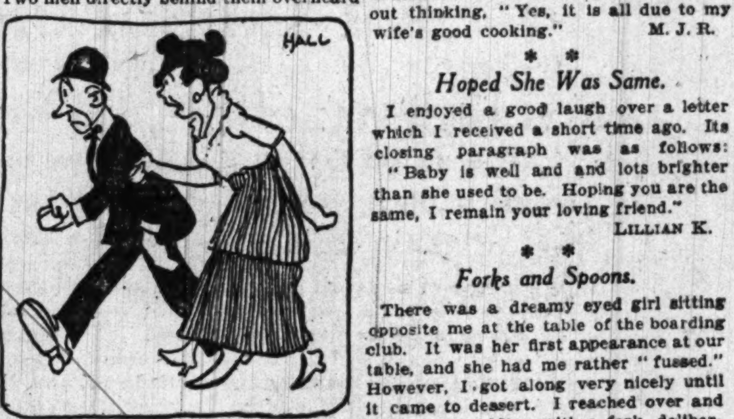
For these summer frocks the materials are as delightful as the fashions. There are organdies and crêpes, voiles, batistes, and printed muslins in gay and festive colors.

The Most Tactless Remark I Ever Made.

What was the most tactless remark you never forgot? Maybe you made it yourself. Maybe you heard somebody else make it. Maybe it "got you in wrong," or maybe it got some one else in the same predicament. Everybody either makes or hears tactless remarks made. What was yours? Tell us about it. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper only, make your anecdote short, and address it to the Tactless Remarks Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts will be returned.

They Surely Were Tactless.

Two women were strolling along the lake front one sultry afternoon. Said one to the other: "Mighty hot here today." Two men directly behind them overheard her and immediately, in a most brazen manner linked arms with the ladies, one chap remarking: "Sure is; let's go where it's cooler."



They did—to the "cooler."

These were policewomen. MAY.

Would Try It on Dog.

While discussing a menu which I intended serving some expected guests, a neighbor of mine suggested an elaborate dish, going into details as to its construction. Without a thought as to whether she would understand the allusion, I said: "O, I will have to try that on the dog first." I meant by this tactless remark, of course, that I would experiment with the family first, but she was deeply offended, thinking I meant it would be fit only for a dog to eat. ELEANOR C.

Due to Wife's Cooking.

My most tactless remark was made recently while calling on the lady with whom I had boarded for two years just previous to my marriage nine months ago. She noticed that I was looking much better and somewhat heavier and remarked about it. My reply came, without thinking, "Yes, it is all due to my wife's good cooking." M. J. R.

Hoped She Was Same.

I enjoyed a good laugh over a letter which I received a short time ago. Its closing paragraph was as follows: "Baby is well and and lots brighter than she used to be. Hoping you are the same, I remain your loving friend." LILLIAN K.

Forks and Spoons.

There was a dreamy eyed girl sitting opposite me at the table of the boarding club. It was her first appearance at our table, and she had me rather "fussed." However, I got along very nicely until it came to dessert. I reached over and tasted my pudding with a fork, deliberating on whether to eat it or not, when I realized that using my fork thus might be a breach of etiquette, and I decided to show her that I knew better, so I said, loud enough for every one to hear, "Well, I guess the proper way to eat dessert is with a spoon and not a fork," and I immediately picked up my spoon. Raising my eyes, I saw her looking at me in a queer manner, and then I saw that she, too, had been eating with a fork. I quit the club that night. EARL J.

Quantity Not Quality.

We were invited out to dinner and in some manner we got to speaking about the various cuts of meat. I remarked that whenever George and Harry (my brothers) came over to dinner we filled them up on pork roast because there could always be quantity, even though there was not quality to a pork roast. My hostess turned all colors of the rainbow and I could not imagine why, until in walked the maid with a pork roast on the platter. I could have fallen through the floor. MISS D. T.

Hoped to Return Compliment.

I was employed in the office of the county trustee. One day a polite old Irishman came into the office, and, after explaining that he wasn't able to work, had no one to care for him, etc., I gave him a permit to the county infirmary. It pleased the old man very much to be thus given a home, and as he left he said: "Young lady, I thank you very much for this permit and sincerely hope I may some day be able to return the compliment." I am hoping the pleasure may never be his. N. S.

Said I: "This glass is very narrow at the top."

Said he: "The glass is not so narrow; it's the bump on your nose that interferes."

Styles for the Well Dressed Man.

BEFORE going far into the subject of what the well dressed man is wearing this season it might be well to remark that the present masculine styles show no radical changes from those of other years. Men's fashions rarely do.

Every little while one hears from various supposedly authoritative sources that the fashionable man is going in for loud and startling clothes. One's favorite tailor even may back up this statement, and to prove it show an order or two from some prominent citizen which seems to carry out the point in question.

This is true especially in the case of the soft shirt, which is to be much worn this summer. Patterns are to be conservative. Pronounced and striking effects in stripes and checks are not in the running and are in bad taste. Folded cuffs which fit closer than formerly are popular, and as a rule the whole shirt fits more snugly. Soft collars are to be as popular as ever with the approach of warm weather. One of the newest of these soft collar styles is an extremely narrow collar with square corners.

The four in hand cravat in the heavy silks, richly colored, is good this season. There is a new one in French crêpe, which has applied narrow stripes in bright colors and is decidedly good looking.

For wear with the dinner coat during summer time white silk shirts with plaited fronts and starched linen folded cuffs. White waistcoats are also good with the dinner coat, but the tie must be black. One of the new ties for dinner wear is of black satin with a floral design, more or less shadowy, worked in the design at each end.

The clothes for country as well as for motoring are sufficient if one is provided with two or three lightweight suits, perhaps an extra Norfolk, a dress suit, and plenty of white flannel trousers. Negligee shirts and flannel waistcoats and white buckskin shoes must be included, of course. One should avoid such articles as blazers, or shoes with fancy tops, or striped collars of the softer materials. Neither are silk gloves worn by the best dressed men. All these articles are held out to trap the unwary. Indeed, excluding white trousers, it is safe to say that men may wear the same things for summer as they wear in winter. They should naturally be lighter weight, and perhaps more cheerful in color, but that is all.

New Way Dissolves Superfluous Hair!

A marvelous improvement over every old method of removing superfluous hairs is coming into wide use by thousands of women. For the first time it is now possible to remove superfluous hairs in a few moments, without leaving any trace, mark, tint, redness or soreness whatever, or any evidence that a hair-remover has been used. This new formula is as harmless as water to the most delicate skin, has no objectionable odor and is easier to use than any previous method. Get from your drug store a bottle of the new Sulfo Solution. It is in the form of a golden, creamy liquid, poured easily from a bottle. Apply a little on the hairs anywhere, and the hairs no matter how thick, dissolve away instantly. It leaves the skin beautiful, soft and white. Heretofore there has never been a hair-remover which would not irritate, redden or injure even a tough skin, but such a result as this is absolutely impossible with this formula. Sulfo Solution is sold at all drug stores at $1.00 a large bottle, or sent direct by the manufacturers, Cooper Pharmacal Co., Thompson Bldg. Chicago.—Advertisement.

The pinnacle has been attained! Tomorrow the leading theatres of Chicago and hundreds of other cities throughout the United States, will present to their patrons the first chapter—in three acts—of "The Diamond From the Sky," with charming Lottie Pickford as the heroine—the greatest photoplay-story ever produced.

Next Sunday The Chicago Sunday Tribune will present to its readers the story of this master stroke of motion picture art. See each chapter of "The Diamond From the Sky" at your theatre. Read each chapter in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. $10.000.00 will be paid to the man, woman or child sending in the best suggestion in 1000 words or less for a sequel to this photoplay.

This all-surpassing picturized novel, produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company, and distributed by North American Film Corporation, offers every one an opportunity to earn the $10,000.00 prize. Only a simple suggestion is necessary.

$10,000 for the Story

"The Diamond From the Sky" is from the pen of a person inspired. It is one of those stories that a genius writes once in a lifetime. Ten thousand dollars was awarded the author of "The Diamond From the Sky." In The Chicago Tribune's prize contest 19,846 scenarios were submitted. "The Diamond From the Sky" was selected as the most suitable, in competition with the efforts of some of the best and most widely known present day writers. See every chapter at your theatre. Read every chapter in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. You'll realize, then, why "The Diamond From the Sky" was awarded the $10,000.00 prize.

$10,000 for a Suggestion

Here is another great prize opportunity. Ten thousand dollars is offered for the most suitable suggestion for a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky." No elaborate scenario is wanted—merely a suggestion. This prize offer is open to anyone and everyone. There are absolutely no strings attached to it. The money will be paid to the person whomever he or she may be, whose suggestion is deemed most acceptable. There is no entrance fee or fee of any sort connected with this contest Simply see and read each chapter as it is shown in leading theaters and published in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. Then send in your suggestion. Yours may be awarded the prize. You have an equal chance with everybody. Remember—the suggestion for the sequel must not be over 1,000 words.

An Absorbing Story

As a literary effort, "The Diamond From the Sky" stands supreme among continued stories. No magazine or periodical ever published its equal for real adventure and real, red-blood romance. This epoch-making picturized novel teems with emotional appeal. A monster meteor falls; the story is made possible. The swarthy male babe of a gypsy king is falsely attested heir to a great estate; the wheels of this great drama of love and of hate, of mystery, of intrigue, are set in motion. The mills grind fast. Every act of every chapter is a succession of thrills—logical thrills—that set the blood a-tingling and make hearts beat hard and fast. "The Diamond From the Sky" is brimful of situations that surprise, and yet are logical; of action that is entirely unexpected, and yet most natural. That's why, from the very first flash on the theatre screens tomorrow, until the final chapter has been shown and published, "The Diamond From the Sky" will be the most talked about motion picture production that the world has ever known.

See the Photoplay Beginning Tomorrow at Leading Theatres

Make it a point to see every chapter and to read every chapter of "The Diamond From the Sky." Don't overlook the great $10,000.00 prize. Drive home this point—"The Diamond From the Sky" is a picturized novel of romance—a production of the highest class—and not an episodal hodge-podge. It will be presented, beginning tomorrow, in leading theatres. You owe it to yourself to see this remarkable continued photoplay—to see dainty Lottie Pickford and dashing Irving Cummings as heroine and hero. These wonderful motion pictures have been produced by the American Film Manufacturing Company at Santa Barbara, California. Read each chapter closely as it is published in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. Go see the motion pictures tomorrow. Go early, for the theatres will be filled to overflowing. You will find "The Diamond From the Sky" the most worth-while photoplay you've ever seen. And then, there's the opportunity to earn the $10,000.00 prize!

The Love Letters of a Lonely Girl

This is the seventh of a series of "Love Letters of a Lonely Girl" which will appear every Sunday in "The Sunday Tribune."

DEAR, Dear You. When I awoke the next morning after my last letter to You the sunshine through my east window lay a long shaft of pure gold across the length of the floor, edging my bed-cot. It was Sunday! Outside the birds were chirping and twittering a chorus of joy.

Slipping into my prettiest pink negligee, I ran to Bonnie Dandy's basket and thrust his Teddy bear into his face; he sprang to the play I offered with a bark of delight. Teddy bear in his mouth, he followed me as barefoot I danced about the room. I took the big pitcher of roses and built a trellis effect in the east window. That made a big shadow effect of roses on the wide shaft of sunlight that lay on the floor, you see. And dear, dear You, please don't laugh when I tell you what I did next. I played!

Yes, I played house, just as I used to do on our veranda as a child. Slipping on an old, short school dress, I tied up my hair with a big pink bow. Then I unearthed my long unseen dolls from the trunk and—my mother's photograph.

Just then the maid knocked with my coffee and toast. She almost dropped the tray when she saw the "playhouse" effect. I'm sure she thought me quite daft when I told her to put the tray on the floor in front of me. Quite pityingly she said, "Sure, now, miss, ain't ye got nothin' better to do than that? Ye air a young lady now and ought to be thinkin' of yer beaux or a husband for yerself, with a home and bairns, too."

A little sadly I put away the dolls and my mother's picture. Katy was right. Childhood was gone; it could not be lured back with its symbols or the precious make believe way. I must turn my face womanward and to the future. And in my present environment and conditions, for me, what was there to hope or build? A competence for the present and, by good luck, success enough to achieve a comfortable old maid-dom? Or the acceptance of some man out of the flotsam and jetsam of failures drifting about me here, for shelter, home, and the privilege of writing "Mrs." before my name? I shivered—the thoughts were unpleasant.

Between church and a walk I decided for the latter, feeling it would do me the more good in this moment.

Once in the street, I looked parkward and lakeward, trying to decide the route for my jaunt. Dandy, doglike, took the opposite direction. Vaguely I decided to follow wherever he chanced to roam this time.

Out of Dearborn, across noisy Clark, and up the wide, inviting La Salle, with its many churches, on we wandered. Then west to Wells. And the beauty of the morning became shadowed with the misery of the human. The street was filled with dirty, ragged children; slatternly women gossiped before or peered out of the tumbling down houses, while sodden men lumbered heavily by.

But Dandy—the imp—had disappeared! I called and called; finally he poked his nose out of a doorway. It was a mission. I had heard of missions, but never had seen one. As I went to pick up Dandy the doorman smiled at me and said, "Wouldn't you like to come into our service?" And he was so earnestly desirous that I should that I went in and sat down immediately by the door.

A man was speaking, and his constantly reiterated theme was, "Men, come to God." There was no preaching effect; just talking as one man to another on a matter of mutual interest. As I looked over that audience I understood his mode of address to them. I felt the meaning and power of that word "men" on those 200 shipwrecked souls. It was the call to their obscured manhood. An appeal for them to awaken to the fact that they had yet a friend and comrade in another—man!

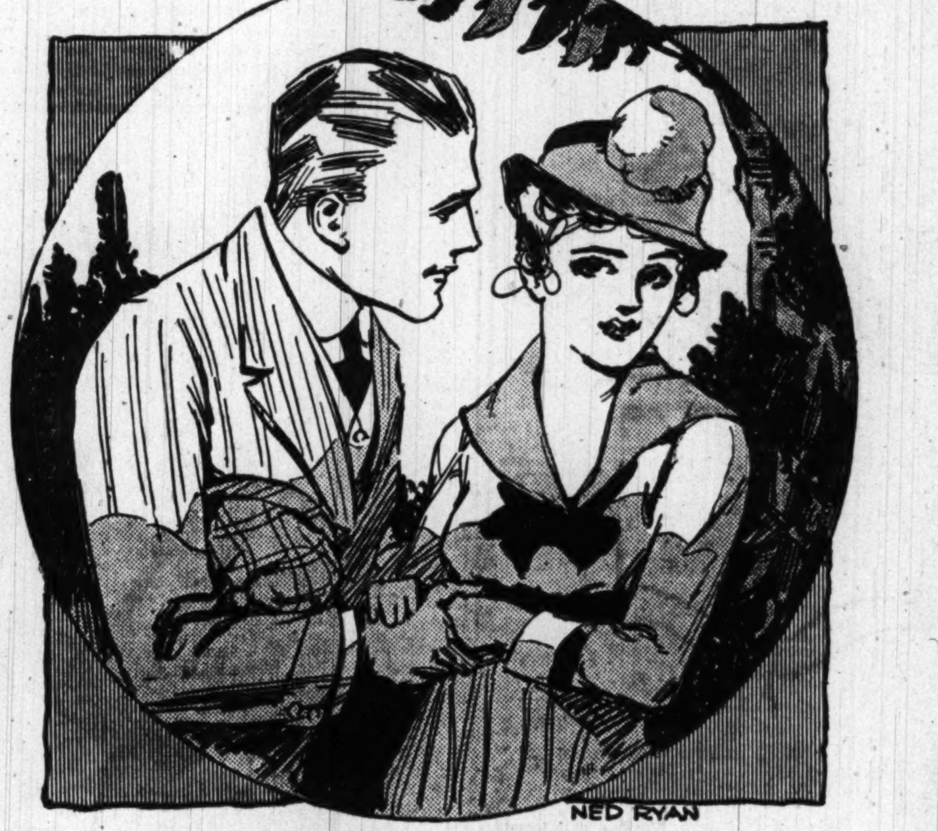
Dropped shoulders raised; grimy, sullen faces lifted; backs bent in sleep under rags straightened; and a heavy, hopeless sort of attention began. The speaker testified that he, too, was once as they were now—down and out, a criminal out of prison, out of hope, and sunk in despair. But there had been a way out for him, even as there now was for them, through Christ and his servant, the mission.

A hymn was sung. And would you believe, dear You, that those hungry, ragged, unkempt, desolate, hopeless, or despairing men sang that hymn with a power to move one far beyond the most perfectly rendered "Pilgrims' Chorus"?

And then the prayer—just a committing of these unfortunate children to their Maker. And again the speaker. "Men," he said, "I'm sorry—I hate to tell you, but this is our last breakfast here this year. People have been kind through the lean winter—but there are no more funds now for these breakfasts—but God will supply your needs if you are faithful. May he bless you."

Then a huge clothes basket of tin cups was brought in and laid in groups at the end of the seats, to be picked up and passed on. Two men brought in a huge pot of coffee and a tray of unbuttered bread in chunks, which were distributed quietly. It was the first time in my life I had ever looked on a ravenous human being. And there before me were 200 of them grabbing with trembling hands to devour the bare crusts and gulp the meager hot coffee as if it were a feast. Truly "crumbs from the rich man's table" of life! Men—men, too; men whom I had always thought of and known only as protectors and providers in life, reduced to this! My heart broke into a flood of silent tears and prayers for them and for all such the world over. My own sorrows and loneliness forgotten completely, I slipped my mite into the hand of the doorman and went out in sorrow of my helplessness to do more.

Standing outside was a big automobile which somehow looked familiar to me. A man was lifting bundles and baskets from the tonneau, and as he turned and saw me they were dropped instantly to the sidewalk. It was Malcomb Dorr!



NED RYAN

"Don't you know this is no place for a girl like you to be wandering about in."

"Don't you know that this is no place for a girl like you to be wandering about in?" he began sternly. Do you know what sort of place and people you are up against over here? How in the world were you ever allowed to come over here alone anyway?" He swept into the front seat and started the machine. "I'm going to take you directly home and tell your folks so, too," he scolded.

"Please—I have no people. And I just walked and walked until I happened over here—I didn't know I ought not—I don't know Chicago, you see—I've been here only a little while.

He stopped the machine and whirled about. "What do you mean when you say you have no people and that you don't know Chicago?" he demanded. I told him—told him that I had no parents now and that I had come to Chicago but six weeks before; that to escape the loneliness of the boarding house and the boredom of its people I took long walks every day. That I liked unexpected or unusual places and people, for they helped me to forget.

After a moment he said: "Well, anyway, I am going to take you to my sister right now; she liked you the day we ran over the pup and she'll be glad to see you again—she's a wise kiddie and she can tell you some things I can't"—and he turned to the wheel.

"No—no, you must listen to me, please. I don't want to go to your sister. You may bring her to me if you wish—I would love to see her again—but you must not take me there—first; don't you understand——?"

"Right you are," he beamed down on me comprehendingly. "If you will promise to be ready in half an hour to go for a drive with us I will drop you down at your place and go and bring her over." I nodded assent, glad to have gained the point of my pride.

I fairly flew up the stairs of the boarding house and into a prettier dress. Snatching up an old Spanish lace scarf for a veil, I was quite ready to run downstairs to answer the call of their siren horn. I think all the six pairs of eyes in the boarding house peered out of windows or from behind curtains as we started. But I didn't care. They could query or guess or judge as they pleased out of their narrow, stagnant minds and lives. I felt like Pippa with her one precious day. They should not mar my hour of joy, companioned with youth and the sunshine.

"O," cried Janet Dorr, pulling me down beside her, "but I am glad to see you; I've thought of you so much, and Bonnie Dandy, too," catching him up to the white frilliness about her neck; "he's a darling—and so are you," she added, squeezing my hand. My heart went up and up, dear You, under the bubbling enthusiasm of her words. I felt as if at last the burden of my loneliness, if not removed, was shared. And words and laughter rose on my lightened spirits as we bowled along, just talking the foolishness that all girls love and understand.

Malcomb Dorr said little. But he smiled now and then when we laughed aloud, and when the traffic permitted he would turn and ask me if I had seen this or that place of Chicago—to all of which I could only say no.

"Then you shall see some of the beautiful places right now," declared Janet. Leaning forward, she said: "Brother, let's make a tour of the parks—the whole tour—and then go on up north to the Green Farm for dinner. Wilt thou?" she begged playfully.

"What you say goes, Sis—if Miss Beth has no other engagement," he replied—I thought with a twinkle in his eyes this time. He knew that six weeks alone in Chicago is not conducive to social engagements. But perhaps it was fancy of mine only—that twinkle!

"O, do say yes. It's such a lovely day and we'll have a lovely time," continued Janet, addressing me. "Be a good fellow and say yes," she coaxed.

I, who had no engagements, no one who cared where I went or with whom, no home to give an accounting in, and with a heart filled with the desire for the joy pictured—why should I not go? I just looked my yes and she understood.

"Make the trip south first, brother; then west, and after Lincoln park on to the farm, please. He nodded and turned the machine southward. I cannot begin to tell you, dear You, all the light talk, the girl-girl secrets, the interchange of youth's rose and gold spirit, as we went, but I can tell you of the trip. It was wonderful!

We sped past the Art institute and Grant park, through artistically lamped Michigan boulevard into beautiful but degenerated Grand, across Oakwood, the street of churches, into Drexel, the lovely. Then Jackson park, with its haunting memorials of the greatest of world's fairs, across dull Fifty-fifth into the twin beauty of Douglas and Garfield parks—the homey playgrounds of Chicago. After that through streets, mere phantom links, into Lincoln park.

Malcomb Dorr stopped the machine before the standing Lincoln at the entrance of the park. He rose, doffed his cap, and said, "To the greatest of all." I was surprised at that act of reverence. Silently I wondered if all northern men felt as deeply that way for Lincoln as our men of the south for our Lee. Hitherto I had believed that all sentiment was in the south—that the "golden calf" represented the northern men in their deepest feeling. His act plunged me into a current of consciousness of my mistaken idea, too vivid for speech. Janet, noticing my silence, whispered, "Never mind—he is poetic like that—about some things." But she, too, felt the spirit of the tribute, and we were both silent as we flashed on by the Turner effect of the lake front and through the fairylike vesture of young spring in the country roads.

But by the time we arrived at the Green Farm we were all as talkative as we were hungry, and while waiting for the "specialties" of this place to be cooked we chattered like magpies.

Malcomb Dorr seemed to know almost everybody at that unpretentious place "au bord de la Rivière Des Plaines." As dinner was being served he called over to a man: "Hello, there, Floreau! Come over here and dine with us." The man arose from a nearby table and joined us.

"Miss Beth, maid of mission interests, allow me to present to you Sir Pessimist Poet. You are each so happily unhappy in your respective interests that you ought to enjoy each other," was Malcomb Dorr's introduction of us.

I bowed, embarrassed by the tacit reference to my morning, and the pessimist poet looked rather angry, I thought. But he sat down with us in the easy camaraderie of long acquaintance. And in the same bantering tone light badinage followed the dinner talk. And the pessimist poet explained to me all about the missions, of which Chicago has fifty. He told me of many other places and things that Chicago provided for her improvident ones. And he outlined briefly his dream of seeing the problem of a city's poor solved.

We journeyed homeward as the sun went down, giving the route another and even more gorgeous effect.

Arrived at my place, I made my adieu gayly but regretfully. But Janet kissed me and said, "Not adieu, but au revoir—there will be more days for us like this." And I sped happily up the steps to meet—Mr. Wellington Holme! He had come back before Monday on "important business." His eyes looked like smoke before flames as he looked at me questioningly. He looked as if he were angry because I had been pleasuring.

But, like Pippa, I was resolved that my day should be all gold, and I rushed right by him and up to my room and to dear You, who understands, to talk it out. While I've been writing to you of my wonderful day Mr. Wellington Holme has been telephoning me to come down to supper with him. I won't. I'm not hungry, and besides he looked like he might scold or lecture me. He has no right to do so. He goes away to his old bungalow and his real life all the time. I am only a "social derelict, an inmate of a boarding house, and adjunct to his ambition of the great Madonna of his, anyway. I shall keep my perfect day, unclouded by his disapproval, in my heart. And with You, just dear You, I'll talk it all over and dream more beautiful dreams before our make believe fire until sleep comes to take me. Such a wonderful day! "Make believe" play to begin, the mystery of the world's sorrows, the shadow background of personal grief, the sunlight and joy of youth venturing—all have made it a very full if not a perfect day. I'm very tired in body but not in weariness of heart tonight. Bonnie Dandy is stretched out dead to the world in sleep. "The sand man has come"—as my mother used to say to me. Forgive my abrupt good-night now, for in my dreams even you will remain, you dear, beautiful, big Understanding You. Your sleepy

BETH.

P. S.—I've muffled the telephone; Wellington Holme may think—alone.

One of the most attractive of the recent spring weddings was that of Miss Mary Josephine Williamson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Williamson of 1351 North Dearborn street, to Carl Henry Zeiss, which was celebrated at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension. It was distinctly a spring wedding celebration and the large bridal party, which included a maid of honor and six bridesmaids, wore gowns of yellow and lavender combined and carried loose clusters of all the various spring flowers, which made a colorful array. Mr. Zeiss is the son of Mrs. Henry C. Zeiss and April 24 was the day of the service, followed by a reception at the Williamson home.

WHEN the thermometer goes up to near the 90s and trees, shrubs, and flowers burst into leafage and bloom over night, the fancy of that part of the community not city bound during the summer lightly turns to thoughts of seashore, mountains, and country side. Those who have been forehanded enough to have their spring and summer wardrobe all completed are now filled with the same sense of solid satisfaction as that which undoubtedly suffused the consciousness of the wise virgins whose lamps were well replenished with oil, while those of their foolish sisters were empty.

Apropos of new frocks, the first frail, almost imperceptible precursor of a recrudescence of our grandmothers' hoopskirts is now to be remarked—perceptible though invisible. Two of the most smartly dressed of the younger society women of the north side wore, under their flounced and filmy tulle skirts, at a recent smart dinner dance, a single slender hoop suspended from the waist by ribbons and holding out the diaphanous draperies at the knees. The ribbons and hoops, which were of feather boning an inch wide, were of the same hue as the tulle overdress and so were quite invisible and so pliable as to achieve their effect without any seeming effort.

Is it the beginning of an era which shall lead us to some of the stupendous, bell shaped structures of the time of Leach, the famous Punch cartoonist? What influence will it have on our traction problem? Street cars will have to be reconstructed to accommodate a new race of pear shaped straphangers.

The sad effect of the practical—though we hope only temporary—elimination of Paris from the field of gowns and costumes in general, is the multiplying of examples of some popular dress models. Various leaders of the Chicago beau monde have similar taste in gowns apparently.

At a charming and impromptu tea party given by Mr. and Mrs. John Spoor at the Saddle and Cycle club last Sunday afternoon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clark of Lenox, Mass., there were five gowns of exactly the same hue, design, color, and material worn by five fair ladies of differing ages, build, type, and coloring. It was a most attractive model, but to see yourself repeated four times is, as the French say, "un peu trop fort."

It was an ideal day for the Saddle and Cycle Sunday crowd. The tennis courts were in full swing, and a group of croquet players occupied the adjacent lawn. The tea table was set out on the grass midway between the courts and the clubhouse. The Italian garden, the terraces, and the beach were sprinkled with festive little parties strolling about or sitting quietly watching the scene. Many of those present had adjourned there from a club luncheon at the Casino, where the nub of the occasion had been a program of Italian songs given by the well known tenor, Sig. Daddi. The out of town guests at this luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. John Spoor's friends from Lenox, Mr. and Mrs. Clark, Countess de Hemptinne of Ghent, Belgium, and Harold Good of England.

Nature is smiling on the Saddle and Cycle club this year as never before, having in previous seasons frequently manifested a malicious pleasure in sending wind and rain to harass the club's festivals. But on Wednesday evening she contributed the biggest, roundest moon ever seen, and the balmiest evening imaginable to the black and white party devised and gotten up by Frank Hibbard. All the women present were attired in black and white (or black or white) gowns. Many of them wore large black hats with their décolleté frocks—always a fetching combination. Crimson flowers decorated the tables, and those who could tear themselves from the moonlit terraces danced hard and merrily until long after midnight.

That same evening a gay party of twenty invaded Bohemia and had an Italian evening as guests of Messrs. Daddi and Barbieri and Count Spagiari at an Italian restaurant in Illinois street. Besides Daddi, those well known local warblers, Henry Harvey, John H. Winterbotham, and Roy McWilliams, were present, so the evening was full of melody and the moon that filled East Illinois street with radiance saw the company disperse at midnight.

Chicago is a sort of half way house between the east and west these days, when peripatetic Americans are so busy discovering America. Every one stops off here between trains.

On Tuesday Mrs. Myron T. Herrick of Cleveland and her sister, Mrs. Graham, spent the day here on their way to join Mr. Herrick at Colorado Springs. Both women were the guests of Mrs. Potter Palmer for afternoon tea at the Saddle and Cycle club.

Wednesday afternoon Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Elsie de Wolf, and Miss Isabel Marbury, on their way to the Panama fair, perched for a moment on our threshold, during which interval Charles Deering took them to see Mrs. Chauncey Blair's beautiful collection of pictures and art objects.

Amusing is the story that is told of Hamilton McCormick and the invisible but audible parrot. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick are staying at the Virginia hotel. Mr. McCormick asked the manager of the hotel if he knew the proprietors of the hotel across the street, the Alexandria.

"Indeed we do," was the answer; "we are the proprietors."

"Then," said Mr. McCormick, "perhaps you can stop that parrot over there that disturbs my nap every afternoon when I try to doze off about 5 o'clock."

"But there is no parrot there."

"Yes there is," asserted Mr. McCormick. "He whistles once, then twice, then once again, and so goes on during the hour I try to rest."

"Ah, that," said the manager, "is the traffic policeman. I fear we cannot stop him."

◆

The return of two of the three notable bridal couples of the last six months gives a decided impetus to society. The young Cyrus McCormicks, who are the guests oof Mr. McCormick's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, are being extensively fêted. Tomorrow afternoon a large reception will be given by Mrs. McCormick (the distinguished and beautiful head of the family), Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, and Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick at the residence of the C. H. McCormicks, 50 East Huron street.

The young Philip D. Armours, who are visiting Mrs. P. D. Armour, are also the center of much entertaining. They have taken the James house at Lake Forest for the summer.

The third conspicuous bridal couple, the Marshall Fields III., are not yet on the scene, though Mr. Field himself was here a week ago.

The report that Mrs. Borden Harriman had taken a house at Lake Forest was basen on the fact that she had written to ask about renting a furnished house there for the summer in order to study sociological problems and their attempted solution in Chicago. She has not, however, followed up her inquiries with any furtther negotiations.

Always behind our social doings and local interests is the insistent throb of the war drums of Europe. Every week that great and terrible conflict knocks at our doors in the guise of different individuals asking our attention, imploring out aid, urging still further proofs of our sympathy and sorrow.

This last week Harold E. Good has come pleading the cause of the hundreds of emergency hospitals which are dotted over France. Housed in any kind of buildings, schools, factories, châteaux, or hotels, often furnished with only such things as the neighboring peasants could ill spare, most inadequately equipped with surgical appliances, with perhaps only the village doctor in charge and volunteer, untrained nurses to aid him, these hospitals cry for help. Mr. Good is here in the name of the French wounded emergency fund, of which the American branch is under the vacation war relief committee of which Miss Robinson Smith is chairman, Miss Anne Morgan treasurer, and Miss Ruth Shaw-Kennedy secretary. The Marchioness of Linlithgow is president of the English organization, with the Countess of Crawford and Balcarres, and the Viscountess Bryce as vice presidents.

The plight of the civil population of France with nearly a million French, Belgian, British, and German wounded suddenly thrown on the country for care is distressing. They have no system of trained nurses like ours, no preparations or equipment to meet the catastrophe.

One small town in Brittany was warned at the outbreak of the war to expect 150 wounded. In less than two months it received 2,000. At the small town of Dalles, when the village doctor was asked why, lacking all other means of sterilizing the nondescript collection of old pieces of cotton and linen contributed by the country people for bandages (which had been merely washed in the cold brook), they didn't at least boil them as a measure of precaution, he answered: "If we used our fuel for that we should have none to cook the food for these hundreds of wounded."

Mr. Good hopes to inspire the formation of sewing circles in the many summer resorts of the country to help supply the deficiencies in these emergency hospitals and to interest doctors and surgeons to the extent that they may send such surgical instruments as they don't use any more to eke out the meager equipment of these French surgeons.

All contributions may be sent to Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin, 33 West Thirty-ninth street, New York.

More terrible, more despairing, more heart breaking than any, however, is the cry of the Poles. Remote from the ken of the civilized world, they are suffering even more than the unhappy Belgians. No wonder that Paderewski seems semidistraught as he comes to America to proclaim the woes of his countrymen. Alas for the limitations of temperament and genius combined! With that gift in his fingers and brain that could earn thousands and thousands for his suffering compatriots, his profound anguish has robbed him of the power of using it.

Imagine the tremendous crowds that would throng the concert halls of the country to hear Paderewski playing for the Poles! Think of the money that would flow into his coffers, of the acute sympathy that would be aroused under the stimulus of his wonderful music and yet all he can do is to stammer forth in almost inarticulate speech the tragic story of the most afflicted land.

One of the most poignant cries heard from that far away, isolated stricken region is the letter Jean de Reszke received lately from his brother, Edouard de Reszke, the well known basso of a decade ago. On his great estate he is living in the cellar of his once beautiful chateau without fuel, oil, coffee, or other seeming necessities. In storm and rain the cellar has afforded inadequate shelter and forever in the ears has been the thunder of the contending armies.

With Edouard de Reszke have been Prince and Princess Lubormirski, members of one of the greatest Polish families. Princess Lubormirski is a serene highness and before the war her income from salt mines in Poland was $400,000 a year.

The once splendid estate of the Roman Potockis on the frontier of Austrian Poland, one of the show places of Austria, has been destroyed. Countess Potocki is one of the powerful family of Radziwills. She belongs to the Berlin branch and has many friends among the Americans who visit Vienna, Carlsbad, Marienbad, and the other famous watering places of that part of the world.

If the great of the land are in such misery, what must be the condition of the poor and lowly? Before we stay our hands in giving of our abundance, let us show the Poles of Austrian, Russian, and German Poland that they are, too, our brothers.

News of the Chicago Women's Clubs

By Inez Travers.

THE Baron Hirsch Woman's club, after twenty-five years of active service in charity and education, helping organizations of every description and contributing to innumerable funds, finally resolved to concentrate its forces upon some cause definitely its own. Out of this resolve grew in the short space of a year the convalescent home for men and boys. The home is efficient in every way and cost the club about $9,000. A mortgage of $2,000 has just been paid off and there is now but $3,000 left to be paid.

This has all been achieved by the club without a single appeal to the public for funds. The furniture in the home has been donated by club members and their friends. There are a number of beds still to be endowed and the club would be glad of any help in this regard, either from individuals or from other clubs.

The home is situated in a modest house at 3127 Calumet avenue and is known as the Baron Hirsch Rest cottage. It was opened in January and since then about fifty men and boys have spent from one to two weeks in the institution after coming from various hospitals. There is no discrimination between patients at the home, the only requisite for entrance being a doctor's recommendation.

The juniors of the club, known as the Leonora Sewing circle (named in honor of Mrs. Mandl, the club's honorary president), together with the help of the senior members, made the linens for the use of the convalescent home. Towels, bedding, table linen, even curtains were made by the circle, besides many bathrobes and nightrobes. Besides providing so well for the needs of the home, the sewing circle had contributed many bathrobes and linens to the Winfield Tuberculosis sanitarium.

In spite of the many and pressing demands on the club incident to the opening of its new home it has also contributed this year as usual, both in time and money, to its outside charities. Five hundred dollars was given to endow a bed at Winfield and contributions were made to the Home for the Friendless at the time of the Baron Hirsch day there. Three girls whose board was paid by the club at the Ruth club also received education in trades from the Baron Hirsch club this year. There were also a number of smaller charities such as are in the club record of each of its twenty-five years.

It is affiliated with such organizations as the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs, Conference of Jewish Woman's Organizations, Chicago Winfield sanitarium, District Federation of Woman's Clubs, and the permanent public school extension committee.

The plans of the club for the coming year will be much the same and it hopes to be able to keep increasing the capacity of the convalescent home in the future.

The officers are: Honorary president, Mrs. Emma B. Mandl; president, Mrs. Benjamin M. Engelhard; first vice president, Mrs. S. Lande; second vice president, Mrs. Albert Steindler; recording secretary, Mrs. E. J. Danek; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. Heyman; treasurer, Mrs. Sidney Mandl.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

The Mother's Emergency league, of which Mrs. Frederick Mefort, 5443 Glenwood avenue, is president, is making plans for the fourth annual flower festival, to be held Saturday for the benefit of the free beds for destitute mothers at the Chicago Union hospital. Helen Linn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Roger Linn, 7214 Sheridan road, will be the youngest flower vender and will assist her mother, who will serve as general chairman of arrangements. Women's Trade Mark Shoes

A fortunate purchase from a large manufacturer brings these 1,000 pairs women's Trade Mark Shoes at less than half actual value. The name is stamped on the sole of each shoe, but we had to agree not to advertise their name, as these shoes never sell under price.

They have only slight imperfections, such as a mis-stitch or a slight check in the leather which you would scarcely notice if we did not call it to your attention.

The defects in no way impair the wearing qualities. They are made of Patent Chrome with kid and colored cloth tops and gaiter tops, gunmetal calf button and lace shoes, some with colored cloth tops and many other popular styles, short vamps, tip and plain toes, high and low heels, Goodyear welt and hand turned sewed soles, sizes 2½ to 7. NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

PREPARATIONS are now under way for the celebration of the golden jubilee of St. Mary's Catholic church of Evanston, located at Oak avenue and Lake street.

The fiftieth anniversary date of the celebration of the first mass is Aug. 15, but it was thought by Father Hugh P. Smyth, the pastor, and his advisers that midsummer was an inopportune time for the celebration desired, and a date in October will be selected. The program will include religious services morning and evening on the Sabbath and various social features on Monday and Tuesday, culminating in a banquet Tuesday evening.

In his work of preparation Father Smyth has the help of his assistant priests, Father Thomas Eagan and Father A. G. Quille.

It is expected also that the priests of the other Evanston parishes will join in the celebration. They are Father P. L. Bierman and Father A. Korthals of St. Nicholas' church (German) and Father Felix Feldheim of Ascension church (Polish). The St. Nicholas church was organized in 1887 by members of St. Mary's church who spoke the German language. The Church of the Ascension has recently been brought within the city limits of Evanston by annexation. This adds between 400 and 500 to the Catholic population of Evanston.

When the religious census of Evanston was taken in January, 1914, the number of families having one or more Catholics was reported to be 1,179, which was the largest among the religious denominations, the Methodists coming next with 1,083 homes represented.

One of the interested and interesting participants in the coming celebration will be Father D. P. O'Leary of the Order of the Holy Cross, who assisted as an altar boy at the first mass. The service was held in a private home near Calvary cemetery.

The ground on which the church now stands was purchased in July, 1864, but it was not until 1866 that the first small church was erected. In 1869 a larger church edifice was built, which was occupied until 1892, when the present large stone house of worship was completed.

In less than a year after the new building was dedicated Father M. Donohue, the pastor, died, and Father Smyth was appointed his successor. Father Smyth's service has extended over a period of twenty-two years and the parish has been marked by constant growth in membership and in equipment.

Before coming to Evanston Father Smyth was an assistant priest in Chicago for eight years and served as pastor of the church at Lemont, Ill., for three years. He was born and educated in Ireland. In 1900 he made a tour of Europe and of the orient.

Father Smyth cites as an evidence of the good will which exists between him and his neighboring ministers of other religious denominations the fact that when St. Mary's church was partially destroyed by fire seven years ago the pastor of the Immanuel Methodist Episcopal church, which adjoins St. Mary's on the south, and the rector of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church, which adjoins St. Mary's on the north, called on him and offered the use of their church buildings until his church could be repaired. Father Smyth, however, had the damaged portion of his own church boarded up and continued his services as best he could.

Another evidence of both the liberality of Father Smyth and the appreciation in which he is held by the officials of the Northwestern university and the Garrett Biblical institute, both Methodist institutions, is the invitation extended to him to lecture at both schools on matters of doctrine and history.

On church doctrine he spoke to the men studying for the Methodist ministry and on questions of history in which there is a difference of opinion between Catholics and Protestants he spoke before the students of the university. In both instances Father Smyth explained clearly and in admirable fairness and moderation the viewpoint of the Catholic church.

Father Smyth is the chief editorial writer on the Chicago Citizen, a weekly paper devoted especially to the interests of Irish citizens. Because of his wide travels and education abroad Father Smyth is regarded as an authority on questions of national concern in which European interests are concerned.

One feature of the coming celebration of the half century history which is giving the highest expectations of pleasure is the certainty that it will mark the payment of all indebtedness on the church property with a valuation exceeding $225,000. The collection of the few remaining dollars of indebtedness is now in progress. The property includes the church, the parochial school, the parochial residence, and an athletic field.

Father Smyth is an irremovable pastor, having had sufficient years of experience and having passed the required examinations.

The following are active either as officers or leaders in the various societies of the parish:

St. Vincent de Paul society—J. P. McCann, D. McCann, George J. Kearney, J. C. Cooper.

Knights of Columbus—C. M. Hayes, W. J. O'Connell, Thomas Mahon, Charles J. Conner, James Hoffmann, Dr. O'Neil.

Catholic Order of Foresters—N. C. Borre, P. E. O'Neil, John Flood, Thomas Mahoney.

Women's Catholic Order of Foresters—Mrs. Henry Fiesel, Mrs. Guirck, Mrs. T. A. Foley, Mrs. James O'Connell.

Catholic Woman's club—Mrs. T. V. Purcell, Mrs. R. McCall, Mrs. T. Mahon, Mrs. W. Donough, Mrs. R. Walsh, Mrs. E. Kelley, Mrs. A. A. McKinley, Mrs. J. A. Lorch.

Other church workers are: Edward Hines, A. A. McKinley, W. C. Hartray, Louis A. Ferguson, T. V. Purcell, Arthus Hawxhurst, H. B. Hurd, Thomas Foley, Thomas Conner, John Emerson, J. P. O'Conner, Fred Yegge, and W. H. Hill.

The Rev. Hugh P. Smyth is pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, Evanston, which is preparing for the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary as a church organization. The Rev. Thomas Egan and the Rev. A. G. Quille are assistant priests of the parish who are working with Father Smyth. The plan is to celebrate the golden jubilee free from debt on any part of the church or school property. The celebration will take place in October.

ASTRONOMY.

SUN SPOTS.

SOME of the spots which appear by contrast black on the surface of the sun measure 100,000 miles in diameter. Some are small. Some have a duration of a few hours. Others remain two or three months. They never are seen near the poles. They are most frequent at the equator.

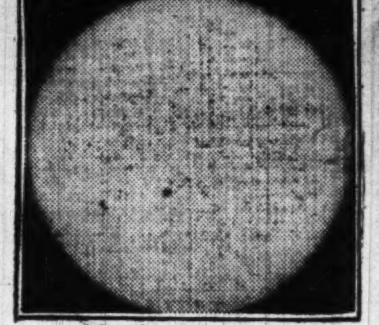
Evidently they are cyclonic holes in the outer gaseous layer of the sun, as if tremendous spiral activities were tearing the gaseous envelope as they might tear the sand in the Sahara.

The spectacle, of course, is telescopic. Many of the spots are irregular in form, but some are nearly circular. Frequently they are in groups and the area covered by the groups one of many millions of square miles.

It has been demonstrated that the force which causes these vortices in the sun's envelope produces magnetic fields. We come here to another influence which this star exercises upon our existence. It was reported recently, with whatever truth, that a disturbance in radio telegraphy was attributable to a solar vortical disturbance and that in consequence of the disturbance only the most powerful sending instruments could project their messages.

The sun furnishes light and heat. It is the center of gravitation for our segment of the universe. It carries us along with it in its speedy course into the immeasurable reaches of the universe. It fixes the terms and makes the conditions of our existence, but here is a new influence which has not been completely explored because the possibilities of the activity and the power employed in radio telegraphy are circumscribed by our lack of knowledge of their fullness.

SOLAR PROMINENCES



SUN SPOTS

The sun spots presumably are caused by forces which if they exerted themselves upon the earth would produce water spouts, sand spouts, cyclones, or other phenomena which represent elements in vortices. But what precise effect these solar convulsions have upon our lives is more explained by speculation than by fact. We know that solar displays are followed by changes in the earth's magnetism, that there have been brilliant displays of the aurora borealis and violent storms in consequence, but we have not arrived at an understanding of the subtler influences which the sun may have upon conditions of human life.

The solar prominences which appear in the illustration above are visible during an eclipse. Some of the shoots and tongues flare out to a distance of 300,000 miles. They indicate a tremendous force behind them, sometimes flashing out at a speed of several hundred miles a second. They are clouds of vapor, of hydrogen, helium, and calcium.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

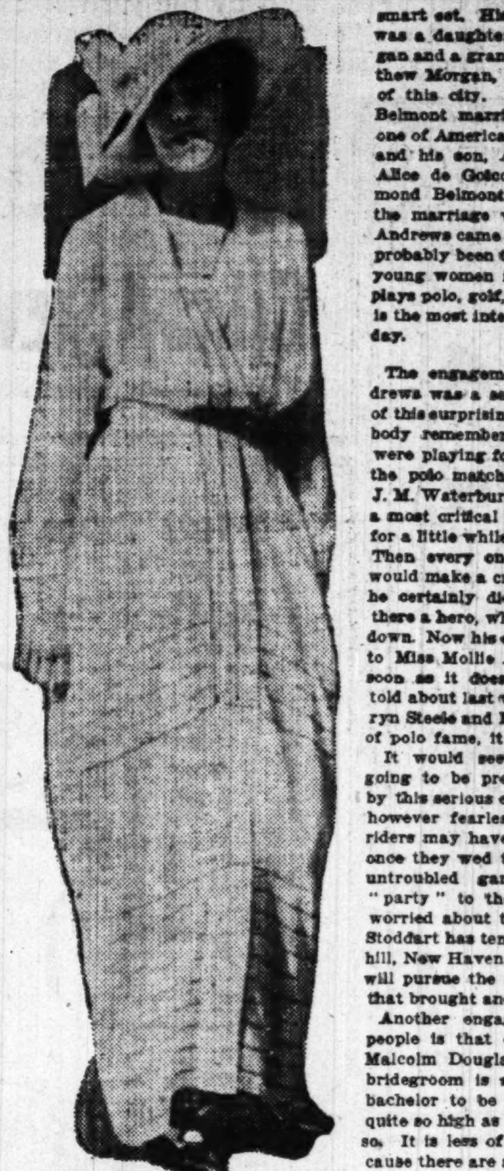
NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Dogwood is in blossom on the city golf courses. No other item of the week is so significant in its import. It means that society woke up one morning and found its thoughts diverted into a path different from the one pursued for six months past. From the grand opera they at once turned to the country. Every item since that morning six days ago when the white and brown flowers came to grace the golf course has had the outdoors for its setting. The summer season has come without any lingering of winter into the preserves of spring—without any spring—without any rainy season, and without much of anything for which New York is famous. The flowers today blooming on the ladies' hats are summer flowers. Buttercups and crocuses were omitted from the annual schedule this year, owing to this singular fact that spring got crowded off the calendar.

It is the open season for engagements, and even these as announced thus far are the consummation of outdoor romances. Miss Margaret Andrews is going to wed. There was a time when it was confidently expected that she would be the bride of Vincent Astor. His little motor car, just big enough for two, seldom held any feminine occupant but she. That was two summers ago at Newport. Many things have happened since then, and one of them is that Vincent Astor married Miss Huntington, her oldtime neighbor on the Hudson, while Miss Andrews' parents have now announced her engagement to the son of the big traction magnate. She will marry Morgan Belmont, son of August Belmont, in the fall.

This was one of the romances of the polo fields and the tennis courts. Both of the people involved in it are athletes, and live not the hot house lives of many of the rich and great of New York, but in the wholesome, simple ways of the country. The engagement was announced from Newport by the young woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews. Before the fall horse show there the wedding will take place at their residence, Rockery hall. The announcement came as a complete surprise to the smart set, for, although they knew the two were much in love, the engagement had been denied only a short time ago, and the gullible 400 were guileless enough to take the designing young people at their word.



MISS MARGARET ANDREWS

Mr. Belmont has just returned from Alaska, where he has been shooting big game. He left New York immediately for Newport. He is the youngest son of August Belmont, and was graduated from Harvard last year. He is one of the best and the most popular polo players of the smart set. His mother, who died in 1898, was a daughter of the late Edward Morgan and a granddaughter of the late Matthew Morgan, a distinguished merchant of this city. Five years ago August Belmont married Miss Eleanor Robson, one of America's most popular actresses, and his son, August Jr., married Miss Alice de Goicouria. The brother, Raymond Belmont, married an actress and the marriage was later annulled. Miss Andrews came out two years ago and has probably been the most popular of all the young women in society since then. She plays polo, golf, and drives a motor. Here is the most interesting engagement of the day.

The engagement of another Miss Andrews was a second of the big surprises of this surprising summer season. Everybody remembers back in 1913 when we were playing for the international cup in the polo match with Great Britain that J. M. Waterbury broke his finger. It was a most critical moment in the play, and for a little while there was consternation. Then every one said Louis E. Stoddart would make a creditable substitute. This he certainly did, and became then and there a hero, which rôle he has never lain down. Now his engagement is announced to Miss Mollie Andrews, and coming so soon as it does after the engagement I told about last week, between Miss Kathryn Steele and F. Skiddy von Stade, both of polo fame, it has made a stir indeed.

It would seem that polo circles are going to be pretty seriously devastated by this serious epidemic of romances, for however fearless and untrammeled the riders may have been before matrimony, once they wed they never get to play an untroubled game again. The other "party" to the marriage is too much worried about the one in the field. Mr. Stoddart has ten lovely acres at Prospect hill, New Haven, and here he and his wife will pursue the same simple, outdoor life that brought and kept them together.

Another engagement that interested people is that of Miss Elinor Lee and Malcolm Douglas Sloane. The young bridegroom is so very popular. For a bachelor to be popular does not count quite so high as for a young woman to be so. It is less of a trick for the man because there are so few of him. They say there are several bachelors in New York society today who are booked up for every week end up to and including the one over the Thanksgiving holidays. What debutante here or in Chicago can match that? Still, Mr. Sloane would be popular on his own account, even if competition were keener. He is a charming young man and has a stunning family tree back of him, which is loaded with wealth. He is the nephew of William K. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombly, Mrs. W. Seward Webb, and Henry T. Sloane. Mrs. John Henry Hammond and Mrs. William B. Osgood Field are his sisters. He was graduated from Yale in 1907, and is a member of the Union, Knickerbocker, Racquet and Tennis, and Brook clubs, as well as the Turf and Field, Automobile, and the Motor Car Touring society.

But all is not marrying and giving in marriage, even in New York, during war time. The Hon. Mrs. Frederick E. Guest and the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Anson have come here to spend a few weeks while the war keeps their husbands abroad. They go everywhere, but their faces are sadder than the gayety of the occasions would warrant. Meantime another sad incident of the war has just been enacted here. Col. Moreton Foley Gage went to the front with the British troops at midwinter as chief of staff of the Third division cavalry under Sir Julian Byng. They are a part of the expeditionary force in France.

Mrs. Gage came to New York then to be with her mother, Mrs. William Everard Strong. A few days ago, after this enforced separation, Mrs. Gage died. She was in Lakewood at the time. Her relatives here doubt whether her husband has even received word of her death. Twelve years ago, when the marriage took place, it was as much of a sensation as any of the engagements reported today. She was one of the most beautiful young women of society. She and her husband went to England to live, and later he was made military attaché of the embassy in Washington. At his request he was transferred to London to resume his position in the army. The beautiful American woman is survived by two sons, Berkeley and Edward, 11 and 9 years old.

Exhibit Students' Art

THE Art institute of Chicago and the board of education invite you to inspect the annual exhibit of manual training and household arts by the grammar, high, and technical schools of the middle west.

If you go to the exhibition you will find a bewildering array of pictures of everything imaginable from red headed woodpeckers to motor trucks, in crayon, ink, and water color. You will find frogs, and bugs, and people, and houses, and fountains, and fairies all modeled in clay. You will look at yards and yards of neat crocheting and sewing. You will sit on chairs (if the guard doesn't see you) made by small boys. You will admire clever hand tooled silver and brass articles and jewelry cleverly set with semi-precious stones. And when you have been seen all these things and are tired from your wanderings you will find yourself astonished at the efficiency of it all and the amount of labor it represents for both pupils and teachers. Finally you will be glad you're a taxpayer and almost as proud—but not quite—as little Willie that he has a picture in the Art institute in Chicago.

Nemo Week

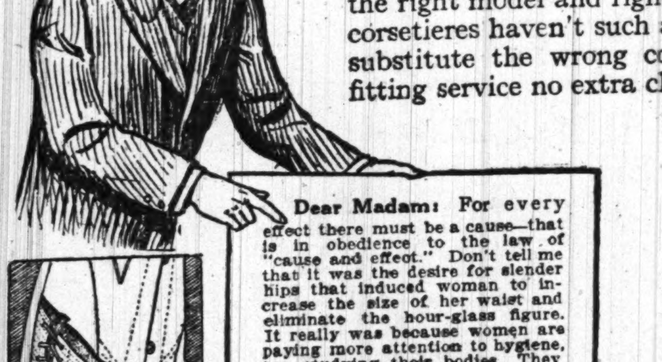
To Properly Participate in All the Benefits of Nemo Week You Must Come to the Boston Store—the Chief Nemo Corset Store in Chicago

Third Floor—Center

The chief Nemo corset store today, just as it was twelve years ago when Nemo Week first originated, just as it has been every year since—because we've studied Nemo Corsets long enough and carefully enough to thoroughly believe in them, because each of our corsetieres must do likewise, besides taking the course at the Nemo Hygienic Fashion Institute. You can depend upon reaping all the benefits to your health, figure and comfort that Nemo corsets can bring you, only if you have them fitted here, Nemo corsets, under the hands of our corsetieres, are a revelation to women who have never worn them, and to many women who have worn them without having them properly fitted. We have raised the standard of corset fitting to a science. Our corsetieres know the structure and physiology of the body perfectly. They fit you

(a) To give support to the abdominal walls.
(b) To enable the figure to maintain its correct position.
(c) To harmonize the lines of the figure.
(d) To relieve the pressure on the pelvic organs by taking the burden off the pelvic floor.
(e) To cover and control the flesh and help to reduce it.

There is a Nemo corset to help them solve the problem of every figure and we have it right here in stock, so that our corsetieres always have exactly the right model and right size for your figure. Please remember that most corsetieres haven't such a complete stock to choose from, and knowingly substitute the wrong corset. For this accurate, unapproachable corset fitting service no extra charge is ever made.



Dear Madam: For every effect there must be a cause—that is in obedience to the law of "cause and effect." Don't tell me that it was the desire for slender hips that induced woman to increase the size of her waist and eliminate the hour-glass figure. It really was because women are paying more attention to hygiene, are studying their bodies. They know that their good looks are dependent on their good health, and to look well they must be well, and they cannot be well if their waists are constricted, because indigestion and other disorders of the stomach which make themselves so apparent in the face are the result.

I only ask that your corset correctly support the body without producing an abnormal, MIND YOU, I SAY abnormal, pressure over the nerve centers or blood supply. Now do that and wear them just as snug as you please. When corsets are made along anatomical lines like the Nemo corsets, the body is so supported from underneath that you unconsciously assume the correct poise. You stand, walk and sit correctly. The tendency will be for the organs to remain in their correct position, and when the organs are in this position they perform their functions in a normal manner. Nemo corsets protect the delicate body where it needs protection, and quickly and healthfully massage away the excess flesh, bringing back without starvation and depleted vitality the supple figure that means health and good form. It is essential that you do not choose your corset in a haphazard manner—have an experienced corsetiere advise you.

Nemo Week is now an event in the corset world, for always some splendid idea is put forth in a new model. This year a special "invisible" self reducing idea is shown in style No. 345, made of fine mercerized batiste, for the tall full figure—new "invisible" self reducing and supporting straps formed by converging tapes. Ideal for women who need Nemo support but want a lighter, softer corset, sizes 22 to 36, at $3. Nemo corset No. 344 is the same as the above, but for stout figures, at $3. We consider the new ideas embodied in these corsets so important that we will have them displayed on a living model this week, daily from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m., in our corset section, 3rd floor.

Our display of all the Nemo models includes the very latest styles as well as the standard models which are modified and improved from season to season but in the main retain their usual designs so well suited to thousands of women who would never think of giving them up after experiencing the comfort and hygienic helpfulness they bring. We want you to be sure and come Nemo Week and let us show you the Nemo corset you should wear, fitting it to your figure if you desire, to demonstrate its superiority. We do this whether you care to buy just at present or not.

HE WON $10,000 WITH AN IDEA!

Roy L. McCardell, Winner of the $10,000 Photoplay Contest, Tells How He Did It

Last December the American Film Manufacturing company, co-operating with "The Chicago Tribune" and associated newspapers, announced an offer of $10,000 for an idea. The offer was open to every one—man, woman, or child. The manuscripts were to be not less than 1,000 words. The contest closed on Jan. 17, and nearly 20,000 manuscripts were received. They came from all classes—from men, women, and children; from professionals and amateurs; from everybody.

Each manuscript submitted bore no evidence of the author's name. The names were written on separate slips of paper and put in sealed envelopes and numbered. The judges did not know the author of the winning photoplay until the sealed envelope containing his name was opened.

Upon opening the envelope that bore the number which corresponded with the number of the selected manuscript the judges found the name of Roy L. McCardell, New Rochelle, N. Y. Nothing could have been a greater surprise, for Mr. McCardell is known as one of America's leading story writers, as well as an author -f many photoplays. His home is at 140 Pelham road, New Rochelle, N. Y. He read the announcement of the $10,000 prize offer in the New York Globe. The title of Mr. McCardell's manuscript was "The Diamond from the Sky." "The Diamond from the Sky" was selected by the judges because it contained an idea which they thought was the best for a photoplay production.

Finding that Mr. McCardell was the author and knowing him to be one of the most successful authors of photoplays and stories, the principals engaged his services in preparing the story which will appear in "The Sunday Tribune" simultaneously with the appearance of the films at the moving picture theaters. Chapters corresponding with those appearing in this paper in story form will be shown in motion picture form at the leading theaters throughout the country each week.

Thus you can see the motion pictures at the theaters and then read the story in "The Sunday Tribune" corresponding with the motion pictures.

The $10,000 prize won by Mr. McCardell was simply for his idea. You will see at the motion picture theaters and read in this paper how this idea has been carried out to completion.

NOW ANOTHER PRIZE of $10,000 is to be given for the best idea for a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky." Manuscripts must be 1,000 words or less. All manuscripts should be addressed to the Scencrio Department, "The Tribune," Chicago.

This offer is open to every man, woman, and child. No literary ability is required. Simply an idea is wanted—a suggestion for a sequel to this photoplay. Writing and grammar will not be considered. You may submit your idea in any form—typewritten, hand written, in pencil or pen and ink. The simplest form will do. Watch the motion pictures closely, read the story in "The Sunday Tribune"—then work out a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky," and you may be the one to get the $10,000 cash prize.

In the acompanying story Miss Kitty Kelly, editor of "Flickerings from Filmland," "The Daily Tribune," tells of her interview with Roy L. McCardell.

By Kitty Kelly.

Here, ladies and gentlemen, I beg you to meet the man whose mind has just paid him a $10,000 dividend—Roy L. McCardell, author of stories and scenarios—writer of the photoplay story that won the $10,000 prize—"The Diamond from the Sky."

He is the man who has distinctly put the move—meaning additional move—into the American Film Manufacturing company's studios at Santa Barbara, shocking into tense activity all the forces of a big company of actors created for the purpose of giving adequate pictorial expression to his $10,000 idea.

He is the man who will set all the fortunate, peaceful American world agog with interest and unite its peoples in a common amusement bond for months to come. And it was no walkaway, that dividend—just an honest income on an honest investment of hard work.

Several months ago Mr. McCardell read of an offer in the New York Globe of $10,000 for a photoplay. This contest was conducted by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and associated newspapers. Mr. McCardell wrote out his idea and submitted it in response to the announcement. The conditions of the contest made it necessary for every one who competed to put only a number on the manuscript itself and to sign the author's name and address separately. This was done. The judges were Miss Mae Tinee, film critic of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE; John R. Freuler, president of the North American Film corporation; and R. R. Nehls, manager of the American Film Manufacturing company—the company which was to produce the photoplay.

In reviewing the manuscripts—and there were many thousands of them—the judges selected the one called "The Diamond from the Sky." They agreed that this was the best of the vast number selected. When the envelope containing the author's name was opened the winner was found to be Roy L. McCardell.

Mr. McCardell's home is at 140 Pelham road, New Rochelle, N. Y.—that is, the home he has called home for many years. Temporarily his home is at Santa Barbara, Cal., where he has been called to write the story which will correspond with the photoplay he wrote. Here he is lodged in a delightful bungalow, rose bound and vine embraced, perched on a high bluff, looking over part of the town nestled below and out into the mist-lost edge of the blue Pacific. Mr. McCardell's bungalow at Santa Barbara has officially been christened "Honeymoon Lodge," for one of the writer's daughters has installed her new husband in it.

"I've never been separated from my wife since once back at Chicago's world fair, and I'm never going to do it again. Where I go my family goes," he explained firmly.

Mr. McCardell is, along with being a professional writer, a professional prize winner. He has a string of trophies to his score. "I've won something, not always first, but always something, in every contest I have entered. I have been in numerous literary contests. Of course, this is the greatest success I have ever attained—the greatest contest I have ever won," and Mr. McCardell smiled broadly to show his keen appreciation.

"And how did you happen to be the winner in this contest?" I asked.

"I didn't 'happen' to," said Mr. McCardell emphatically. "I've been working on a continued photoplay idea for a number of years. I knew the big pictures were coming. I followed them carefully. When this $10,000 prize offer was announced I felt it was the biggest opportunity I ever had seen and it was time for me to bring out my ideas. First I read the conditions carefully and found out what they wanted, and then I got busy and set down my ideas.

"I worked at it practically. I saw pictures, I talked to all the exchange men and exhibiters I knew, and I heard what their patrons demanded, and then I drew conclusions.

"For a photoplay such as was wanted I knew that chapters full of suspense were essential. Things not only had to happen but they had to keep promising they would happen. People not only want to be interested in what is happening now but they want to be obliged to look ahead to what is going to happen. From my study I learned that the public liked modern things, romantic things, and a clean love theme. I weighed all the serial stories that had gone before and judged what made for success or failure in them. And I found that what counted mostly for success was youth, romance, and adventure.

"That's what the people are looking for. They all seek romance, and when they can get it for 10 cents it's an awful good bargain. Most folks can find enough squalor and unhappiness at home without going out and looking for it for amusement.

"So I did a clean, lively story, with no excruciating torture, no slatternly characters, nothing physically repulsive, full of thrills and full of comradeliness, in which there is triumph of the good old virtues that make the world go round.

"I put earnestness, sincerity, and resoluteness into it, and I didn't spare the midnight light.

"Besides thinking all this out I tried to present the material with care." Here Mr. McCardell produced a manuscript. "This is a copy of what I submitted," said he, and he flipped through the closely typed leaves of some sizable book, bound in gray paper, with the pages showing impeccability in their form, underlining, margining. "I see to it that my ideas are given nice, concise, clean form of expression. I don't spare time or pains or money in doing it. Why, this whole thing was rewritten fifty or sixty times.

"First, you see," and he flipped open the volume, "I wrote a concise, arresting foreword. I knew if they were interested they would read further. Then I did a concise synopsis—and had it set solid so it wouldn't look like so much," he parenthesized in a stage whisper. "Eight pages of 600 words about each. But I couldn't do it in any less. Then a list of the main characters and a list of the 'punch' scenes, and if they were interested enough to read through that they were interested enough to read through the synopses in full which followed. I did only nineteen episodes, however. I knew from that many they could get a complete idea of what the story was and how it progressed. It was a lot of work," concluded Mr. McCardell, and he had a unanimous audience with him.

Still the audience found strength to muster an inquiry as to whether the actual winning of the prize had been a surprise.

Mr. McCardell waited half a minute, put on one of his professionally humorous twinkles, and remarked: "Well, I tell you, I felt rather that it was a reward of merit. I felt as if I had a worth while idea which I had gotten into the most approved shape and that it deserved recognition. My only fear was that in the press of manuscripts coming in mine might be overlooked by the tired judges, for I couldn't put my name on it, you know.

"I felt sure if it wasn't snowed under, if it had a chance at a reading, that it would win. So I put it in an envelope easy to open, put on plenty of postage—I always put on too much rather than too little postage—and sent it off, confident that if it got out of the envelope it would get across. I don't do things cheap and easy. I put brains and pains into my work, spending my nights and days, determined to win, and I always have. I believe that my ideas should go forth like a visitor, well dressed, and I send them out that way, and they are appreciated by successful people."

That's the story of the winning manuscript in the unusual contest recently concluded. No get rich quick scheme, if you please, but a careful bringing to fruition of a mental crop long under cultivation—a deserved dividend from an honest investment of hard work.

"I haven't any characters wearing putty noses or with red bandanna handkerchiefs pinned to their coat tails," exclaimed Mr. McCardell with humorous belligerence. "And nobody kisses a photograph or folds his hands over his heart and says 'O, my.' A story for a picture has to read, even in scenario form, interestingly, else it isn't going to carry an air of conviction on the screen.

"Sincerity must be the controlling motive in screen work, either comedy or drama. The stories must be possible and the players must express them as though real to themselves, else they fall down. Pictures are educating their own audiences; the little children are the quickest to detect insincerity, and the audiences aren't going to stand long for the wild and freakish.

"The people who are going to write pictures are those who are successfully publishing short stories, novels—people who are well read and have trained imaginations. You can't do pictures by mechanics, and it is idle to expect scripts from people who cannot write good news stories or magazine articles. This is as big a field for intelligence as any other form of expression. Trickery and illogicalness don't go. There is a dead seriousness about humor. People in comedy don't know it's funny—they do it seriously, and that is what makes it funny to us.

"Pictures must have in them things that can and do happen," he told me. "Why, in any daily paper there is material for twenty moving picture stories—comedy, drama, educational. Figure out the causes that led to the news item, the results that worked after it. That's where I get my ideas. I clip news stories and file them, got a whole library of them at home. I don't sit down and have inspirations.

"I think about things that have really happened. That's where I got the stuff for 'The Diamond from the Sky,' out of actual things that people have experienced. One doesn't use the news item just as it is, of course. It is merely a kind of mental protoplasm from which a complete story in a train of thought develops, but as long as there are actual happenings to be chronicled by newspapers just that long we're going to have plenty of material for moving pictures.

"A man that can write a good scenario takes as much pains and does as much hard work as he does to write anything else, and every thought that can be done in magazine stories can be done in pictures. I like pictures and believe in 'em."

That is a subject on which Mr. McCardell is quite the pioneer authority. For fourteen years he has been doing scenarios. Not that the primitive ones were like today's but that he has been perhaps more closely in touch with the scenario end of the game than has any other one person.

In those early days he did "mutoscopes," the funny little moving things you dropped a penny in a slot to peep at through special holes made for the eyes. Though a successful newspaper man, having achieved distinction on several New York papers, where he earned the reputation of being the inventor of the colored comic supplement, and in magazine ranks as well, he clung to his fondness for picture possibilities, until now, so great is his success in that direction, he is obliged to give up practically all of his creative work except script making.

Only within the last year and a half, however, he says, has scenario writing paid, and even yet it doesn't pay as well as magazine work. But he likes it. Though he used to do them at $5 a reel, now he gets a hundred, and last year he disposed of 150 scripts—which isn't so bad.

On his word he hasn't any stored up ones left in his "barrel." He is sold out. He has done in all some thousand scripts that have been filmed, and now as the culminating blossom of this slowly and thoroughly growing experience he is embarked upon doing the world's greatest photoplay.

Mr. McCardell's genial appearance is typical of the pride which he takes in his work. "I have put my heart and soul into this production," said Mr. McCardell, "and I know from the effort that is being expended here at the studios of the American Film Manufacturing company in producing this photoplay that the public will be entertained with a rare example of motion picture art."

Mr. McCardell spoke authoritatively. For the company producing "The Diamond from the Sky" was working day and night—using every known method—to produce a photoplay that would prove exceptional.

I say day and night, because many of the scenes are night scenes which the director believed would appear best if made at night with strong firelight effects. In the production of motion pictures many methods like this are used to produce natural scenic pictures.

Mr. McCardell continued. "You have probably heard that in order to produce 'The Diamond from the Sky' with all the realism outlined in the script the American Film Manufacturing company selected a special cast. Mr. Hutchinson, president of the company, had under consideration nearly twenty-five of the leading motion picture actresses in America. Of course, it was necessary to get a star whose facial features and ways were adaptable to the part outlined in the scenario. For instance, the type of heroine called for in the scenario is a youthful, dark haired girl, exceptionally vivacious. I was grateful, indeed, when I was informed that Miss Lottie Pickford was selected to play the part of the leading woman. I could not have chosen a more perfect type to interpret the part just as it is written.

"For the rôle of the hero an actor was required whose expression would be one of cheerfulness—of kind heartedness. If you have seen Irving Cummings smile you know how well he fits this part. It was also necessary for the hero to be 'heroic' in the full sense of the word. There are many thrills worked into 'The Diamond from the Sky' which the leading man must interpret. Irving Cummings has the ability to portray these ideas perfectly, I believe."

Here Mr. McCardell broke into his characteristic smile. "I must tell you about the two babies which play important parts in the first chapter," he said. "The officials here hunted all over Los Angeles to get two babies who could play the parts to be taken by Miss Lottie Pickford and Irving Cummings as the story progressed. Of course, you can see that it was necessary to get two babies who would bear some resemblance to Miss Pickford and Mr. Cummings. After a long search the proper babies turned up. But the peculiar part of it is that in order to obtain them for use in the first chapter of 'The Diamond from the Sky' Mr. Hutchinson had to promise not to reveal their identities. It is rumored that they are son and daughter of two wealthy California families—friends of Mr. Hutchinson's—who would not permit their names to be known. I wonder if, when they grow up, they will recognize themselves should they see this picture."

I looked across the vast grounds of the American Film Manufacturing company at Santa Barbara, Cal., and there were several automobiles loaded with people coming in.

"Here's 'The Diamond from the Sky' company now," said Mr. McCardell. "Let me introduce you to them.

"This is Miss Burton, who plays the part of Vivian Marston, the adventuress in 'The Diamond from the Sky.' You have seen her in many 'Flying A' moving pictures.

"This is George Periolat, who plays Luke Lovell in 'The Diamond from the Sky.' Luke Lovell is a gypsy character who comes into the play as an acquaintance of Hagar, the gypsy mother of the heroine. And here is Miss Eugenie Forde, who plays the rôle of Hagar, the gypsy. If you will observe Miss Forde's face you will see that she was selected particularly to fit this part.

I glanced over the balance of the company and could see that a number of them were "extras." It would have been impossible to meet each one individually, so I assured Mr. McCardell that I was thankful to know each one of the leading characters who were to play such important parts in "The Diamond from the Sky."

I had heard about the offer of $10,000 for a sequel to the prize photoplay which Mr. McCardell had written. "What are your recommendations to the thousands of contestants who will try for the second $10,000 prize?" I asked Mr. McCardell. He replied: "Tell them to express their ideas exactly as they feel—without regard to any phraseology. Tell them to write without effort. Tell them to read the story and see the motion pictures—to watch each chapter carefully—and then to write their suggestions naturally. I believe that the main object of offering the second $10,000 prize is to get a suggestion from the masses. And I know that the masses will find it easy to participate. Wish them all good luck for me."

I have heard so much from the man who won the $10,000 prize for this idea, and I've heard so much about the wonderful company that is producing the play that I am simply on edge to see the pictures themselves and to read the story. And then there is such endless suspense in the thought, Who will get the second $10,000 prize?

The Winner and the Judges of the $10,000 Photoplay Contest.

ANOTHER $10,000.00 PRIZE WILL BE GIVEN to the man, woman, or child sending in the best suggestion, in a thousand words or less, for a sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky." See the motion pictures at your favorite theater. Read the story and full conditions in NEXT SUNDAY'S CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Playbills of the Week.

La Salle Opera House—"Help Wanted," with Miss Emma Bunting. The play is that by Jack Lait which ran six months last season in the Cort, and Miss Bunting is an actress whom Mr. Lait is, with chivalrous manner and commercial intent, seeking to rescue from the dragon of Texas tours and Colorado circuits. There is record of her Chicago appearance in west side theaters, but none of critical examination of her acting when she was that near the loop. Mr. Lait has made such revision in his play as serves, it seems, to make Miss Bunting's part, that of the pursued calligrapher, the protagonist; whereas, when the play was last on view, chief interest was fixed upon the pursuing merchant. The engagement starts this evening and is for a single week, marked by daily matinées.

Blackstone—"The Shadow," with Miss Ethel Barrymore. She is in this play an invalid whose sufferings include a seclusion which forbids companionship with her husband, an able, busy, prospering man of large affairs. Her physicians, after years, tell her that she will be made whole and well, and her joy in this information is predicated entirely upon the happiness she will then carry to him. She keeps secret her convalescence through its slow progress, and then, sure of her physical integrity and buoyed by love, seeks him, to learn that she has been supplanted, that another woman is mother of his child, and that her own death, regarded as certain, has been awaited by him as marking the beginning of a new period of happiness in his life. Miss Barrymore's acting in the part of the wife was the subject of unrestrained laudation in the New York City reviews of the play, which is by Dario Nicodemi. Bruce McRae is of the cast. First time Monday evening.

Princess—"The White Feather," a play about Germany's spies in England. Lechmere Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry wrote it, and it is understood to be the most popular of the season's plays in London, where it is acted by Denis Eadie under the title of "The Man Who Stayed at Home." New York theatergoers also are reported to have betrayed a definite liking for the play, which seems to be melodrama written in the manner of comedy. The incident which carries the title used in this country, "The White Feather," would appear to have been suggested by Arnold Bennett's story, "The White Feather," but there is no kinship between the respective heroes. The stay-at-home of the play is a laconic, foppish, "smart" young Englishman. When, in the fireplace of a seaside boarding house in an English town, he discovers a wireless apparatus and a German code it is patent that the playwrights footlighted much of the first page stuff carried by the newspapers in the early weeks of the war. However, the herald of the play says nothing to indicate that the extra set of suspender buttons figures in the intrigue. The cast, specially put together for Chicago, includes Leslie Faber, Miss Jessie Glendinning, Miss Mona Morgan, Alan Mudie, Miss Deidre Doyle, Arthur Elliott, Miss Grace Hampton, Miss Louise Muldener, and Wyndham Standing—most of them names familiar to playgoers here. First time Tuesday evening.

Olympic—"Along Came Ruth," with James Bradbury most happily cast. The play is all about the waking up of a New England town called Oldpiot. Second week.

Powers'—"Outcast," with Miss Elsie Ferguson. Fifth week.

The Messrs. Aborn, managers of the Century Opera company while the money lasted, are back in the field of popular priced entertainments, and have weekly change companies reviving "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Man Who Owned Broadway," and the like.

The youth of the middle west will be given an opportunity to learn how to act this summer under the tutelage of Donald Robertson at the Cosmopolitan School of Music.

The music of Emmerich Kalman is on the official list of compositions that may be played in Russia, whose censor has banned all composers belonging to the nations with which Russia is at war. Kalman is a Hungarian, but the censor entered him in the belief that he was a Slav. "Sari" is Kalman's; so is "Miss Rabbit-Foot," to be sung in this country next season.

Miss Geraldine Farrar and Miss Marie Cahill, eminent respectively as singer and as songstress, are to go into the movies. The latter, it is said, will get $10,000 for doing "Judy Forgot" for the camera.

THE THEATERS.

By Percy Hammond.

CONTEMPLATING the sickness which sits caverned in the theater's hollow eye, the mourners of that institution keen softly to themselves in speculation as to what will happen after the fatal hour.

Will there be a sort of immortality; or, will the knell, the shroud, the mattock, and the grave, the deep, damp vault, the darkness and the worm end it all?

In case there is to be a pearly hereafter, in what direction must the drama proceed to find the portals thereto? Must it wander through the spaces, exhaling the vague inquiry of the perplexed Shinto soul—"Which way to heaven?"—or is there a charted, swift, and untroubled route straightway to the Elysian acreage?

Is Mr. "Al" Jolson, for instance, destined to traverse the unknown upon a cloud in search of eternal bare knees and badinage, or will some friendly guidepost point for him and others a celestial runway, bridging the via dolorosa? Will the drama leagues, and the critics, and the press agents, and the ticket brokers confusedly shriek and gibber in their cerements, or will the fates provide for them a comfortable jitney bound for their happy terminus?

One actor who believes that it is impious for a good man to be sad feels cheerful in the crisis, having thought it all out. He says that circa 1920 A. D. when the spoken drama is elsewhere deceased it will have a haven in New York City, in which capital all the plays to be seen in this land will be congregated. Theaters in the other American centers will be closed or employed for other uses and the inhabitants will have found new devices through which to be entertained—except when they visit the metropolis.

There a few great actors, great plays and great spectacles, musical and dramatic, will be on view. Since not many playhouses will be available only the best of presentations will be permitted. The economy of the theater will not then be weakened by the necessities of a thousand scattered plants. The "flivver" will be obsolete—nothing will exist but "Within the Laws" and "Peg o' My Hearts" and "Music Masters," "Chin-Chins," "Daddy Long Legs," "New Henriettas," Laurette Taylors, George M. Cohans, Al Jolsons, and other masters and masterpieces. Thither will the provincials flock when they feel the call of the drama—to "that little street in heaven," as Mr. Cohan used to sing, "that they call Broadway."

My actor friend perceives in this outcome another economic advantage to the land at large. Bereft of one of its major lures, urban life will not possess the sinister appeal that it is said to hold for the less populous communities. Thus the village belle in need of raiment will not combine shopping and matinée expeditions, but will buy her frocks at the local emporium. The country merchant's suffering through the R. F. D. and the mail order catalogue will in this way be mitigated, and prosperity return to Main street and the Public Square. The farmer's boy, realizing that life in any great city no longer includes frequent observation of Otis Skinner or of Robert B. Mantell in the flesh, will regard less coldly the joys of agriculture. Of course, the great benefit in this new order of things will be to the actor. No more will he be forced to leave home and the Lambs' club for the rigors of the frontier.

To fill the place deserted by Miss Fritzi Scheff at the Majestic last week the Marion Morgan dancers were hurried from New York with Miss Lydia Lopokowa at their head. There were six of these Marion Morgan dancers, all comely, superior young women, looking very cerebral, as if they might be addicted to interior decorating or contributions to the Little Review. They wore abbreviated pepla of wonderful hues and they danced "classic" dances. That is, their postures were influenced by ancient Grecian, Roman, and Egyptian themes. Between themes they posed at the back of the stage in effective friezes. Their faces perhaps more than their bodies expressed the joy of their art—but they were good to look upon, especially in the somewhat formal and arranged pictures of Roman games. Poor Miss Lopokowa! Only a little less famed in Russia, one is told, than is Pavlowa, she was greeted with scarcely a handclap. One felt almost as sorry for her as he did for Mr. Herbert Kelcey and Miss Effie Shannon the week previous. Despite their triumphs as Drama Players and in "Years of Discretion," nobody in the audience knew Mr. Kelcey and Miss Shannon. Vaudeville has no hospitality for the intermediate artist. But it welcomes the best just as warmly as it does the worst.

"A Play of Mother Love."

IT is pleasant to know that the Hattons are not prophets without honor in their own neighborhood, even if they did, somewhat bitterly, regard themselves as such after their misfortune with "The Call of Youth."

"The Songbird" is so successful, it is said, that Mr. Morosco, the manager, has assigned them to the composition of another work—to treat of two social strata and to be called, perhaps, "Above and Below." Last night's large audience at the Grand was most hospitable to "The Songbird"—a hospitality which, while I could not altogether share, delighted me but little the less on that account. My objections seemed so unimportant compared to the approval of the hundreds of others who were present.

I take the play's "big scene" as an example of this annoying tendency to dissent. Here was the gorgeous and aquiline Miss Jane Cowl, as a prominent vocalist, being mussed up in her boudoir by an ex-husband and a Russian tenor, and rescued from violence by the timely arrival of her discarded son. Midnight, negligee, soft lamps, faintly visible bed, shocked servant, loud words, impassioned protests and final peace in the arms of the boy she had so long and cruelly neglected. In that list certainly there were the concomitants of a thrill.

Yet there was none for me and the only reason I could find for the absence thereof was the unworthy one that I was not much interested in any of the participants! And for two acts Miss Cowl had been expressing with vehemence a perfectly Euripidean aversion to the vintage brewed from her own agony—said vintage being represented by the ambrosial Mr. Le Guerre. He was a seraphic son if ever there was one—pretty, eager, tremulous, adorable, imploring—a mother's boy to his ultimate curl. Still, these were not the reasons for which she declined him. She declined him because, as a prima donna, she lacked the maternal instinct. The possession of a grown son reflected on her youthfulness, and anyway she did not care to be bothered. Mr. Caldara, the divorced husband, was elegant of appearance and of conversational powers, and Mr. Courtleigh, the tenor, sang well and was humorous. Why, then, did they not interest every one? There is, perhaps, no credible answer.

The songbird's temperament, save in its illustration of "mother love" (as the program calls it) seemed to be sort of a temperamette. That is, it evinced itself in minor displays of petulance, truer to the songbird type, no doubt, than deeper and graver manifestations, but less appealing. She was determined to be temperamental without achieving it. She threw her gaiters at Woodrow, the butler, and scolded Sara, the maid, and was hot and cold by turns to her suitors and to the bishop—an imposing panorama of episcopacy, with everything on but the cathedral—to paraphrase one of the lines of the play. But they were all impressive. Sometimes they seemed to have learned their smartness out of a book—it had that studied quality indigenous to bohemia's suburbs. Diminutives, too, were in frequent use—even the bishop was called Uncle Nolly, and the two ingénues referred to each other as "boy" and "girl"—in fact, I think as "nice boy" and "nice girl," though I may be wrong.

Something tells me that if the Hattons had not been so faithful in portraying the false, affected, and self-conscious characters and atmosphere of their scenes—that if they had cheated and made them attractive—I should have been more interested in "The Songbird."

Notes of the Stage.

"All Over Town," the revue by Joseph Santley, which comes to the Garrick late in May, was launched at New Haven last week, causing, it is said, much undergraduate enthusiasm. Miss Beatrice Allen once a café dancer hereabouts, was the particular heroine of the performances.

Chicago Band Engaged for Park Concerts

By Ronald Webster.

THE Chicago band is about to begin its summer activities, and William Weil, its leader, will soon leave his desk and his books for the band stands in the parks. Its activities of course are concerned directly with making music, and the places where it will play and the dates when it will play are of primary interest.

A series, the exact length of which is not yet determined, will be given, as last year, on Wednesday and Saturday evenings in Grant park. The first of these is scheduled for Wednesday, July 7. The band has been definitely engaged by the South park commissioners for seven Thursday evening performances in Washington park and seven Tuesday performances in Jackson park. Whether or not the Lincoln park commissioners will make use of the organization for ten Sunday afternoon concerts in the new band stand in Lincoln park is yet to be decided.

A few miscellaneous engagements, such as a field day for Sprague, Warner & Co. on Sept. 6 at Ravinia, have been jotted down. In all, the band is at present sure of giving thirty concerts. Last year it gave sixty-three. With reviving business conditions the association hopes for enough money to give seventy or more before the summer is over.

At a time when the seraphic melodies of the band are to be reckoned future pleasures, its indirect activities are more interesting than almost anything else about it. Mr. Weil has some theories concerning them; theories which, if they are proven, will make the band infinitely more important than Maj. Funkhouser's squads of workers with the scarlet ladies; more potent for prosperity than Big Bill Thompson's dusty footed paraders of last Monday.

They would incidentally demolish one of Oscar Wilde's maxims about art. "All art is useless," he says in the preface to "The Portrait of Dorian Gray." Perhaps our esthetic friends, for whom Mr. Weil evinces a certain respect, may accuse him of being a utilitarian willing to bow to an ideal of base community comfort. At any rate he frankly believes in his band as a reformative influence.

He did not say, "Make the people dance in the open and they will not sin in the dance hall," nor did he add that the jingling coins in their pockets would make them patronize our admirable merchants on State street, but he thought it.

Do not imagine that Mr. Weil is mercenary. His theory about the jingling coins and the State street merchants (or the merchants of any other street) goes deeper. Mr. Weil believes that a well dressed man is likely to be a good citizen and that a clean shave is the outward mark of a clean conscience. There is much to be said for it. One of my moralizing friends is an advocate of the barber instead of the minister as the preserver of morality. If there were as many barber shops as there are missions on West Madison street, he declares, the reputation of Chicago as a model of civic virtue would be considerably enhanced.

Mr. Weil is not responsible for the language herein used. In reality he spoke something as follows: "A man slouching along the street in an old hat, old tie, dirty, hears the band and it spruces him up. It makes him feel like a man again. He turns over a new leaf, buys new clothes, and becomes a good citizen."

As a reform body, Mr. Weil sees more than this in the band association. He pictures in all the parks the great concourses of people which have blackened Grant park so many summer evenings.

Indeed, that crowds have been so large that if music is a truly refreshing and healthy recreation the moral effect must be already measurable. He sees then the crowds standing or sitting in the parks, along the lake shore, out of doors, and the dance halls shutting their doors in desperate loneliness and the free lunch in the saloons being fed to the house cat. I hope this is true. From observation of the bar adjacent to the opera house in Chicago during opera season it might be imagined that listening (to opera, at least) is a thirsty business. Possibly this is due to the aridity of certain operas, not to any defect of music in general.

There are other more or less economic ideas connected with the band, as Mr. Weil pictures its future. It will be an advertisement for Chicago. It will make a duty of welcoming prominent visitors, meeting them at the train and escorting them to their hotels. It will go as the Chicago band, on an annual tour (the first is in prospect), impressing upon the business men of other cities the more genial features of Chicago. It will, in the winters (this Mr. Weil admits to be a hope), give concerts for profit, the profit to be divided among the representative charities.

The question naturally presents itself, "How much money will it take to produce all of these reforms, to compass these desirable ends?"

The cost of a concert is about $225. No admission is charged. The association has 1,191 contributing members, individuals and firms. Last year there was about $25,000 for use in giving public concerts. If the sum were doubled, Mr. Weil says, the band could give a concert every day for about three months. It would then be enabled to give to the various charitable institutions, to give a series in the bridewell, to wheel its bandstand into vacant lots and play for a neighborhood.

"If we can only make the band a household word!" Mr. Weil exclaims. "Then we will have 5,000 members, not 1,000."

Like all other directors of amusements, Mr. Weil wants crowds and more crowds. He will not be satisfied easily; not so easily as those to whom crowds mean money. For him crowds mean power. He has been spoiled for anything less than the attendance of the entire city. He believes in the utility of music, and intnds to demonstrate it.

The Boston Symphony orchestra has had difficulty with the publishers of Max Reger's Variations and Double Fugue on a Merry theme and has left the composition off its programs. Dr. Muck bought the score and parts of this work seven years ago, together with the right of performance. Some of the parts for the wind instruments are worn out. The publishers refuse to sell or to rent the missing parts without a large royalty for each performance.

Chadwick has written another symphonic poem. It is called "Tam o' Shanter," was suggested by Bobbie Burns' verses, and is in humorous vein. Mr. Stock's new concerto for violin and orchestra will receive its first performance along with Mr. Chadwick's work, at the music festival at Norfolk Conn., on June 3. Zimbalist will play the solo part on Mr. Stock's work. On the program also is a new concerto for piano and orchestra by Sir Charles Stanford. Mr. Bauer has been chosen soloist for this occasion.

Young Women Display Styles Between Acts of "Nobody Home"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At the performance of a new musical farce called "Nobody Home" the other night the between act exodus of the cigaret and selzer devotees was momentarily checked by a parade of young women starting down the aisle.

The first of these, wearing a striking evening costume, was politely given room and no thought taken of her passing. The second, wearing a decidedly modern street costume and a natty skull cap of black straw, was likewise passed without comment. But by the time the third was reached and she was discovered to be wearing a white and black checkered riding habit, the file of men making for the exits turned to rubber, as the old jest has it, and promptly blocked the aisle. Rubber, in this particular state, being extremely difficult to separate from its base.

Investigation proved that the young women paraders represented the latest experiment in the practical use of the commercialized theater. It was a parade of manikins engaged and appareled by the gentlemen who had designed the costumes for the entertainment, and the fulfillment of one clause of his contract with the producers.

According to this clause he was to be permitted to display his styles in the aisles between acts. His models were to wander aimlessly from the orchestra pit to the outer doors, answering such pertinent questions as might be put to them but discouraging anything resembling flippancy. Neither were they to loiter on the way, or by nods or covert glances indicate a particular interest in any particular gentleman present. They were there to advertise gowns, not smiles, and their activity as models for this particular designer, they were informed, would be promptly interfered with if they were to behave like anything but perfect loidies, or fail to "act swell."

Whether or not they were advised to smile pleasantly at the reviewers present we cannot say. But even though they were, the advice would be wasted. In New York theaters the reviewers are the first to seek fresh air and sustenance between acts. It is a tradition with them.

The new plan, if generally adopted, is, obviously, pregnant with possibilities. We already are informed by program notes of the name of the person or firm furnishing the costumes, boots, riding whips, lamps, parasols, typewriters, shoestrings, wine, ginger ale, cigars, and rouge used in the production. Everything, in fact, but the rice powder, and that comes off so effectively onto the dark clothes of the men that it really advertises itself.

What more reasonable, then, than that these notes should be generously amplified? "The boots worn by the chorus in the first act of 'Hoopla, Who Cares?' will be shown by and on live models in the auditorium during the evening; the light cloth tops in the center aisle, suede ties in the right aisle, and bathing slippers in the left aisle. Conversation with the models on any subject save that of shoes will be discouraged, and all code messages will be vigorously censored by the management."

"The tights used in the tango tea scene of the second act are of the famous Wrinkless Silkaline brand, and are designed with especial view to supplying a longfelt need of the dansant and acrobatic ballroom dancers. Their quality may be the better judged if application is made to Mme. Boostum at the right of the lobby, between the second and third acts. Samples discreetly displayed to those interested."

"Those who have contended that real toupee making is a lost art in America would do well to examine the samples submitted by the Hairgone company shown on live models in the smoking room as well as on the stage. Our most attractive chorus men wear the Hairgone brand exclusively."

We may have exaggerated the probabilities, but the possibilities are enormous. And in view of the fact that last week the principal act at the leading vaudeville theater was a similar display of manikins, and that announcement was made that a "style show" would be staged four times each season, indicates just how close to the exhibition hall the stage is being moved.

A Passive Show.

AS for "Nobody Home" itself, it is a passive entertainment, brightened by an occasional song and one or two interesting personalities. Originally, I believe, it was an English farce called "Mr. Popple," and was played on the other side by a favorite comedian, W. J. Huntley. It was brought to America by Lawrence Grossmith, a member of the famous English family of comedians, and largely rewritten by Guy Bolton. New tunes by Jerome Kern were added to those originally supplied by Paul Rubens, and the resulting combination submitted to Elizabeth Marbury, one time play broker, but now promoter and encourager of budding talent. She formed a producing company, with Ray Comstock as her partner, engaged Elsie De Wolf to design the costumes and scenery, selected a chorus from among her dancing protégés and proceeded to stage the play at the small Princess theater. Incidentally it was Miss Marbury who discovered the Castles, Vernon and Irene, in Paris, and made them the vogue in New York.

In "Nobody Home," the principal character being that of a slow witted but excessively amiable Britisher from Ippleton, Miss Adele Rowland has the principal songs. The one most popular with the audience asserted in its refrain that "Any old night is a wonderful night if you are with a wonderful girl," continued with a series of similar statements, concluded, as though in justification of the entertainment in which it was offered, that "any old show is a wonderful show if you are careful in the selection of the lady accompanying you."

Margaret Anglin concluded that she would be in much finer fettle for her contemplated spring season of Greek drama in California if she were to pause temporarily in New York and indulge herself in a modern comedy romp. For the purpose she selected a play written some time ago by Paul Kester and played for a short time on tour last season by Annie Russell. "Beverley's Balance" is the present title, though it originally was known as "The Lady in the Case."

It is a pleasant little comedy in which the principal feminine character is a proud young daughter of Ole Virginny who came to New York to achieve a career as a singer and suffered a cracked voice. Reduced to the extremity of earning her living, she secures employment as a chorus girl, for which she has numerous qualifications aside from her uncertain soprano. This position, however, is neither lucrative nor pleasant, and when it happens that she overhears a client ask her lawyer cousin to provide him, the client, with a perfectly good and at the same time highly respectable co-respondent who is willing to permit herself to be technically compromised for a liberal fee, she promptly offers her services.

Under her nom de theater she will agree to be seen dining with the gentleman, and, properly chaperoned by her aunt, will welcome him at all hours to her uptown apartment. In this way sufficient evidence will be furnished to guarantee the divorce and the pressing financial needs of the heroine will be taken care of. The plan works fairly well, though the party of the first part, being the gentleman seeking the divorce, is rather inclined to overdo his attentiveness to "the party of the other part," and would, if the lady acting as his co-respondent were agreeable, complicate matters by falling in love with her. But it happens that it is the lawyer cousin she really loves, and so by getting the would-be divorcees together and locking them in her apartment she brings about a reconciliation that permits her to marry the man of her choice at the last curtain. It is not a play that seems likely to remain long in the Anglin repertory.

News of the Musicians.

The first of a series of five concerts under the auspices of the Society of American Musicians will be given at Fullerton hall this afternoon at 3 o'clock (with a repetition at 4:15). Those who will present the program are: Ludwig Becker, Harry Linden, Fred Linden, and Richard Wagner, Florence Scholl, Sidney Arno Dietch, and Alexander Gray. By these concerts the society purposes to give musical entertainment at a small price and provide opportunity for public appearance for young Chicago musicians.

Frits Kreisler tells in his book on the war how his musical ear was able to detect the position of the Russian guns. He noticed that shells made two sounds, shrill and rising in pitch, and dull and descending in the scale. The first were fired by the Austrian guns near him, the latter by the Russian guns. By venturing out between the lines with a scouting party and noting the exact spot where all the shells had the same sound he was able to give his commanding officer almost the exact position of the Russian guns.

The Metropolitan Opera house is to depend less on New York and more on the "provinces" next season than at any time for the last five years. Philadelphia, having responded this season with $10,000 for ten nights, is to be vouchsafed twenty nights; while Boston, which will not have a company of its own, will get at least three weeks. The season in New York will be not longer than twenty weeks, with no performance on Philadelphia nights. Of the "great" singers, only Farrar and Caruso will get as much as or more than they have been paid. It is known that Miss Farrar's increase will be at least $700 a night. The pay of all the other singers who have been reengaged has been deeply cut; while some of the newly engaged notables are to sing for from forty to sixty per cent less than they were asking a year ago.

* * *

Miss Irene Pawloska has been engaged by Cleofonte Campanini as a soprano of the new company, which will give grand opera in the Auditorium in November. [The guarantors' organization will no longer be known as the Chicago Grand Opera company, but as the Chicago Opera association, incorporated.] Miss Pawloska sang here this winter in the Hungarian operetta named "Sari," and pronounced at least seven other ways. She sang well, and seemed to possess abundant temperament; but her conduct in performance suggested that she would be happier in the larger scale of grand opera.

COLONIAL.

Joe Morris and Charley Allen.

"Say, Morris, you're not looking well."

"I ain't feeling well."

"A case of indigestion?"

"No, a case of beer. By the way, have you any cigarets? I love to smoke cigarets."

"I had a brother who used to smoke cigarets, but he's dead now."

"What killed him?"

"He smoked too many. I also had an uncle who liked cigarets, but he's in the insane asylum. He smoked too many."

"That's nothing. I had a brother who went into the pork packing business and at the end of the first year he had one thousand hams on hand that he couldn't sell."

"One thousand hams that he couldn't sell? How did that happen?"

"He smoked too many."

McVICKER'S.

Brown and Jackson.

"How much for your hack to the park?"

"Five dollars."

"I do not want to buy the rig."

"I should hope not, the horse alone is worth $5.50."

"Why did you call your first born son Bill?"

"Because he was born the first of the month."

"Did you say that Jim stole your handkerchief because it looked like the one that was stolen from you? Why, I have one just like it.

"That's very likely, there were two stolen."

"I suppose I will have to be up all night again. I have to make up my expense account.

"I am a victim of insomnia. For instance, I can't sleep if I hear the cat on the back fence."

"Here's something that will be effective and you will be able to sleep tonight."

"When do I take it?"

"You don't take it; you give it to the cat in some milk."

"I heard that you were very musical. Is that right?"

"I should say so, I was born with drums in my ear."

"How can you tell the age of a turkey?"

"By the teeth."

"By the teeth? A turkey has no teeth."

"I admit that, but you forget that I have."

PALACE.

Raymond and Caverley:

"I've got a couple of dogs."

"What are their names?"

"Try and Guess."

"O, let me see. Fido and Sport?"

"No. Try and Guess."

"Well, I did try and guess."

"Then tell me one of the dogs names and maybe I can guess the other. What was one of them named?"

"O, Try—"

"You make me tired. Won't you tell me the name of the other one them?"

"Guess."

"Look here, you stop that or I am going to have nothing to do with you. If you didn't want to tell me the names of the dogs, what do you start this for, anyway?"

"O, I don't mind telling you the names of the dogs."

"Well, what are they?"

"Try and Guess."

"The impudent thing!"

"Yes, I've been getting fat lately, and when I got in the car there was a lady who wanted to go up also. 'You'll have to wait, madam, till I take the crowd up,' said the elevator boy."

"O, Mr. Dailey, why do you tuck your napkin in your neck."

"I'm use to eating in a barber shop."

LATEST NEWS FROM MOVIE LAND

by Mae Tinee

"DRY" FILMS FOR KANSAS.

THE new Kansas censorship law says that even moving pictures must be "dry" in Kansas. The rules already prescribed permit of no scenes of drunkenness, drinking, barrooms, or anything connected with the liquor business being shown. Murders, robberies, or other scenes of crime or rascality will not be permitted, and the censorship will go much farther than it would be made to apply to regular theaters for the reason that children are the largest patrons of the movies.

It is my painful duty to announce to you that our "Favorite Film Star" contest, started last Sunday, has proved a fizzle. You evidently didn't like the idea, for most of you refused to either vote or write essays. Those who did—at least a majority—insisted on writing about Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. George Gould as their "society" favorites and for Lincoln Beachy and Barney Oldfield as their "dare devil heroes," so the contest is closed. Lillian Walker was most popular as the "Madcap Heroine" and you will receive her picture next week. Also $50 will be paid for the best essay about her. Mrs. H. R. Gardner, 2661 Rhine street, Chicago, is the winner.

"A Fool There Was" as a film drama is one of the plays which was rejected by the Chicago censor board when first it was presented to it and which since has been favored with a permit. The performances will be restricted to adults.

Francis X. Bushman has affiliated himself with the Metro company and will appear in "Quality" brand pictures.

Carlyle Blackwell has joined the Leasky company and is reveling in his part of the young American in Harold MacGrath's photoplay, "The Puppet Crown," with Ina Claire opposite him and Tom Forman in the juvenile part.

The Imperial theater, Madison street and Western avenue, opens this afternoon for a season of high class motion pictures. A continuous performance from 1 until 11 p. m. will be given daily. The program, made up of at least one feature picture and several single reel offerings from America's leading picture producers, will be changed each day.

Thomas Ricketts and the company of feature players from the American Film Manufacturing company under his direction spent several days recently in Los Angeles getting slum scenes for the coming feature, "The House of a Thousand Scandals." As guides the company had a sergeant and two deputies of the Los Angeles police force.

Thanhouser fans will be interested to know that petite Mignon Anderson and Morris Foster, both of that company, were recently married in New Rochelle, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Foster will spend their honeymoon in Florence.

J. H. Gimore, for several years the instructor in dramatic art at the Chicago Musical college, and later associated with Miss Gertrude Cougian in the vaudeville farce entitled "Food," has been engaged to play the part of Senator Knox in the United Photoplays company's first feature film, "The Victory of Virtue." Mr. Gilmore has appeared before the public for many years and has been associated with many of the prominent producers of the day. He was the star of the Castle Square Stock company at Boston for several years.

Feature Films of the Week.

AN INNOCENT SINNER—[Kalem, three reel, featuring Katherine La Salle.] A story of village life, melodramatic as to conception and production. Miss La Salle, as Hinda, the orphan, has a lot to contend with at the hands of a base deceiver, but, thanks to a number of things, she triumphs in the end. Holds your interest even if it doesn't appeal to your credulity.

A PILLAR OF FLAME—[Vitagraph, two reel, featuring Norma Talmadge and Harry Morey.] The rather sordid story of a woman whose ambition in life is to become a great singer and the escape, through her folly, of her daughter from a life like her own.

BEULAH—[Balboa, six reel picturization of novel by Augusta J. Evans, featuring Henry B. Walthall.] A vividly dramatic production well worked out.

ONE SUMMER'S SEQUEL—[American, two reel, featuring Winifred Greenwood and Ed Coxen.] Heralded as a tense social drama.

THE BREATH OF ARABY—[Vitagraph, three reel, Broadway star feature, showing Helen Gardner.] "If you ever crave a love charm, be sure it's good for you before you put yourself out to obtain it," seems to be the moral of this picture.

THE PROFLIGATE—[Essanay, three reels, featuring E. H. Calvert, Bryant Washburn, and Ruth Stonehouse.] A gripping drama.

MAY BLOSSOM—[Famous Players, featuring all star cast.] Picturization of what was a great stage success. This is a drama of half a century ago, abounding in romance and militarism.

THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY—(American. First episodes in new $20,000 serial photoplay, featuring Lottie Pickford, Irving Cummings, and all star cast.) Full of heart interest and thrills that send the cold shivers up and down your spine.

THE DESTROYER—(Kalem, three reels, featuring Anna Nilsson, Alice Hollister, and Harry Millarde.) The destroyer is a woman. But she meets with a good woman who proves to be an obstacle.

THE BLACK SHEEP—(Biograph, two reels.) Love, sin, and the police in a mixup.

THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD—(Selig Red Seal, five reel, featuring Kathlyn Williams and all star cast.) Picturization of Harold MacGrath's novel of the same name.

THE LOVE LIAR—(Pathe. Fourth drama in series of twelve, "Who pays?" Three reels, featuring Ruth Roland and Henry King.) The words of the old song, "A Bird in a Gilded Cage," pretty well cover this picture. "Her beauty she sold for an old man's gold," etc.

WITH BRIDGES BURNED—(Edison, three reels, featuring Mabel Trunnelle and Augustus Phillips.) Fate decrees cruelly and unusually that they separate on their wedding day.

WOMAN AND WINE—(World, five reels, featuring William Elliott.) He has quite a tussle with the two of them.

HELP WANTED—(Oliver Morosco-picturization of play, featuring Owen Moore and Lois Meredith.) One suspicions it will be a sure fire success.

Stationary Photoplays.

FINE ARTS—"The Avenging Conscience. D. W. Griffith masterpiece.

ORCHESTRA HALL—"The Woman." Lasky-Belasco picturization of the play by that name. All start cast.

ZIEGFELD—"A Fool There Was." William Fox picturization of play taken from Rudyard Kipling's poem. Interesting if morbid subjects interest you.

Some Plain Facts About Radiators—

Architects, Heating Contractors and Steamfitters Take Notice:

Ellis Parker Butler once wrote a story called "Pigs is Pigs" which made him famous. And to some extent "Radiators is Radiators." They are nearly all made of cast iron, by the same kind of machinery, the same kind of workmen and about the same styles. The only real difference is the manner in which the sections are assembled, or joined, and as this is the only real difference some manufacturers like to claim all the virtues for their particular form of radiator connection and condemn all others.

The sections of KEWANEE Radiators are assembled with heavy Malleable iron slip nipples, and are held together with heavy steel rods running the entire length of the radiator.

We have used this form of radiator connection for years and we know it has stood more strenuous factory tests than any other kind of connection (and we have tested them all). And we have never known a KEWANEE Radiator as we now make it, and have made it for years, to leak or crack at this connection when on the job. And it is a sure thing if any of them did leak or crack we would know about it.

We don't claim that KEWANEE Radiators are the only good radiators, because we know there are others. But we also know that KEWANEE Radiators are reliable, and we will match them in any way with any radiators made anywhere by anybody.

If they were not good radiators—and if the form of connection we use was not good—we would be unable to get KEWANEE Radiators specified by leading architects and used by leading heating contractors and steamfitters throughout the country.

The fellow who knocks the heavy malleable iron push nipple radiator connection has only one leg to stand on. Years ago some radiators were assembled with thin steel push nipples. It is true that this form of connection was not the most satisfactory—but it is unfair to condemn what has made good—the heavy malleable iron push nipple radiator connection—because some radiators, a long time ago, were connected with push nipples of the wrong material and of material of insufficient weight.

We are extremely proud of KEWANEE Radiators, and the way they are put together. We are not saying that other people don't make good radiators. But we do object, and object strenuously, when some other manufacturer says things which are not true, and that is what he does when he condemns the heavy malleable iron push nipple radiator connection.

Ask for our special radiator book.

Badger State Has Charms for Autoists.

By L. M. Steffens.

IF I contemplated a week's outing in a motor car I should choose the state of Wisconsin for my field. The Badger state has spent thousands of dollars improving its roads in the past two years. The improvements were made with a view towards linking its cities and resorts. Consequently, to travel, especially in the lower half of the state, is not difficult. The state has had the advantage of possessing several hundred energetic civic organizations and good roads clubs which have realized the value of improving the highways. Sign posting has been the chief work of these organizations. It is next to impossible to lose one's way in Wisconsin. The sign posts indicate directions and mileages between the diffirent cities and lakes around which thousands of resorts have sprung up.

The Dells of Wisconsin river, attainable via Kilbourn, the best known and probably the most popular of Wisconsin's scenic attractions, drew scores of motorists from Chicago last season.

To reach the Dells from Chicago follow this route: Go northwest in Milwaukee avenue to Wheeling, thence through Buffalo Grove, Waconda, Bang's Lake, Lily Lake, and then to McHenry. This is a gravel and dirt road. From McHenry go north to Richmond, Genoa Junction, Bloomfield, and Lake Geneva.

Milwaukee is a good objective point for a two day run. The best road to the Cream City is via Evanston, Winnetka, Highland Park, Fort Sheridan, Lake Forest, Sommers, Corliss, and Franksville. This is known as the west route and the roads are in a good condition in dry weather. One may also reach Milwaukee from Chicago by going northwest in Milwaukee avenue through Niles and Wheeling, Half Day, Libertyville, Gray's Lake, Antioch, Burlington, Waterford, Mukwonago, Waukesha, and Brookfield. Although this is a considerably longer way the roads are far superior than the other routes at the present time and in connection it will enable the tourist to take in the numerous resorts. The shore route via Evanston, Wilmette, Glencoe, Highland Park, Waukegan, Kenosha, and Racine is the better way to go in wet weather.

With Milwaukee as a center there are any number of pleasant trips north that may be made. Here are several of the best routes:

Leaving Milwaukee for Fond du Lac go northwest to Menominee Falls, Meeker, Schlesingerville, Addison, mo, Theresa, Lorima, and Byron. This is the most direct way and the roads are good gravel over rolling country.

Fond du Lac is situated at the south end of Lake Winnebago. There is a picturesque drive which parallels the shore line of Lake Winnebago from Fond du Lac to Oshkosh. From Oshkosh there is a route to Green Bay via Menasha, Appleton, Kaukana, Wrightstown, and Greenleaf. If one wishes to invade the northern peninsula of Michigan follow the route along Green bay, going through Duck Creek, Suamico, Brookside, Oconto, Peshtigo, Marinette, Wis., and then to Menominee.

Avoiding Green Bay and the northern peninsula of Michigan for Stevens Point, Wausau, or Eau Claire, leave Oshkosh and go north to Fremont, Waupaca, Sheridan, Amherst, and then Stevens Point. For Wausau go directly north for 34.2 miles over gravel, dirt, and some good roads. Leaving Stevens Point for Eau Claire go through Junction City, Milladore, Sherry, Auburndale, Marshfield, Loyal, Longwood, Withee, Thorpe, Stanley, Boyd, and Cadott to Chippewa Falls, where you follow trolley to Eau Claire.

For Motorist and Motorcyclist

By High

Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

CARBON robs a motor of about 30 per cent of its efficiency. Carbon accumulates rapidly. To keep cylinders free from the deposit a thorough cleaning every thirty days is recommended. Under ordinary circumstances removing carbon demands a day and no little labor. Yet the need of removing the carbon is imperative.

For the average motorist cleaning the cylinders was an impossible task. A mechanic usually had to do this for him. Mechanics are expensive at the usual rate of 75 cents an hour. A good job would cost in the neighborhood of $7. Frequently the motor was injured by the application of acids.

Recent tests of Laxine, called the thirty minute carbon remover, proved satisfactory. Laxine is efficient and simple to use. It does away with the expense and necessity of mechanical skill. It is one of the most important discoveries of recent years and may be used freely without damage to the motor.

SAXON $395
The Modern Horse-and-Phaeton for the Woman
Here is an automobile that a woman can use as easily and economically as the horse and phaeton of years ago. It requires no groom. It never has to be harnessed. It doesn't eat except when running.
Mrs. Ray M. Mackey, Saxon owner, of San Antonio, Tex., writes: "My Saxon is very easy on tires and gasoline. It has the power to climb hills on country roads and to get in and out of traffic on crowded streets without difficulty. I like its neat and up-to-date appearance."
The Saxon is always ready; turn the self-starter and it is at your service—for making calls, for shopping or taking you and the "kiddies" into the country.
It can go miles in the same time and at the same expense that the horse and buggy took to traverse a few city blocks.
This Roadster seats two grown-ups and a child comfortably, or one grown-up and two or three children.
Many women have so far not attempted to drive an automobile because the cars were too heavy and too extravagant in upkeep cost.
The Saxon Roadster is different. It offers you all you can ask in comfort, reliability, ease of handling, and gives you every automobiling pleasure at the minimum cost—$395 to buy; less than ½ cent per mile to run.

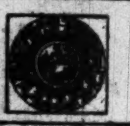
MAY



When the Shad Blossoms

THERE is a brief period—in the life of the woods a moment—which a thunder storm or heavy wind may shorten or placid weather may lengthen, when the shad bush blooms. This is the period of spring's most delicate, fragile beauty, surpassing even the later odorous, incarnadined season of thorn, haw, and orchard blossoms.

The woods first have shown a mist of green, a marginal filament of it where the most responsive buds are opening. Almost under observation the mist has thickened until one believes that the transformation is visibly taking place. It is a gossamer veiling of green, a fairy tulle of lightest mesh, a part of the air as well as of the woods and thickets. It has glints of yellow and touches of crimson.

Without losing delicacy or fragility, remaining as a precipitated perfume, the mist grows in palpability, becomes less aerial and more earthly, and just as it seems that the moment cannot be held longer, that the spectacle must come out of the fairy mist and into the sunny reality, the shad bush blooms and the ecstacy of the eyes is complete.

It is the most ephemeral of the phases of the spring transformation. The shad is the expression of the fragility which has been the character of this season, when under foot the blood root is blossoming and when in the thickets the fox sparrow is singing. A pelting rain scatters the white shad petals, a heavy wind knocks them broadcast. The elements must be placid and kindly or the beauty is gone in the twinkling of an eye.

Chief Healey's Broken Bones Show Perils of Mounted Cop's Job.

TO have forty broken bones in his body and still be able to attend to his daily duties is the distinction of Chicago's new superintendent of police, Charles C. Healey. Chief Healey has come to be quite a favorite with surgeons, who consider him a regular customer. This quiet and unassuming officer does not think there is anything extraordinary in the fact that he has so often undergone repairs.

His broken bones are quite commonplace to him, being but a part of the game he is playing. He never boasts of his injuries, and yet, if you question him and he is not too busy, he will allow you to feel the four knots on his left forearm, counting the fractures yourself, and will tell you of the times when each of his legs was broken, one in two places, and how he cames to fracture his collar bones, a shoulder blade, and almost half of his ribs.

You see, Chief Healey, until his appointment last Monday by Mayor Thompson, was captain of the mounted police—and the mounted policemen have risky jobs. It is all a part of the game, Chief Healey will tell you—all mounted policemen are liable to get bones broken now and then.

If you talk among the mounted policemen you will find that they are not only liable to get fractures but that they frequently do, and that the chief's skeleton through his fractures outnumber theirs, is merely an illustration of that of any mounted policeman.

These broken bones are the testimony to the adventures and hazards in the lives of these men.

Ornamental as they appear on the streets, the members of the mounted squad have more than their share of adventure and more than their proportionate number of calls to risk their lives and limbs in the performance of their duties. Statistics show that in cases of fires, riots, and runaways, where quick action is necessary to handle the situation, the mounted men do 90 per cent of the hazardous work. Out of 186 men in the service, seventy-five were sent to hospitals with serious injuries in one recent year, while a number of others were laid up at their homes with less serious hurts.

According to records kept at headquarters, 50 per cent of these injuries were sustained while men were attempting to stop runaway horses. In such emergencies it is the duty of the mounted policeman to dash in front of the frightened animals, if necessary, to check their speed before they run down the crowds on the streets. Often, when the excitement has abated, the patrolman is dragged from underneath the tangled mass of scrambling horse flesh and broken vehicles.

Next to the number of injuries sustained in stopping runaway horses, a large per cent of the accidents are due to wet pavements. Often horses slip on the damp slopes near the curb and fall on their riders. It was in such a fall that Chief Healey received his last broken collar bone. He was commanding a mounted escort accompanying ex-President Taft from the Auditorium to his hotel when the accident occurred. Serious as it was, however, the captain was back at his office inside of three days. Despite all his injuries he has not spent much time in the hospital. A little thing like a broken bone hasn't interfered with his work long at a time.

It is at large fires that the mounted police get in much of their most telling work. Next to the firemen, they are the most important figures on the ground. But for their efforts the work of the firemen would be severely hampered by the eager crowds. Mounted policemen are drilled to handle a fire situation just as they would any other emergency.

These men are also in the front, taking their part of the risks, when there is much rescue work to be done. Rescuing children from in front of rapidly approaching street cars and speeding automobiles is another of their almost daily achievements.

The mounted police squad of Chicago is the second largest and perhaps the best drilled in the world. It was organized by Chief Healey in 1906.

Where's your nerve?

Are You DEAF!

Hard-of-Hearing?

You may be so deaf that you do not believe that you will ever again—be able to hear distinctly.

Or you may have tried one hearing device after another, and finding them all of about the same degree of inefficiency, have come to the conclusion that it is impossible for anyone to construct a hearing device that will really enable deaf people to hear.

We tell you emphatically that, no matter how deaf you are (unless stone deaf) you CAN hear distinctly with the aid of the marvelous

"Acousticon"

No matter what your past experiences with hearing devices have been, and no matter how skeptical you may be, you certainly owe it to yourself to find out exactly how greatly the "Acousticon" will benefit you. Nothing short of absolute proof of the truthfulness of our claims for this wonderful device should satisfy you.

Call for Trial and Remarkable Proof

Call at our office and try the "Acousticon." This will convince you quicker than anything else that with it you can hear distinctly—that it is so vastly superior to every other hearing device that there is actually no comparison. If you can't call, let us have your name and address and we will send an "Acousticon" with a demonstrator to you so that you can have a demonstration of its wonderful efficiency right at your home. This will cost you nothing—nor obligate you in any way.

Most Scientific Invention of the Age

Please don't confuse the "Acousticon" with any other hearing device. Others may resemble it more or less closely in outward appearance—but right there all similarity ceases. The "Acousticon" is the only scientifically correct hearing device the world has ever known—the only one which is recognized and endorsed by the world's famous Ear Specialists. Sound waves transmitted Nature's way and magnified up to 400 per cent in rare cases where that much augmentation of sound is necessary. Intermediately it may be regulated to suit every known degree of deafness.

PROVE IT TODAY—CALLOR WRITE

Be convinced that the marvelous "Acousticon" will enable you to hear better than you have ever dreamed it possible for you to hear—hear clearly and distinctly every sound—hear ordinary conversation without a word blurred. And if you can't call don't fail to send us your name and address so we can send the "Acousticon" to you without cost or obligation on your part. If you live out of town, write for free copy of our great book and special free trial offer.

EASY TERMS

Considering the wonderful efficiency and the fact that it is the only successful hearing device, the price of the "Acousticon" is remarkably low. Low as it is, however, you may have easy credit terms if desired.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

EMILE VERHAEREN
Portrait by JOHN S. SARGENT.

BELGIUM'S LAUDED POET.

NOT long ago when he was suggested for membership in the French academy, Maurice Maeterlinck named Emile Verhaeren as a worthier candidate for that honor. That called the attention of the literary world to the fact that Belgium was the home of more than one poet. Articles on the Belgian literary revival began to appear in the magazines, and always the name of Emile Verhaeren stood as the most distinguished. His work, however, has not been well known except by hearsay. To answer the demand for something from the pen of the great Belgian poet the John Lane company has republished a small volume of selections translated by Alma Strettell which was brought out first some years ago. The selections are made from three volumes published in what the translator calls the middle period of the poet's work, together with three poems of his later period. They are merely a morsel to tempt one to further delectation. There is soon to be an English edition of a series of Mr. Verhaeren's works published by Constable & Co. in London, which one can but hope may be taken over by some American publisher. The portrait frontispiece of Emile Verhaeren was specially drawn for this edition by John S. Sargent. It is reproduced here. Does he look like a man of 60?

"The Modern Drama" (Huebsch), from the pen of Ludwig Lewisohn, is sure to find friends among those whose interest in things dramatic is a seriously thoughtful one. Not only does it contain in its less than 300 pages comments upon the tage and playwrights of the last thirty years, but there are numerous study lists and a comprehensive and critically annotated bibliography of the modern drama. Mr. Lewisohn is a professor at the Ohio State university and a lecturer of the Drama league circuit.

"Who is W. Dane Bank, the man who wrote 'James'?" Reviewers have made guesses, some of them that he must be an American because "James" (Doran) has the American quickness of action. Those who know declare that he is English and that he founded his pen name upon Dane Bank, sometimes called Dane-Shot Bank, a hamlet of cottages and hat factories four miles from Manchester. The author's grandfather lived there and started a factory. The cognoscenti won't tell his real name, though.

Sven Hedin's "With the German Armies in the West" (John Lane) will not have a publication in England, it is averred by a London correspondent, for great is the hatred in English hearts for one Sven Hedin. His attacks on England in his early contributions concerning the war to Swedish papers resulted in absolute loss of prestige among the Londonites. One club which had made him an honorary member promptly removed his name from membership; the Royal Geographical society, which had awarded him the Victoria medal in recognition of his travels, expelled him, and the honorary degrees conferred upon him by Oxford and Cambridge were indignantly withdrawn. The correspondent naïvely adds that "no other course was open to the clubs and societies than that so reluctantly chosen."

Mitchell Kennerley's "Modern Drama Series" is to have an addition. "Lovers," "The Free Woman," and "They," three plays by Maurice Donnay, will be published immediately in a translation by Barrett H. Clark. Mr. Clark has included in the volume an introduction on their author, who is best known to us through "The Return to Jerusalem," which Mme. Simone presented here a few years ago.

Anent the book business hear Montague Glass through two of his characters: "Why is it that nowadays books is pretty near always carried as a side line?" said Jacob Plotkin to B. Rashkind. Mr. Rashkind shrugged his shoulders. "Believe me, Plotkin," he said, "if Abraham Carnegie would go to work and build a building where a feller could get free for a week the loan of a pair of pants, y'understand, and then go back and exchange 'em for another pair of pants in a week's time, understand me, or even sooner if the goods didn't suit him, y'understand, why, then all them fellers which now runs a pants business exclusively, Plotkin, would also got to close up."

Walter Pritchard Eaton, author of "Twin Fires" (Doubleday-Page) and dramatic critic of somewhat caustic pen, has just been presented with an order of exclusion from the Shubert theaters. The case of Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the New York Times, against the Messrs. Shubert involving the question of the right of a theatrical management to exclude a critic because he has previously criticized adversely has been postponed in the courts. There is no telling whether Mr. Eaton will really be excluded or not.

A letter from London confides that Bernard Shaw is liable to literary death on account of his position on the war. If he would only keep out of the controversy, it is averred, he might have some chance of regaining a few of the friends he lost at the beginning of the war, but he is not only continuing in his attacks on British ideals but he is making ludicrous mistakes occasionally. "In the Nation correspondence the other day," the letter says, "he actually made Alaska one of the czar's dominions, being ignorant of the fact that the United States purchased the territory away back in the later 60s." We do not feel so vigorously against G. B. S., but then we know him best at his best.

In the English edition of James Lane Allen's "Sword of Youth" the author dedicates this "remembrance of the soldier youth of the civil war" to "the soldier youth of England in this war of theirs." The book has received most favorable reviews in England. "'The Sword of Youth' makes a definite contribution to the literature of war by its intense presentation of those secret tragedies which under stress of war test the single soul," declares a reviewer in the London Times.

"Barbara's Marriages" (Harpers) is the name of Maude Radford Warren's newest novel. Chicagoans are always interested in the work of Chicago authors and "Barbara's Marriages" is, according to reports, especially interesting.

Removal Piano Sale

It is absolutely necessary that we dispose of a special group of seventeen pianos during the next six days.

They are excellent instruments—each one in good tone and repair, though all have seen some service, but because of the pending rental of the vacant store space heretofore occupied by our Bargain Department this lot is to be sold at once at remarkably low prices and on VERY EASY TERMS OF PAYMENT.

Most of these pianos have been taken in exchange for Carola Inner-Players and Conover and Mason & Hamlin Pianos. They come from the best homes in Chicago and have received the best of care, besides which each one has been thoroughly conditioned in our special repair factory.

If you are in the market for a piano, no matter what make or wood you desire, or what price you wish to pay, you will by all means want to inspect this special group.

Easy Terms of Payment can be arranged to suit your wishes, and if you do not wish to buy at this time you may rent any one of them at very reasonable rates, with privilege of buying later.

SMALL APARTMENTS

NORTHEAST CORNER
50TH-PL. AND ST. LAWRENCE-AV.

Located in one of the most desirable sections of the South Side, overlooking WASHINGTON PARK; easy walking distance to "L" express, Cottage Grove and Indiana surface lines; convenient to tennis courts, theaters, and shopping district.

Apartments contain THREE AND FOUR ROOMS EACH. Every apt. has sun parlor or front porch. Large, light, airy rooms, plenty of large closets, full size kitchens and pantries. Each apt. has large dressing rooms and MURPHY IN-A-DOR BEDS. This makes these apts. as efficient as ordinary apts. of four, five, and six rooms, with two less rooms to light, furnish, and keep clean. Bath and electric fixtures are the best and everything has been installed that will solve the servant problem and simplify housekeeping. The efficiency of these small apts. cannot be appreciated until you see them. Ready for inspection NOW. See them today, as they are going fast.

FLORIDA LANDS ON THE BEAUTIFUL INDIAN RIVER.

8,000 acres of land fronting on the Indian River, just 9 miles north of Rockledge on main line of the Florida East Coast Railway. This property is the best colonization proposition in the United States today; it is all Orange, Grapefruit, and Trucking lands, and when the war in Europe is over will sell for from $200.00 to $300.00 per acre. One crop of potatoes will pay for the land and you can get two crops each year. It is also fine for grazing cattle. You investors who have been on the long side of the market get busy and buy this. Unfortunately for me I was on the short side so must sell at the sacrificing price of $25.00 per acre; one-half cash, balance 1, 2, and 3 years, 6%. Have your banks ask Florida banks about this tract.

THE AVERAGE FARMER.

[Special excursions Tuesdays, May 4th and 18th.]

AN INVESTIGATION of 438 families on farms in ten states was made by government experts and brought out facts that will surprise those who toil in cities and have to pay out money for every mouthful of food they eat.

THE AVERAGE FARM FAMILY consumed in food per year $401.95, of which $330.85, or over 83 per cent, was raised on the farm. The total value of food, fuel, oil, and shelter enjoyed by each family was $505, of which the farm furnished $429, leaving only $76 to be paid out in money for such things as coffee, sugar, salt, tea, and groceries—impossible of production on the farm but which were paid for by money obtained from the farm products. The investigators found the average annual cost of maintaining a grown person on the farm was $176, and only 28 per cent of this amount was paid out in cash, the other 72 per cent being furnished by the farm.

THE INDEPENDENCE OF THE FARMER was strikingly shown by this investigation. Where is the man who can live a year in any city in the United States for $176? And, remember, the average farmer's table is loaded down with the best that grows. Thus he has the most and the best and it costs him the least; and he may well be envied for his good appetite, robust health, and contentment in his life out of doors.

MANY A MAN—formerly a farm boy—many a farm renter hear the call of opportunity in the Swigart Tract of Lands in Michigan's Clover and Fruit Belt. Many of you have reached the point that requires courage and action on your own part to lift you up out of nonprogressiveness. Courage and action make the most wonderful success formula known. Try it. Get the pride of ownership. Prepare your way for a higher plane of living and better citizenship in a community where you will count for more among men.

THE AVERAGE WORKMAN in the city can easily save $100 to $150 per year. If he puts it in the savings bank he merely rents it out to capitalists who get the benefit of its earning power. A savings account does not build itself up at all worth considering in our short span of life. But put it into farm land and you make it active; it means your home, a money earning place, a going business, a dividend producer, and that you share in the increase of values made by the whole community.

THE SWIGART PLAN meets your requirements by a small down payment that will enable you to start at once on most any 40 acres and on terms that will give you seven years' time if you wish. In connection with present low prices it opens up possibilities for a thousand more families on the unsold lands in this tract. The way has been prepared, the rough work done. The roads, schools, churches, railroads, and towns are all there. Our townships every season have a good degree of progress to their credit and welcome the largest percentage of settlers who come to this thriving part of the state—Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford counties. My plan doubly protects the purchaser by insuring him for the unpaid balance after part of the contract is paid, and when he goes on the land there is every provision to take care of him. He is visited regularly by agricultural experts, whom I employ by the year to visit every settler's farm and advise as to the best methods in all branches of farming. We differ in this respect from most land companies, because after our customers get their deeds and settle on the land we continue working and coöperating with them to promote our mutual interests and further develop the district. Ask about our seed distributing arrangement, farmers' institutes, prizes for best crops, demonstration farm, and our large orchards.

WHAT THE AVERAGE FARMER can do is told in a 72 page book, plainly printed, simply worded, and illustrated with 115 views of this tract. This book is based on averages and shows what you can do if you are as capable as the average man. Call at my offices for it if you can, and also get a large map, and see samples of our 1914 crops; also see the 190 stereopticon views that are constantly being shown in my stereopticon room. If you cannot call, then write me fully and I will be pleased to send you the book and other literature about the branch of farming in which you are interested. I can't begin to describe the resources and natural advantages in this space, but it will pay you to investigate if you are looking for land in a general farming country where stock raising, dairying, and poultry are very successful and the farms produce a big variety of staple, money earning crops, including clover, rye, vetch, wheat, oats, 90 day and fodder corn, soy beans, cow peas, barley, millet, peas and beans, potatoes and all vegetables, and apples, peaches, pears, plums, cherries, and berries.

NOW IS THE TIME to go and see the lands. The fall planted crops are making their showing and we will take you to the farmers in their fields and you will then better know the possibilities for yourself. My next excursion is Tuesday, May 4th, and the one after that Tuesday, May 18th. We leave my offices at 11:30 a. m. and go by the Pere Marquette R. R. to my headquarters at Wellston. The round trip rate from Chicago is $8.80, and it will be rebated on your purchase of land. Ample accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles and guides will show you over thousands of acres without any charge. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon. Come in and learn all about it.

[illegible] Used Car Buyer—

Dear Sir:—
In again writing you to call your attention to another important fact concerning the purchase of a used car from the Cole Motor Company.

Upon your selection of any of our used cars we are in a position to tell you what you can reasonably expect it to be worth next year, or the year after, or at least what we will allow you for it in trade should you contemplate the purchase of a new car, ordinary wear and tear excepted. In other words, we are willing to give any one contemplating the purchase of an automobile, either new or used, the opportunity to first try out the used car proposition and satisfy themselves whether the used car will answer their purpose or not before having to to spend the new car price.

This does not mean that you have to buy a Cole car in order to avail yourself of this opportunity, because our used car stock is composed of practically every known make, and the Cole car being a standard proposition in every respect, a used car that is worth $500 to us in trade must needs be worth the same amount to other dealers in the same class as the Cole. However, we feel that by giving you this opportunity we will have become better acquainted, and should you decide to purchase a new car you no doubt will give the Cole car your first consideration. For your convenience will be open Sunday all day and evenings by appointment.

Kindly let us hear from you at your earliest convenience while our stock is complete; at least give us a call and let us explain this plan to you in detail.

Yours respectfully,

COLE MOTOR COMPANY,
GENE SILVER,

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

Woods Electrics Cost More to Build and Are Better Value

You get SERVICE out of any car just in proportion to the QUALITY BUILT INTO IT. Better material, better workmanship, and better form of construction—all these combine to make the Woods Electric the MOST SATISFACTORY and DURABLE.

You can save half the cost of your refinished car if you buy now. We have several Woods 1911 models which we are selling at $600 and $700. They give just as good service, run as well, go just as fast and as far as any electric. You save from $400 to $600 on them simply because they haven't the latest style of drive—and few know the difference. You would be proud to own any of these cars. In service value they are equal to cars selling at $1,100 and $1,200.

Remember that the biggest selection and lowest prices, quality considered, are to be had at the Woods factory. Having the only factory in Chicago, we sell the only FACTORY REFINISHED cars that are sold here. Don't forget that—it's important. For any kind of a dependable used electric come and see us.

NOTHING could better illustrate the strength of the real estate market than the manner in which it is standing up under the double handicap of the trouble in the building trades and the disturbed general business conditions. There is, it is true, a slight falling off in the number of transfers going to record as compared with the corresponding period a year ago, when peace and comparative prosperity prevailed; but the present showing is surprisingly good, with a broad market and a good class of properties.

Building keeps up at an astonishing rate, too, the number and cost of the permits running well up to the corresponding period a year ago. Week before last both the number and cost was in excess of the corresponding week a year ago, while last week the showing was almost as good. It looks as if people do not believe the trouble is to be of long duration.

Outside Property Active.

Outside business property cut an especially prominent figure in the week's business, the Lawrence and Kimball avenue district being represented by two transactions which served to illustrate the sensational advance in values there during the last few years. In one instance an advance of from $55 to $400 a foot was shown in five years, while in another instance the sale of a leasehold indicated a leasing value of $54,000, as compared with $7,000 paid for the property six years ago.

The first named transaction was the sale by Herman Goodfriend to Samuel Ladanyi and Emil Reichl of the property at the southeast corner of Lawrence and Bernard avenues, 81x125 feet, improved with a two story white enamel brick building containing three stores, six offices, and a theater. It was sold for a reported consideration of $52,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. In part payment the seller took the flat property at 2736-38 West Division street, valued at $22,000.

Rapid Rise in Value.

The Lawrence avenue property, which is within 200 feet of the terminal of the Ravenswood branch of the Northwestern elevated road, was purchased five years ago for $4,500, was resold within a year for $8,500 and improved with the present building costing $20,000. It was sold to Mr. Goodfriend about six months ago for a reported $45,000, the land going in at $300 a foot. In the present sale it figures at $400. Five years ago the figure was $55. Stafford & Trankle represented Mr. Goodfriend and S. Schakkman & Co. the purchasers.

In the other transaction Alexander W. Hannah sold to Frank A. Rockhold the leasehold estate in the 67x125 feet at the northeast corner of Lawrence and Kimball avenues and the improvements thereon for a reported $30,000.

Mr. Hannah leased the property two years ago from Edward Menkin for ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $2,000. The present improvements, comprising a one story building containing nine stores, are said to have cost about $16,000, so that the price paid, plus the capitalized ground rent, figures about $54,000, or around $800 a front foot for the Lawrence avenue frontage.

It is interesting to note that six years ago this corner sold for $7,000, and was resold three years ago for $10,000. Mr. Hannah took in exchange vacant on Loyola avenue, adjoining the Loyola avenue station of the Northwestern elevated road on the west. It was valued at $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $6,000. Frederick A. Cooper & Co. represented all parties to the transaction.

Good Deal on West Side.

An interesting deal in west side business property was the sale by Ella C. Ellis to Louis M. Polakow of the six story and basement Eureka block, at 710-14 West Madison street, adjoining on the east the Haymarket theater, for a reported consideration of $75,000, Mr. Polakow taking a ninety-nine year lease of the 60x100 feet of ground at an annual rent of $3,500 for the first ten years and $3,850 for the rest of the term. On a 5 per cent capitalized basis the land figures at 1,166 a front foot and $11.66 a square foot. Mr. Polakow gave back a part purchase money mortgage for $48,500. William E. Murawska was the broker.

The four story and basement mercantile building on 50x130 fet of ground, northeast front on Milwaukee avenue, 50 feet south of Chicago avenue, was sold by A. Bernstein to Lola Mann, wife of Dr. Rudolph Mann, for an indicated consideration of $54,000. M. Klein was the broker.

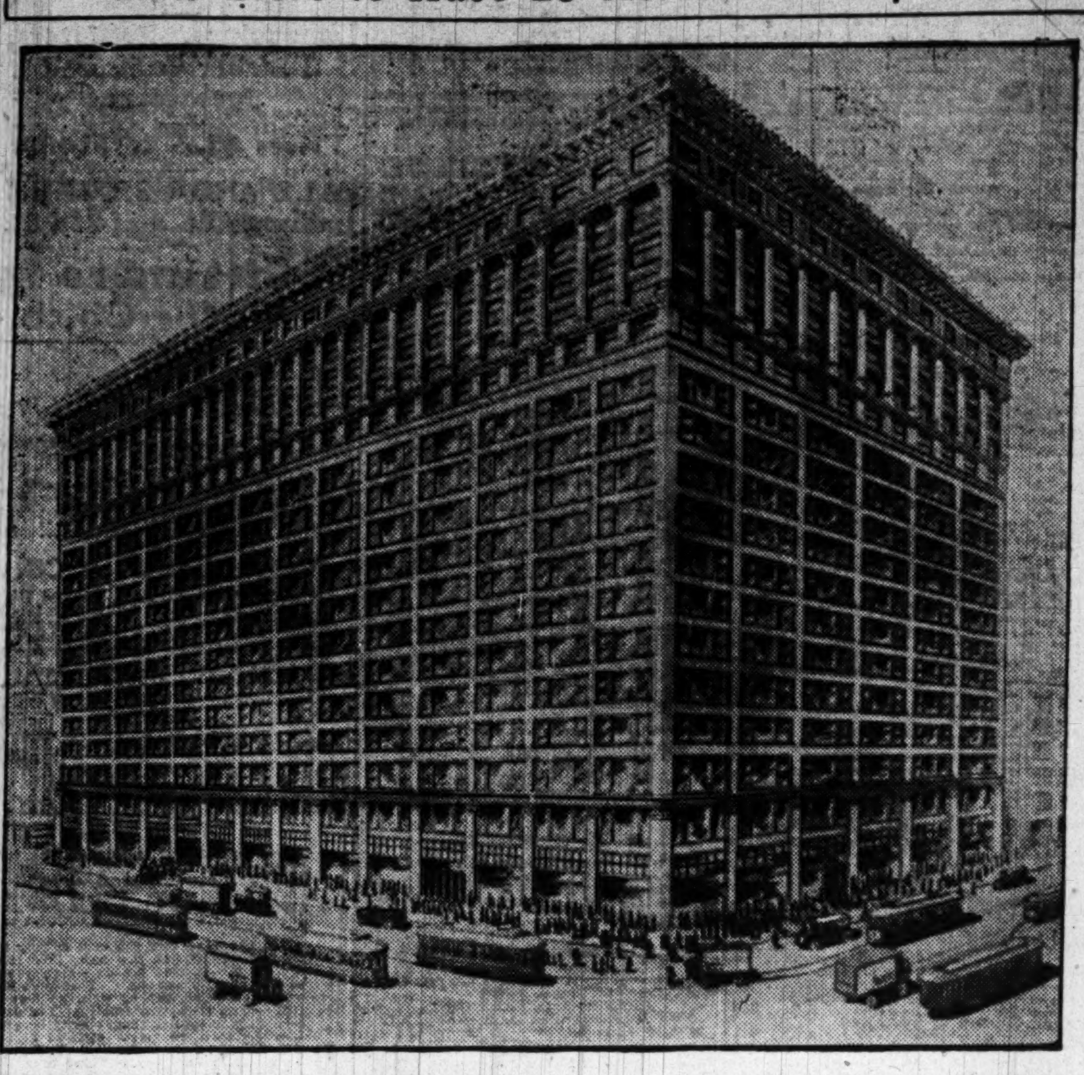
South Side Site Sold.

An interesting transaction in the outlying south side district was the purchase by Paul Steinbrecher of Paul Steinbrecher & Co. of the vacant property at the southwest corner of Halsted and One Hundred and Third streets, 100 feet on the latter and 125 on Halsted street. The consideration is withheld, but the property is said to have been held at $125 a front foot for the One Hundred and Third street frontage.

A syndicate headed by John B. Boyle, associated with Mr. Steinbrecher, also purchased the 125 feet adjoining. The consideration is not disclosed, but the property is said to have been valued at $35 a foot.

These transactions are referred to for the reason this neighborhood has for some time been attracting in a steadily increasing measure the attention of shrewd investors. Some time ago William Preston Harrison, brother of former Mayor Harrison, and Walter McDonald, head of the real estate firm of George G. Newbury & Co., each purchased one of the other corners. The sales just made were negotiated by William G. Booth of William A. Bond & Co.

New Store to Have 25 Acres Floor Space.



The work of wrecking the Champlain building at the northwest corner of State and Madison streets has begun to make room for the final addition to the Boston store. The Champlain building is a fifteen story fireproof steel construction building on 66x106 feet of ground and was erected in 1894 just after the World's fair at a cost of $552,332. The contractors have been allowed only thirty days to complete the wrecking preliminary to the erection of a building in harmony with that occupying all the rest of the block bounded by State, Madison, and Dearborn streets and Calhoun place. Holabird & Roche are the architects. The new building for the Boston store will be the only building in Chicago, it is said, to have girders that span a distance of forty feet on each floor. When the addition is completed the Boston store will be the second largest department store in Chicago. Ten years ago the Boston store occupied an L shaped building with about ninety feet front on State street and forty feet on Madison and had less than two and one-half acres of floor space. The new completed building will have over twenty-five acres of floor space. The building is seventeen stories high. The top of the tank house has been made into an observatory, 325 feet above street level, open to the public. A part of the roof of the building has been converted into a playground for the use of the employés.

BIG APARTMENTS IN GOOD DEMAND THROUGHOUT CITY

Several Sales Closed During Week Involve Costly Building Operations.

An unusually good showing was made last week in large apartment house properties, while several sales closed involved large building operations. The largest apartment house deal reported covered the twenty-four apartment building on 100x175 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Fifty-fourth place and University avenue, having a gross annual rent of about $13,000, which was sold by J. C. Paquet to Samuel Wideroe for an indicated consideration of $100,00, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. In part payment Mr. Paquet took the George W. Jackson residence in Austin and the residence at 6527 Union avenue. E. B. Woolf & Co. represented Mr. Paquet and George W. Stewart represented Mr. Wideroe.

Another noteworthy south side deal covered the four story forty flat Waukesha apartments at the southwest corner of Sixty-fourth street and Harper avenue, which was sold by Miss Gertrude C. Marquette to John Entzminger for an indicated consideration of $63,000, subject to $45,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of $14,100.

Several Properties in Payment.

The purchaser gave several properties in part payment, including the three flat building at 705 Belmont avenue, lot 46x125 feet, subject to an incumbrance of $6,500; also a second mortgage of $14,500 on the property at the northwest corner of Waveland avenue and Osgood street. B. M. Wiedinger represented all the parties to the transaction.

The high grade nine apartment building on Briar place, 193 feet east of Broadway, with 80x135 feet of ground, north front, has been sold by H. H. and W. H. Banford to Alexander M. Ross for an indicated consideration of $55,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $7,000. The sale was negotiated by Stafford & Trankle.

Deal in North Side Flat.

The high grade six apartment building at 4072-74 Sheridan road, between Edgecomb and Crescent places, was sold by De Forrest A. Mattheson and Thomas Tagney to Edith M. West for a reported consideration of $52,000. There are three seven and three eight room apartments, with sun parlors, the building having a gross rental of $8,100.

In part payment the purchaser conveyed a residence in Birchwood valued at $12,000 and a residence on North Park avenue valued at $5,000. The sale was negotiated by Lundstrum, Tonks & Co.

The twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Arthur and Bosworth avenues, with 58x130 feet of ground, has been sold by Norman G. Nicholson to Louise F. Cline. The consideration is withheld, but the transfer is made subject to an incumbrance of $28,000. The building, which has sun parlors in each apartment, is said to have a gross annual rent of about $6,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the three apartment building at 3912 West Jackson boulevard, also the four flat building at 1329-31 Millard avenue. Albert J. Tobey & Co. were the brokers.

36 Apartment Structure Planned

A thirty-six apartment building is to be erected by Christian A. Londelius, the builder, on Woodlawn avenue between Fifty-fourth place and Fifty-fifth street, on ground which he has just purchased from Francis Ryan through E. B. Woolf & Co. The lot is 150x164 feet, east front, and was acquired for a reported consideration of $16,000. The building will be of a high type and is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $125,000. Woolf & Co. will have charge of the building.

A 1,000 seat theater and office building to cost $65,000 is to be erected at 5746-52 Prairie avenue on 76x162 feet of ground which was purchased by the Prairie Amusement company from Daniel Branch for $12,000. Mark Levy & Bro. were the brokers and they resold to Kusel & Harris, who will erect the building. The Prairie company then repurchased the property.

18 Flat Building for South Side.

An eighteen flat building to cost $75,000 on 72x130 feet of ground will be erected at the northeast corner of Fifty-sixth street and Drexel avenue. The ground was purchased by Thomas D. O'Hern from Carl C. Bullock for 10,000.

A transaction of much interest in Broadway vacant in North Edgewater because of the evidence it furnishes of the sharp advance in values in that vicinity was reported. It covers 25x125 feet of inside frontage between Rosedale and Thorndale avenues and was sold by Ellan V. Strandberg to Oscar Wurlitzer for $5,000, or at the rate of $200 a foot. It is stated that only about two years ago the property was purchased for $100 a foot.

The advance is thought to be due to the new station at Thorndale avenue on the Northwestern elevated road, as well as to the steady increase in population in that vicinity.

PLAN COSTLY APARTMENT IN ROGERS PARK DISTRICT.

Announcement is made of an apartment building in the Rogers Park district to cost $600,000. It will contain 108 apartments, wil occupy 150x550 feet of ground on North Clark street, 200 feet north of Kenilworth avenue, and will cost in the neighborhood of $600,000. It is being erected by Turnquist Bros. and was designed by Architect W. A. Nicholson.

This big project serves to call attention to the fact that despite the trouble in the building trades building operations, as indicated by the permits issued by the city building department, are practically up to those for the corresponding period a year ago. Thus for week before last there were issued 147 permits, to cost $2,229,300, as compared with 139 permits, to cost $1,691,500, for the corresponding week a year ago, a remarkable showing.

Last week's showing was almost as good with 157 permits costing $1,515,800, as against 163 costing $1,697,600 for the corresponding week a year ago.

Real Estate Transfers.

An encouraging showing was made in the matter of business building leases, an unusual number of important transactions being reported, involving buildings in the downtown district, as well as outside. There also was an important lease of west side factory building space.

The feature in the downtown district was a series of State street leases reported by E. F. Keebler & Co. involving aggregate rentals of about $500,000, in one of which they leased for Clarence A. Burley and V. C. Sanborn, representing the estate of J. M. W. Jones, the four story and basement building at 310-314 South State street on the west side of the street, between Jackson boulevard and Van Buren street, to a lessee whose name is withheld for a term of ten years from May 1 next, at a reported term rent of $275,000.

The property is 50x100 feet. Keebler & Co. have subleased to D. Lelewer & Son the store and basement at 310 State street for ten years from May 1 at a reported term rent of $130,000, to be occupied as a hat store.

The same brokers also have leased to the John R. Thompson company for lunch room purposes the store and basement at 314 South State street for ten years from May 1, at a reported term rent of $120,000.

They also have leased for the Thompson company to the W. R. Eagle Cigar company the store at 22 West Randolph street on a temporary lease at an annual rent of $3,600.

Another important lease comprises the store at 32 North Clark street, in the New Conway building, at Washington and Clark streets, which has been leased by James A. Hool of John R. Magill & Co. for the Marshall Field estate, to J. T. Newmark, trading as "Hatter Newmark," for ten years from May 1, at a reported term rent of $70,000. The store is about 16 feet wide by 60 feet deep, also facing on the rotunda.

It will be the second store which Mr. Newmark has opened in Chicago, the other being the corner store of the National City Bank building at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets.

The west side lease comprised the large manufacturing plant at the southwest corner of Union and Twenty-second streets, consisting of several buildings of two and three stories, with ground dimensions of about 700x60 feet, and having about 100,000 square feet of floor space, which was leased by United States Senator H. A. Du Pont of Delaware to the Gold Furniture company and the Western Picture Frame company for a reported term rent of $150,000.

The buildings, which were erected about four years ago for the Excelsior Motor Manufacturing company, were considered a model manufacturing plant and was known as a "daylight plant," owing to its narrow width, which permitted of an abundance of light. The lease was negotiated by Higo D. Loeb, who represented both parties to the transaction.

Burt W. Marx has closed leases in the building at 6236-38 South Halsted street for reported aggregate term rents of over $102,000. He has leased for Alfred Shaw to Florence Major the upper floors for term rent of $33,000; to the Famous restaurant a store on the main floor for a reported term rent of $30,000; to the Englewood Talking Machine shop a store on the main floor for a term rent of $18,000, and to the Kaufman Hat stores a store for a reported term rent of $21,000. E. B. Beatty was associated in the deal.

The Sorosis Shoe company of Lynn, Mass., has leased the store at 69 East Madison street in the Mallers building for ten years from May 1 at a reported term rent of $73,500. Frank J. Murnighan, associated with J. B. Mallers Jr., negotiated the lease.

White & Tabor have leased for Harris Whittemore to the Hamilton Rubber Manufacturing company the store and basement at 1229-31 South Michigan avenue, at $35,000 for the term. For the Childs company the second floor of the building now in course of construction at 167 West Madison street to Frank W. Alter at $33,000. For Sweet, Wallach & Co. to Powell Bros. & Le Vin, the second floor of 139 North Wabash avenue for a period of years at a rental of $34,000.

George S. Lurie & Co. have leased for the American Express company to J. A. Albert and William H. Wecker, the store floor and basement at 322 South Wabash avenue, at a rental of $38,000 for the term. Messrs. Albert & Wecker will occupy the premises as a furniture store.

Paul C. Loeber & Co. have rented for the Lathan Machinery company to the Wagner & Hanson company the third floor of the building at the southeast corner of Fulton and Ann streets at a term rental of $37,500.

BIG SALE ON THE SOUTH SIDE

A big sale of south side vacant involving contemplated improvements amounting to $140,000 has been closed by Frank H. Lang. It comprises the purchase by Edward I. Bloom from Alvin H. Reed of 200x170 feet at the northwest corner of Yates boulevard and Seventieth street. The consideration is withheld, but it is stated the price was around $175 a foot. It is stated Mr. Bloom, who is an extensive builder, plans ultimately to improve with three apartment buildings on each fifty feet of ground, the aggregate cost to be around $140,000. The property overlooks the lake and faces the South Shore Country club grounds.

SCHOOL BOARD MAY TEST FIXING PROPERTY VALUE

Low Appraisement of Sites Causes Protest Against Methods Used.

As was to be expected, the report of the appraisers in connection with the decennial valuation of school board properties has aroused an unusual amount of interest in which both sharp criticism and approval are freely mingled. Naturally members of the school board are disappointed at the low range of the valuations, while the lessees, with the exception of those interested in the west side leaseholds, are correspondingly pleased.

It is said the lease committee of the board has instructed Attorney Angus Roy Shannon to give an opinion as to the legality of the action of the appraisers in arriving at the valuations with the purpose of contesting the findings of the appraisers if in his opinion there is good cause for so doing.

Criticism of Methods.

The criticism directed against the appraisers is not so much on account of the low valuations as it is at the methods followed in the matter, particularly what is called "psychological deductions," in which business depression figures conspiculously as the cause for lopping off 10 per cent or more in some valuations.

Members of the board as well as a good many real estate men are not disposed to accept this line of reasoning as conclusive. In this connection it is pointed out that if business conditions are to be considered as a cause for a reduction the appraisers are strangely inconsistent in reducing valuations on State street and practically doubling them on the Halsted and Madison street and Jackson boulevard properties.

Defined Their Findings.

On the other hand, Appraiser Winston and his associates assert that the "business depression" matter was only an incident in connection with a thorough and careful examination of all possibly obtainable facts bearing on the value of the properties in question. It is asserted the best possible opinion was sought from a variety of sources, and that for the board to have ignored conditions of a business character in reaching its conclusions would have resulted in great hardship to business interests.

There are, too, many real estate men who look upon the appraisal as a generally good one under all the circumstances.

Thinks Result Is Fair.

Frederick S. Oliver of Oliver & Co., who has had much experience in connection with the State street properties, says: "For the purpose for which the appraisement was made I am of the opinion, as to the State street lots in particular, although only a raise of 3 per cent was made in the aggregate value, that the result is most fair, not only to the board of education but to the lessees."

The State street lots were given an average value of $112 a square foot, the McVicker property on Madison street $74, and the Dearborn street properties $72. The sharp advance made in the values of west side properties was necessary, it is said, because of the much too low valuations made at the previous appraisal.
